AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEVINE BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jos' so P—" Exactly P—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "cowby" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" " " I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" " " I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. " " The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

" " " I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. " " " The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 354 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. NEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Dennis Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do.
It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

Poetry.

For the Examiner.

Who will Show us any Good.

Lines to a Friend.

This is a question asked by all,
The old, the young, the fool, the sage,
In lowly cot, and lordly hall;
'Tis history's text and this page,
The thunders of its echoes fall
In every clime and every age
The fervent groanings of the mind,
For shelter'd footing on the wind.

And has it still been asked in vain?
Is man the child of chance and gloom?
Do woes, like clouds, above him reign,
Dea'ning fr m the cradle to the tomb;
And passion's victim still remain
Without one beam of heaven to illume,
And streak the shades that gather round
The hopes that fade as soon as found?

Ambition leads, with fiery eye,
The hannered host of serried spears;
Though millions weep, and thousands die,
'Tis victory's shout alone he hears,
Leaves cities blazing to the sky,
And steeps the earth with blood and tears;
He wins a world he cannot keep,
And joyless still, sits down to weep.

The statesman climbs the slippery steep,
'Mid withering toil and care for men
Who pay in malice. He may reap
An epitaph from history's pen,
Ay, fame may come, but he will sleep,
And will its sounds avail him then?
His smiles are but the tricks of art,
Peace pillows not his aching heart.

Science, awake with sleepless eye,
Has span'd the earth, and measur'd heaven;
Brought bright revealings from the sky,
From stars that frat the roof of even,
And thousands more that wheel on high,
Whose light to earth has ne'er been given;
Our quenchless longings may not pause
On nature's cold material laws.

Oh! who will show us any good,
The question round the world rings;
From court, and hall, and solitude,
Each bites a tinselled broidery flings;
And with blank smiles the world is woo,
To fix all hopes on transient things;
The morning's dawn that flets away
The rainbow's hue, the meteor's play.

Why weary thus thy soul with earth—
The theatre of guilt and crime?
Laugh in the madness of thy mirth?
'Tis tinged with death, like all of time;
Seek pleasures of immortal birth,
Rise on the wing of hope sublime,
And seek repose, to suit the soul,
In Him who made and rules the whole.

The Painter of Rotterdam.

BY MISS AMELIA B. EDWARDS.

My father was a trader and distiller at Schiedam, on the Maas. Without being wealthy, we enjoyed the means of procuring every social comfort. We gave and received visits from a few old friends, we went occasionally to the theatre, and my father had his tulip garden and summer house at a little distance from Schiedam, on the banks of the canal which connects the town with the river.

But my father and mother, whose only child I was, cherished one dream of ambition, a which, fortunately, my own tastes led me to participate; they wanted me to become a painter. 'Let me but see a picture of Frank Linden in the gallery of Rotterdam,' said my father, 'and I shall die happy.' So, at fourteen years of age I was removed from school and placed in the classes of Messer Kesler, an artist living at Delft. Here I made such progress that by the time I had reached my nineteenth birthday I was transferred to the atelier of Hans van Roos, a descendant of the celebrated family of that time. Van Roos was not more than thirty-eight or forty years of age and had already acquired considerable reputation as a painter of portraits and sacred subjects. There was an alter-piece of his in one of our finest churches; his works had occupied the place of honor for the past six years at the annual exhibition; and for portraiture, he numbered among his patrons most of the wealthy merchants and burgomasters of the city. Indeed, there could be no question that my master was rapidly acquiring a fortune commensurate with his popularity.

Still he was not a cheerful man. It was whispered by the pupils that he had met with a disappointment early in life—that he had loved, been accepted, and on the eve of marriage was rejected by the lady for a more wealthy suitor. He came from Friesland, in the north of Holland, when a very young man. He had always been the same gloomy, pallid, labor-loving citizen. He was a rigid Calvinist. He was sparing of domestic expenditure, and liberal to the poor. This every one could tell you and no one knew more.

The number of his pupils was limited to six. He kept us constantly at work, and scarcely permitted us to exchange a word with each other during the day. Standing there among us so silently, with the light pouring down upon his pallid face, and becoming absorbed in the sombre folds of his long black dressing-gown, he looked almost like some stern old portrait himself. To tell the truth we were all somewhat afraid of him. Not that he assumed any undue authority; on the contrary, he was stately, silent, and frigidly polite; but his politeness had in it something oppressive, and we were all happier out of his presence. None of us resided under his roof. I had a second floor in a neighboring street, and two of my fellow students occupied rooms in the same house. We used to meet at night in each other's chambers, and made excursions to the exhibitions and theatres; and sometimes, on a summer's evening, we would hire a pleasure boat and row for a mile or two down the river. We were merry enough then, and not quite so silent, I promise you, as in the gloomy studio of Hans Van Roos.

In the meantime, I was anxious to glean every benefit from my master's instructions. I improved rapidly, and my paintings soon excelled those of the other five. My taste did not incline to the sacred subjects like that of Van Roos, but rather to the familiar, rural style of Berghem and Paul Potter. It was my great delight to wander along the rich pasture lands; to watch an amber sunset, the herds going home to the dairy, the hazy meadmills, and the calm, clear water of the canals scarcely ruffled by the passage of the public turbaksnegt. In depicting scenes of this nature—

The slow canal, the yellow-blossomed vale—
The willow tufted bank, the gliding sail—

I was singularly fortunate. My master never praised me by word or look; but when my father came up one day from Rotterdam to visit, he said to him in a tone inaudible to the rest, that 'Master Frank would do credit to the profession;' which so delighted the good distiller that he straightway took me out with him for the day, and, having given me fifteen gold pieces as a testimonial of his satisfaction, took me to dine with his friend the burgomaster, Von Gael. It was an eventful visit for me. On that evening I first fell in love.

Few people, I think, would at that time have denied the personal attractions of Gertrude von Gael; yet I do not know that it was so much her features as her soft voice and gentle, womanly grace that fascinated me. Though so young, she performed the honors of her father's princely table with self-possession and good breeding. In the evening she sang some sweet German songs to her own simple accompaniment. We talked of books and of poetry. I found her well read in English, French, and German literature. We spoke of art; and she discovered both judgment and enthusiasm.

As we took our leave at night, the burgomaster shook me warmly by the hand, and told me to come often. I fancied that Gertrude's blue eyes brightened when he said it and I felt the color rush quickly to my brow as I bowed and thanked him.

'Franz,' said my father, when we were once more in the street, 'how old are you?'

'Just twenty-two, sir,' I replied, rather surprised at the question.

'You will not be dependent on your brush, my boy,' continued my father, as he leaned upon my arm and looked back at the lofty mansion we had just left. 'I have been neither wasteful nor unsuccessful, and it will be my pride to leave you a respectable income at my death.'

I inclined my head in silence, and wondered what would come next.

'Burgomaster von Gael is one of my oldest friends,' said my father.

'I have often heard you speak of him, sir,' I replied.

'And he is rich.'

'So I should suppose.'

'Gertrude will have a fine fortune,' said my father, as if thinking aloud.

I bowed again, but this time rather nervously.

'Marry her, Franz.'

I dropped his arm and started back.

'Sir!' I faltered, 'I—I marry the Fraulein von Gael?'

'And pray, sir, why not?' said my father, curtly, stopping short in his walk and leaning both hands upon the top of his walking stick.

'Why not, sir?' repeated my father, very energetically. 'What could you wish for better? The young lady is handsome, good tempered, educated, rich. Now, Franz, if I thought you had been such a fool as to form any other attachment without—'

'Oh sir, you do me injustice!' I cried. 'But do you think that—that she would have me?'

'Try her, Franz,' said my father, good-humoredly, as he resumed my arm. 'If I am not very much mistaken, the burgomaster would be as well pleased as myself; and as for the Frauilen—women are easily won.'

We had by this time reached the door of the inn where my father was to sleep for the night. As he left me his last words were:

'Try her, Frans—try her.'

From this time I became a frequent visitor at the house of the Burgomaster von Gael. It was a large, old fashioned mansion, built of red brick, and situated upon the famous line of houses known as the Boompjes. In front lay the broad river covered with merchant vessels, from whose masts fluttered the flags of all the trading nations in the world. Tall trees, thick with foliage, lined the quay, and the sunlight flickered through the leaves upon the spacious drawing-rooms of Gertrude's home.

Here, night after night, when the studies of the day were over, I used to sit with her beside the open window, watching the busy crowd beneath, the rippling river, and the rising moon that tipped the masts and city spires with silver. Here we read together from the first pale stars that trembled into light.

It was a happy time. But there came at last a time still happier, when one still evening, as we sat alone, conversing in unfrequent whispers, and listening to the beating of each other's hearts, I told Gertrude that I loved her; and she, in answer, laid her fair head upon my shoulder with a sweet confidence, as if content so to rest forever. Just as my father had predicted, the burgomaster readily sanctioned our betrothal, specifying but one condition, and this was that our marriage should not take place till I had attained my twenty-fifth year. It was a long time to wait; but I should by that time, perhaps, have made a name in my profession. I intended soon to send a picture to the annual exhibition—and who could tell what I might not do in three years, to show Gertrude how dearly I loved her?

And so our happy youth rolled on, and the quaint old dial in the Messer von Gael's garden told the passage of our golden hours. In the meantime I worked sedulously at my picture. I labored upon it all the winter; and when spring time came I sent it in, with no small anxiety as to its probable position upon the walls of the gallery. It was a view in one of the streets of Rotterdam. There were the high, old houses with their gables and carved door-ways, and the red sunset glittering on the panes of the upper windows, the canal flowing down the centre of the street, the white drawbridge, with a barge just passing underneath, the green trees deep in the shadow, and the spire of the church of St. Lawrence rising beyond against the clear, warm sky. When it was finished and about to be sent away, even Hans Van Roos nodded a cold encouragement and said that it deserved a good position. He had himself prepared a painting this year on a more ambitious scale and a larger canvas than usual. It was a sacred subject, and represented the Conversion of St. Paul. His pupils admired it warmly, and none more than myself. We all pronounced it to be his masterpiece, and the artist was evidently of our opinion.

The day of the exhibition came at last. I had scarcely slept the previous night, and the early morning found me with a number of students, waiting impatiently before the yet unopened door. When I arrived it wanted an hour to the time, but half the day seemed to elapse before we heard the heavy bolts give way and the door, and then forced our way through the narrow barriers. I had flown up the staircase, and found myself in the first room before I remembered that I should have purchased a catalogue at the door. I had not patience, however, to go back for it; so I strode round and round the room, looking eagerly for my picture. It was no where to be seen, and I passed on to the next. Here my search was equally unsuccessful.

'It must be in the third room,' I said to myself, 'where all the best works are placed! Well, if it be hung ever so high, or in ever so dark a corner, it is, at all events, an honor to have one's picture in the third room!'

But, though I spoke so bravely, it was with a sinking heart I ventured in. I could not really hope for a good place among the magnates of the art; while in either of the other rooms there had been a possibility that my picture might receive a tolerable position.

The house had formerly been the mansion of a merchant of enormous wealth, who had left it, with his valuable collection of paintings, to the state. The third room had been his reception chamber and the space over the magnificently carved chimney was assigned, as the place of honor, to the best painting. The painter of this picture always received a costly prize for which it was likewise indebted to the magnificence of the founder. To this spot my eyes were naturally turned as I entered the door.—Was I dreaming? I stood still—I turned hot and cold by turns—I ran forward. It was an illusion. There was my picture, my own picture, in its little modest frame, installed in the chief place of the gallery! And there, too, was the official card stuck in the corner, with the words, 'Prize Painting,' printed upon it in shining gold letters. I ran down the staircase and bought a catalogue, that my eyes might be gladdened by the confirmation of this joy; and there, sure enough was printed at the commencement, 'Annual Prize Painting—View of Rotterdam, No. 127—Franz Linden.' I could have wept for delight. I was never tired of looking at my picture. I walked from one side to the other, I retreated, I advanced closer to it, I looked at it in every possible light, and forgot all but my happiness.

'A very charming little painting, sir,' said a voice at my elbow.

It was an elderly gentleman, with gold spectacles and an umbrella. I colored up and said falteringly:

'Do you think so?'

'I do sir,' said the old gentleman. 'I am an amateur—I am very fond of pictures. I presume that you are also an admirer of art?'

I bowed.

'Very nice little painting, indeed; very nice,' he continued, as he wiped his glasses and adjusted them with the air of a connoisseur. 'Waters very liquid, colors pure, sky transparent, prospective admirable.—I'll buy it.'

'Will you?' I exclaimed, joyfully. 'Oh, thank you, sir!'

'Oh,' said the old gentleman, turning suddenly upon me and smiling kindly, "so you are the artist, are you? Happy to make your acquaintance, Master Linden. You are a very young man to paint such a picture as that. I congratulate you, sir; and—I'll buy it.'

So we exchanged cards, shook hands, and became the best of friends in the world. I was burning with impatience to see Gertrude, and tell her all my good fortune; but my new patron took my arm, and said that he must make the tour of the rooms in my company; so I was forced to comply.

We stopped before a large painting that occupied the next best situation to mine; it was my master's work—the Conversion of St. Paul. While I was telling him of my studies in the atelier of the painter, a man started from before us, and glided away; but not before I had recognized the pale countenance of Van Roos. There was something in the expression of his face that shocked me—something that stopped my breath and made me shudder. What was it? I scarcely knew; but the glare of his dark eyes and the quivering passion of his lip haunted me for the rest of the day, and came back again in my dreams. I said nothing of it to Gertrude that afternoon, but it had effectually sobered my exultation. I dreaded, next day, to return to the studio; I sat, to my surprise, my master received me as he never had received me before. He advanced, and extended his hand to me.

'Welcome, Franz Linden,' he said smiling, 'I am proud to call you my pupil.'

The hand was cold, the voice was harsh, the smile was passionless. My companions crowded round and congratulated me; and in the warm tones of their young, cheerful voices, and the pressure of their friendly hands, I forgot all that had troubled me in the manner of Van Roos.

Not long after this event Gertrude's father desired to have her portrait painted, to console him for her absence, he said, when I should be so wicked as to take her away from him. I recommended my old master, whose tutelage I had recently left; and Van Roos was commanded to fulfil a task that I would gladly have performed had it been in my power to do so. But portraiture was not my line. I could paint a clock, spotted cow, or a drove of sheep, far better than the fair skin and golden curls of my darling Gertrude.

She could not endure the artist from the first. In vain I reasoned with her—all was of no use; and she used to say, at the end of every such conversation, that she wished the portrait was finished, as I that she could no more help disliking him than—than she could help loving me. So our arguments always ended with a kiss.

But this portrait took a long time. Van Roos was in general a rapid painter; yet Gertrude's tiresome progressed at a very slow pace, and like Penelope's web seemed never to be completed. One morning I happened to be in the room—a rare event at that time, for I was hard at work upon my new landscape; and I was struck with the change that had come over my late master. He was no longer the same man. There was a light in his eye and a vibration in his voice that I had never observed before; and when he rose to take leave there was a studied courtesy in his bow and manner that took me quite by surprise.

Still I never suspected the truth, and still the portrait was as far as ever from being finished.

It came out at least, and one morning Hans Van Roos made a formal offer of his hand and heart. Of course it was refused.

'But as kindly as possible, dear Franz,' she said, when she told me in the evening; 'because he is your friend, and because he seemed to feel it so deeply. And—and you don't know how dreadfully white he turned, and how he tried to restrain his tears. I pitied him, Franz—indeed, I was sorry.'

And the gentle creature could scarcely keep from weeping herself as she told me.

I did not see Van Roos for some months after this discourse. At least I met him accidently in front of the St. Sithouse, and to my surprise for the second time in his life he held out his hand.

'A good day to you Messer Linden,' said he, 'I hear that you are on the high road to fame and fortune."

'I have been very prosperous, Messer Van Roos,' I replied, taking the proffered hand. 'But I never forget that I owe my present proficiency to the hours spent in your atelier.'

A peculiar expression flitted over his face.

'If I thought that,' said he, hastily, 'I—I should esteem myself particularly happy.'

There was so odd a difference in the way in which he uttered the beginning and end of his sentences—so much hurry and passion in the first half, such deliberate politeness in the last, that I started and looked him full in the face. He was as smiling and impenetrable as a marble statue.

'I too have been fortunate,' he said, after a moment's pause. 'Have you seen the new church lately built near the east end of the Haring-vliet?'

I replied that I had observed it in passing, but had not been inside.

'I have been intrusted,' he said, 'with the superintendence on the interior decorations. My "Conversation of St. Paul" is purchased for the altar piece, and I am now engaged in painting a series of frescoes upon the ceiling. Will you come in some day and give me your opinion on them?'

I professed myself much flattered, and appointed to visit him in the church on the following morning. He was waiting for me at the door when I arrived, with the heavy keys in his hand. We passed in and he turned the key in the lock.

'I always secure myself against intruders,' he said smiling. 'People will come into the church if I leave the door unfastened, and I do not choose to carry on my art, like a sign-painter, in the presence of every blockhead who chooses to stand and stare at me.'

It was surprising in what a disagreeable manner this man showed his teeth when he smiled.

The church was a handsome building, in the Italian style which imitates the antique, and prefers grace and magnificence to the dignified sanctity of the Gothic order. A row of elegant Corinthian columns supported the roof at each side of the nave; gilding and decorative cornices were lavished in every direction; the gorgeous alter-piece already occupied its appointed station; and a little to the left of the railed space where the communion table was to be placed, a lofty scaffolding was erected, that seemed, from where I stood, almost to come in contact with the roof, and above which I observed the yet unfinished sketch of a masterly fresco. Three or four more, already completed, were stationed at regular intervals, and some others were merely outlined in charcoal upon their intended site.

'Will you not come up with me?' asked the painter, when I had expressed my admiration sufficiently; 'or are you afraid of turning giddy,?'

I felt somewhat disinclined to impose this trial on my nerves, but still more disinclined to confess it; so I followed him up from flight to flight of the frail structure, without once daring to look down.

At last we reached the summit; as I had supposed, there was not even room enough for the artist to assume a sitting posture, and he had to paint while lying on his back. I had no fancy to extend myself on this lofty couch; so I only lifted my head above the level of his flooring, looked at the fresco, and descended immediately to the flight below, where I waited till he rejoined me.

'How dangerous it must be,' said I, shuddering, 'to let yourself down from that abominable perch.'

'I used to think so at first,' he replied, 'but now I am quite accustomed to it.—Fancy,' said he, approaching close to the edge of the scaffolding—'fancy falling from here to the church below.'

'Horrible!' cried I.

'I wonder how high it is from the level of the pavement,' continued Van Roos, musingly, 'a hundred and eighty feet, I dare say perhaps two hundred.'

I drew back giddy at the thought.

'No man could survive such a fall,' said the painter, still looking over. 'The thickest skull would be dashed to atoms on the marble down there.'

'Pray, come away,' said I, hastily.—'My head swims at the very idea.'

'Does it?' said he, turning suddenly upon me, with the voice and eye of a fiend—'does it? Fool?' he added, as he seized me round the body in his iron grasp—'fool, to trust yourself here with me—me whom you have wronged, robbed like you have insulted—me whom you have trained in fame and in love. Down, wretch, down! I've vowed to have your blood, and my time has come.'

It sickens me even now to recall that desperate struggle. At the first word I had sprung back and caught at the beam above my head. He strove to tear me from it. He foamed at the mouth; the veins rose like knots upon his forehead; and still—though I felt my wrists crushed and my fingers cruelly lacerated—still I held on with the terrible energy of one who struggled for dear life. It lasted a long time—at least it seemed long to me—and the scaffold rocked beneath our feet. At last I saw his strength failing. Suddenly I loosened my hold and threw my whole weight upon him. He staggered, he shrieked, he fell.

I dropped upon my face in mute horror. An age of silence seemed to elapse, and the cold dews stood upon my brow. Presently I heard a dull sound far below. I crawled to the brink of the scaffolding and looked over. A shapeless mass was lying on the marble pavement, and all around it was red with blood.

I think an hour must have elapsed before I could summon courage to descend.—When at length I reached the level ground, I turned my face from what was so near my feet, and tottered to the door. With trembling hands and misty eyes I unlocked it and rushed into the street.

It was many months before I recovered from the brain fever brought on by that terrible day. My ravings I have been told, were fearful; and had any doubt existed in the minds of men as to which of us two had been the guilty one, those ravings were alone sufficient to establish my innocence. A man in a delirous fever is pretty sure to speak the truth. By the time I was able to leave my chamber, Gertrude also had grown pale and spiritless, and all was like her former self. Rotterdam was insupportable to me. I found myself a hero of romance—a lion—a thing to be stared at wherever I went; all of which only served to shatter my nerves still more. In short, change of air and scene was recommended for us both; so we thought we could not do better than marry and take our wedding tour for the sake of our healths. And I assure you, reader, it did us both a great deal of good.

The Philosophy of Long Life.

But few men die of age. Almost all die of disappointment, pessional, mental, or of bodily toil, or accident. The pessimus kill men sometimes, even suddenly. The common expression', has little exaggeration in it; for even though not suddenly fatal, strong passions shorten life. Strong-bodied men often die young—weak men live longer than the strong, for the strong use their strength, and the weak have none to use. The latter take care of themselves; the former do not. As it is with the body, so it is with the mind and temper. The strong are apt to break or, like a candle to 'run;' the weak burn out. The inferior in animals, which live, in general, regular and temperate lives, have generally their prescribed term of years. The horse lives about twenty-five years; the ox fifteen or twenty; the dog ten or twelve; the lion, we are told, about twenty. The duration of life in all these bear a similar proportion to the time the animal takes to grow to its full size. But man, of all the animals, is the one that seldom comes to his average. He ought to live a hundred years, according to this physiological law; but instead of that he scarcely reaches on the average, four times his growing period; the cat six times and the rabbit even eight times the standard of measurement. The reason for all this obvious. Man is not only the most irregular and the most intemperate, but the most laborious and hard-working of all animals.

He is also irritable of animals: and there in reason to believe—though we cannot tell what any animal secretly feels—that, more than any other animal, man cherishes wrath to keep him warm, and consumes himself with the fire of his own secret reflections. Besides this, man is the only animal that makes a wide departure from those laws of nature which control life.—He takes to sedentary and healthy-destroying habits, carrying them to the verge of the grave, and clinging to them with a tenacity which yields not even to his better judgement. The lower order of animals never do this. Instinct is their guide, and the superior duration of life they enjoy is proof of the folly of man.

Common place people get through life more easily and more pleasantly than the speculators of any sort. They sail forever on a summer sea, with just enough of the cloud and the breeze to diversify their voyage. They never, to be sure, see the tempest in its power—the lightning more vivid than the day, and the thunder like a voice from heaven, and louder than the cries of Sicilian Etna; but they hear music in the passing breeze, and they bask in the idle sunshine, and they are lulled by the scarcely undulating waters to sleep—and this is quite enough for them. They are not fashioned for the reception of rough impression.

Four fast young men, the sons of gentlemen of wealth were brought before a police magistrate, who inquired what their bad course of life could be ascribed to. Most probably to their four fathers.

Why are all games of chess of equal duration?—Because it always takes four knights to play a game.

Upper Canada Separate School Bill.

The following are the provisions of Mr. Bell's Upper Canada Separate School Bill, as given in the Globe :—

Section 1. In cities and towns the Municipality shall, if so requested in writing by the chairman of the board of Separate Schools of such city or town, collect annually the Separate School rates and assessments, and for that purpose shall insert the rates of assessments in a separate column of the collector's rolls for such city or town, and the collector shall, from time to time, so soon as such rates and assessments are collected, pay over the same to the Treasurer of the Board of such Separate Schools; but nothing in this clause shall prevent such Separate School Trustees from collecting their own taxes, as by law is now provided, if they desire so to do.

2. Roman Catholic Separate School rates and assessments shall form a lien upon real estate, against which the same shall be assessed, and, in default of the collection of the same by the collector, in the usual way, all arrears unpaid shall be collected by the sale of such lands in the usual way, as directed by law in the cases of unpaid municipal taxes; but this provision shall not apply to any arrears of rates or assessments which may have become due previous to the first day of January last past.

3. Non-resident land-owners, being Roman Catholics, may, in the usual way, become supporters of separate schools, and, in such case, the rates assessed against their lands shall go to the funds of the Separate School in which such lands are situated.

4. The Common School Trustees of any municipality shall alone have the power of levying taxes on the lands and real estate of incorporate companies, but they shall annually pay over to the trustees of the Roman Catholic Separate Schools a proportion of all the taxes levied by them such companies in the same ratio as the Government grant for the same year shall have been divided between them; and the proportion of taxes so levied for the building of school-houses and for the payment of debts, thus paid over to the Roman Catholic trustees aforesaid, shall be set apart by them for the building or the repairing of their own school-houses.

5. The seventeenth section of the said Act 26th Vic., chap. 5—shall be amended by adding thereto the following words:—"Provided always that such rates are levied 6 months from the date of the receipt, by the clerk of the municipality of the notice of the establishment of such Separate School."

6. There shall be established in Upper Canada, in such places as the Governor in Council shall select a Normal School in connection with the Roman Catholic Separate Schools, and a Fund of Upper Canada, bearing the same proportion to the amount annually granted to the Normal School in Toronto, as the Roman Catholic population bears to the Protestant population in Upper Canada, according to the then last census.

7. That all Provincial grants for superior education, comprising Universities, Classical and Industrial Colleges, Grammar Schools and Seminaries, shall be annually divided between the Protestant and Roman Catholic institutions, in proportion to their respective Protestant and Catholic populations.

8. There shall be appointed a Roman Catholic Deputy Superintendent of schools in Upper Canada, whose duty shall be exclusively limited to such schools, and whose salary shall be fixed by the Governor in Council, and shall be paid out of the funds set apart for the support of the Education office, which said Deputy Superintendent shall have the general supervision of the Roman Catholic separate schools of Upper Canada.

9. There shall be appointed by the Governor in Council three additional members of the Council of Public Instruction of Upper Canada, to be chosen from among the Roman Catholic Bishops of Upper Canada, Principals or Professors of the Roman Catholic Colleges and Universities of Upper Canada.

10. Whenever the Catholic members of the Council of Public Instruction for Upper Canada, shall be of opinion that the management of the Roman Catholic Separate Schools should be distinct and separate from the common schools, they may make known that opinion under their respective signatures to the Governor, through the Provincial Secretary.

11. Within three months after the receipt of said opinion by the Governor, an order in council shall be passed dividing the management of the schools in Upper Canada, and giving to the Catholic Deputy Superintendent of Education the management of the Separate Schools in the same manner as they now are under the management of the Chief Superintendent of Education.

12. Within the above mentioned three months the said Catholic members shall transmit to the Government the names of three persons qulified to be Deputy Superintendent, and the Deputy Superintendent shall be appointed out of the above 3 persons, and shall have within his jurisdiction powers and duties similar to those given to and imposed upon the Superintendent of Education.

13. From the date of the said order in Council, all the said Catholic members shall cease to be members of the Council of Public Instruction for Upper Canada, and the said Catholic members, together with the Roman Catholic Superintendent, shall form for the Separate Schools a Council similar to the Council of Public Instruction, and said Council shall have within its jurisdiction powers and duties similar to those given to and imposed upon the said Council of Public Instruction.

14. From and after the said three months, or so soon after as may be convenient, the Provincial aid shall be annually divided as follows, viz:—The portion appropriate for Common Schools shall be divided in the same manner and according to the same principles as are followed at the present moment, and the balance of said Provincial aid shall be divided between the Roman Catholic and Protestant population according to the then last census; and the expenses of the Roman Catholic and Protestant Educational Departments, respectively, shall be paid out of the corresponding share in said Provincial aid.

15. The seventh section of this Act shall not come into force until that part of the Province of Canada known as Upper Canada, shall become a separate Province and have a separate Government.

16. This Act is a public Act.

This Act has been abandoned.

THE SCHOOL BILL.—The Herald says, rumors strong from Ottawa that Mr. Galt only succeeded in getting his promised school bill taken up to the Government by measure by the threat of resignation if that was not done. But it is also said that the concession when made was accompanied by the understanding that the government was to do all it could, without compromising its existence as a Government, or the seats of individual members, to carry an extension of the separate system in Upper Canada.—This explains the introduction of Mr. Bell's bill for that purpose.

NOW MATTERS GO.

Already we have drawn the attention of our readers to the way matters proceed at the capital, and in our remarks pointed out the indifference of the government to the carrying out of the great object of the present coalition government, namely, Confederation. We are glad to find, however, that the whole course of the government is not likely to be without strong opposition. This government deserves the least now at the hands of the people of any preceeding one. They were allowed to strengthen themselves by a coalition in order to obtain a settlement of the difficulties that so agitated the country and had almost brought matters to a dead-lock; but just as soon as they find themselves strong enough, and the representatives very unwilling to do anything that might endanger Confederation, the government takes advantage of the calm to force upon the country an injurious tariff, and a still more infamous Bank of Issue, which all unite in declaring will prove prejudical to trade generally, but especially to the trade of Upper Canada, by curtailing the circulation and crippling trade. This, however, receives strenuous opposition from Mr. Cartwright, Mr. Street, Mr. Hilliard Cameron, Mr. Holton and Mr. Brown, and who oppose it not on political or party views, but because they believe it calculated to injure the country for the especial benefit of one or two banking institutions, and fearing that $30,000 might be made out of some little transaction connected therewith.

Then comes the School Bills. One for Lower Canada, referring chiefly to superior education, and intended it would appear as a bait to Roman Cathdic members, as it be stows almost all the sum granted ($50,000 yearly) on Roman Catholic Institutions, because of the superiority of their numbers, and completely ignores the fact that a very great part of it is raised by Protestant dissentients. To this, however, Protestants would not object if the education provided was secular; but when they consider that their money will be spent in educating young men for the Priesthood, they demur, and ask that every denomination be allowed to educate its own ministry. Besides this, the last Separate School Bill was accepted by Catholics and permitted by Protestants as a settlement of the Separate School question and the dispute arising therefrom. Yet in the face of all this, we find them coming forward like the horse-leech, crying give, give; never satisfied. And hand in hand with these go J. A and Galt. Anything for office.

In Upper Canada we imagined, vainly, that we would be spared another agitation of this much vexed question. Our hopes are disappointed. Mr. Bell, member for Russell, has introduced an Upper Canada Separate School Bill, as a private Bill we suppose, but with the understanding, no doubt, of Government support, unless that support should endanger their seats. The principle of separate or denominational schools is bad in itself, is calculated to arouse and keep alive bitterness, strife and envyings that tend to no good, but evil. We could bear with these things in others, since of their own choosing, if we would not be called upon to support them with our means. But Mr. Bell is not satisfied to allow Catholics to support their own schools and provide such an education as they wish, but Protestants must pay for that education of whatever character or quality it may be.

Mr. Bell's Bill provides that there shall be established in Upper Canada, in such places as the Governor in Council shall select, a Normal School in connection with the Roman Catholic Separate Schools, and a fund shall be appropriated out of the School Fund of Upper Canada, bearing the same proportion to the amount annually granted to the Normal School in Toronto, as the Roman Catholic population bears to the Protestant population in Upper Canada, according to the then last census. That all Provincial grants for superior education, comprising Universities, Classical and Industrial Colleges, Grammar Schools and Seminaries shall be annually divided between the Protestant and Roman Catholic Institutions, in proportion to their respective Protestant and Catholic populations.

Now it is well known that their population is greater compared with Protestants than their property compared with the property of Protestants in Upper Canada. In this Town their population is about one fourth while their property is about one seventh only, and the result of this new act will be that Protestants will have to pay for the superior education of Catholics, even in Upper Canada where Catholics are in the minority and all this to be forced on us by Lower Canada members and government hangers-on. How long will we be forced to endure these things? Who is to blame for them? A truckling, selfish, unprincipled government that is ready to cause us with anything that will keep them in office.

Since writing the above we learn that Mr. Galt has resigned his seat in the ministry. The cause of his resignation is said to be through his colleagues forsaking him in carrying the school bill for Lower Canada. Ministers, however, are more ready to give up a bill or a colleague than their seat. They have agreed, also, to drop Mr. Bell's infamous bill because the majority of Lower Canada members will not carry Mr. Galt's bill, as it may be termed. It appears that Mr. Galt has upon giving guarantees to the minority in Lower Canada that he would bring in a school bill to protect their rights under misinterpretation, and not being able to carry his bill, because of the opposition of catholic members, he resigned.

THE GERMAN WAR.

This great war is reported at an end. The Atlantic cable with London dates of the 4th instant, assures us that preliminaries for a peace are being arranged if they had not already been. The peace conference is to be held at Prague. The preliminaries already agreed upon are:—That Austria is to withdraw from the German Confederation, and lose Venetia and her part of Schleswig Holstein, and also pay $10,000,000 to her adversaries as expenses of the war. The German States north of the Maine are to form a union under the guidance of Prussia, and the States south of the Maine to form an independent union.

These are terms humiliating enough to Austria: she is thus to be reduced to a second or third rate power in Europe, and to lose the glory and prestige of all her former successes and campaigns. Prussia, on the contrary has added to her renown and greatness; she now becomes the ruling power in Germany, or central Europe; and the will of its statesmen the law in those minor states erected into a union under Prussia. What a pity that we cannot yet look to that country unless with the idea of despotism—tyranny. With all this progress the people have not yet freed themselves from despotic sway. Let us hope now that greatness will be the watchword to Prussian freedom, and that no longer will despotism be a stain on the escutcheon of one single nation enjoying the light of the Reformation. Italy also becomes enriched by the reverses of Austria. Venetia will no longer be an unrealized desire on the part of Victor Immanuel. He, by Prussian aid has raised his kingdom to a first rate power. The only object of ambition now, is Rome, and there can be no doubt but that Italian affairs will remain unsettled—Victor Immanuel and Garibaldi unsatisfied, until they possess Rome also, but this will come ere long.

Continued Liberality.

As will be seen in our report of the County Council proceedings, the Hon. Billa Flint again proposes to present each Municipality in the County with the sum of $10, provided each Council will do the same, for the purpose of providing prizes for children attending school in the different Municipalities.

This liberality on the part of the Honorable gentleman deserves the greatest praise, and it is to be hoped that the Reeves will take it hand, and at once get the $10 voted. The amount of useful reading matter thus brought within the reach of the youth of the county will be considerable, and its influence must be felt in after years. An intelligent people must be a progressive people, enlightened and free, as only the ignorant ever can or will be slaves; and no better inheritance can be left to our children than a good education, a well-stored mind and freedom of thought and action directed by wisdom and holy fear. Right willing, therefore, should each Council be to aid in thus diffusing knowledge and the principles of truth through the country; we trust, therefore, that no effort will be lacking this year in having a large number of prizes for each school.

Ashburnham Council has already voted $10 for the purpose.

The Committee of Ladies for the Protestant Home, thankfully acknowledge the receipt of the following donations, for the months of June and July last past.

A friend, cold meat and clothes. A friend, 12 articles of new ready-made clothing. A friend, 2 bonnets. Goodwin & Hall, 12 doz. buns and ham. Wm. Foster, Sr., peck of peas. Mrs. Mary Brummell, $1. Mr. Wilson, a piece of soup meat.

Cast-off clothing will be thankfully received by the managers of the Home, as their means of supplying the present inmates are limited.

A new Lodge, known as Haliburton Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 975, has just been established at the Village of Haliburton, in this County. The following are the officers for the current year:—Bro. Jas. R. Erskine, W. Master; Bro. John Lucas, Depy. Master; Bro. Robert Clark, Treasurer; Bro. W. C. Anstin, Secretary; Bro. Wm. Gainforth, Sec. Com. Man.

CHOLERA.—26 cases and 4 deaths in New York, and 8 cases and 1 death in Brooklyn were reported on Monday from Cholera. It seems to be on the increase, yet not extending much into the interior of the country.

The Government propose to compensate the volunteers wounded on the Niagara frontier during the late raid, and to aid the families of those who were killed or have since died.

The Leader says, J. A. McDonald has already announced his intention of asking his constituents to send him to the local as well as the general legislature.

John A. McDonald announced in the course of debate on Tuesday, that the House would likely be prorogued on Saturday.

The cholera is on the increase in England and Wales; in some places numerous deaths have occurred.

KNOX CHURCH.—A meeting called for the purpose of moderating a call to a minister, was held in Knox Church, Mitchell, last Monday. The attendance was larger than church meetings generally are; and considering that many from the country were detained haying and harvesting, there were many more than anticipated. The interest thus manifested clearly demonstrates that the members and adherents are at last earnest in their endeavors to have a minister of their own. After the disposal of routine business, it was proposed and unanimously agreed that a call should be moderated to the Rev. Walter M. Roger. The call was then signed by all the members and adherents present, and will be presented at the next meeting of the Stratford Presbytery. A salary of $600 was voted to commence with; but as the church is now within a trifle of being clear of debt, and the congregation large and prosperous, this sum would doubtless be soon increased considerably. Mr. Roger is a young gentleman of brilliant talents and much promise, and should he accept the call, as we sincerely hope he may, we feel sanguine the congregation of Knox Church would spare no pains to make his home in Mitchell comfortable and harmonious.—Stratford Beacon.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

Thursday, August 2nd, 1866.

Council met in special session, pursuant to the Warden's notice, for the purpose of taking into consideration the erection of a drill shed and other matters.

There were 17 members present—the Warden and Messrs. Grover, Patterson, Pearce, Kidd, McCarthy, Melville, Probert, Lucas, Millar, Dunlop, Dean, Carroll, Gilmour, Peck, Fitzgerald and Scott.

Absent—John Carnegie, Jr., Esq.

The minutes of the last day of the last session were read and approved.

WARDEN'S ADDRESS.

GENTLEMEN,—It affords me pleasure to be able to state to you that the government is prepared to pay one half the expenses connected with the erection of a drill shed in this place.

I had a personal interview, accompanied by my advisory committee, with Brigade Major Patterson relative to the matter, and it was suggested in the letter of instruction from the government to that gentleman, that one which would cost about $2,000 would be sufficient. The Brigade Major said it would require to be about 65 by 200 feet to afford sufficient room for each man of a battalion while on drill.

The Council of the Town of Peterboro very magnanimously voted the munificent sum of $1000 towards its erection; therefore, my object in calling you together at this time is to afford you the pleasure of doing your part in the matter, by making provisions to carry out your resolution of last session, to the effect that "you would contribute an equal sum with the Town of Peterborough, either with or without government aid, and in the matter of the erection of such a building."

The question of an eligible site for such building with sufficient quantity of grounds attached for out door parade will also require your consideration and adoption.

There may, possibly, be some other matters that will require your attention before you part.

Gentlemen, I regret very much in having felt it to be a duty encumbent on me to call you together so soon after your last session, more especially in this hurried season of the year; but I trust the matter, which you are called together to consider, will be deemed, by you, of sufficient importance to justify me in doing so.

I, therefore, trust you will enter into the consideration of those important matters at once, with the view of being able to return to your homes at the earliest opportunity

(Signed) E. INGRAM.

Moved by Mr. Pearce and seconded by Mr. Patterson,—That Messrs. Grover, Dean, Peck, Scott, Gilmour, Carroll and the mover be a committee on the Warden's address. —Carried.

Moved by Mr. Carroll and seconded by Mr. Scott,—That this Council hereby pledges itself to save the Municipality of Burleigh from all consequences which may result to that Municipality on account of the collection of the sum of $500 authorized by this Council to be collected therein, on account of the resurvey of certain lands in the Township of Burleigh.

The motion was put and lost; 3 voting for it—Messrs. Scott, Carroll and McCarthy. The other members against it.

Moved by Mr. Scott and seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That in consequence of Mr. Galvin refusing to act in conjunction with the Reeve of Ennismore in expending the moneys granted by this Council to the Township of Ennismore, on boundary lines, that Mr. McCarthy, Reeve of Ennismore, is hereby authorized to expend the same.—Carried.

The Council adjourned to 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Friday, August 3rd, 1866.

The Council met. All the members present.

The minutes of yesterday were read and approved.

Moved by Mr. Grover, and seconded by Mr. Peck,—That the Committee on the Warden's Address be now allowed to report. —Carried.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON THE WARDEN'S ADDRESS.

The Committee beg leave to report that they are of opinion that the Warden was fully justified in calling the Council together at this time.

Your Committee recommend that the sum of $1000, or a sum equal to the amount granted by the Town, for the erection of a drill shed in Town be granted by this Council.

Your Committee would recommend that the following members of this Council do act with a Committee from the Town Council, as a Building Committe, viz:—The Warden, Messrs. Gilmour and Carnegie.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) P. M. GROVER,
Chairman.

Moved by Mr. Grover, and seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That the report of the Committee on the Warden's address be adopted by this Council.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Peck, and seconded by Mr. Probert,—That the Warden be and he is hereby authorized to have the bridge across Wilson's creek, on the Bobcaygeon road replanked, and solicit the County of Victoria to pay half the cost of the same; and that this resolution be referred to the Road and Bridge Committee.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Probert, seconded by Mr. Peck.—That the Warden of this County be authorized to correspond with the Warden of the County of Victoria in regard to the delapidated state of the Little Bob bridge, on the Bobcaygeon road, and cause the same to be made safe for public use; and that this resolution be referred to Road and Bridge Committee.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Scott, and seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That the application for a grant for repairing the bridge crossing the Blind Channel, at Burleigh, be referred to Committee on Roads and Bridges.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. McCarthy, and seconded by Mr. Peck,—That the propriety of granting $10 on a certain road in Ennismore be referred to Committee on Roads and Bridges.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Peck, and seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That the thanks of this Council are due, and are hereby tendered to Brigade Major Patterson, for attending this Council and giving such valuable information in regard to the erection of a drill shed.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Grover, and seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That the by-law to provide for the expenditure of a certain sum therein named, to aid in the construction of a drill shed in the Town of Peterborough, be read a first time.—Carried.

The by-law was read a second time in committee of the whole, without amendment, Mr. Grover in the chair.

This by-law was passed on Saturday.

The Council adjourned to 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Saturday, August 4th, 1866.

The Council met. All the members present.

The minutes of yesterday were read and approved.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, the Committee on Roads and Bridges were allowed to report.

REPORT OF ROAD AND BRIDGE COMMITTEE.

The Committee on Roads and Bridges beg leave to report that they have had the dangerous state of several bridges in the County under their notice, and recommend that the following repairs be made:—

That the bridge over the Little Bob River be covered with cedar, on condition that the County of Victoria be at one half of the expense, which shall not exceed $120, and that Mr. Probert be Commissioner on behalf of the County.

2nd. That the bridge across Wilsons Creek be repaired, under Mr. Peck, expense not to exceed $10, on the same conditions as above.

3rd. That the bridge across the Blind channel, at Burleigh, be repaired, under the direction of the Reeve of Burleigh, the cost not to exceed $50.

With regard to the application of Mr. McCarthy for aid to repair a road in Ennismore, your Committee cannot recommend any thing for roads at this session.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

P. PEARCE,
Chairman.

Committee Room,
August 3rd, 1866.

On motion of Mr. Peck, the report was received and adopted.

A by-law to provide a sum of money for the repairs of those bridges named in the report, was carried through its different readings and passed.

The Warden read the following letter from the Hon. Billa Flint:

Ottawa, July 16th, 1866.

MY DEAR SIR,—As it is my intention to give to each Town and Township, as well as to Ashburnham, the sum of ten dollars for prize books, on the condition the same amount is given by each Council, to aid in the matter of distributing prizes to the children of Common Schools of the County over which you preside as Warden, may I ask you to be so kind as to bring the matter under the notice of the Reeves and have them take action in the matter, and I pledge myself that when the amount of ten dollars is ready from any Township Council, I will, upon the Reeve letting me know, remit him at once my ten dollars. I should like if the School Sections could raise an their ten or more, so as to increase the prizes.

Last year I sent each Reeve ten dollars. Some have informed me that the amount has been given to their Council; some have not; and one reports that he sent the money back, which never came to hand. So that this year I have taken the precaution to keep the money till they raise their amount, for as a business man I can always find means for using it to advantage.

I am desirous of carrying out the system. I hope the Reeves will see the necessity of voting out prizes as a small inducement to the children to improve in their Common School studies.

Please answer on receipt and let me know what you think about it.

Yours, &c.,
BILLA FLINT.

To EVANS ISBELL, Esq.,
Warden County Peterboro.

Moved by Mr. Gilmour, seconded by Mr. Carnegie,—That the thanks of this Council are due, and are hereby tendered to the Hon. Billa Flint, for the renewal of his munificent offer of ten dollars to each Township in the County, to be appropriated to the purchase of books to be distributed as prizes in the several schools of each Township, and that the Clerk be and he is hereby instructed to forward a copy of this resolution to him.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. McCarthy, a by-law to repeal by-law No. 281 was read a first time.

This by-law was lost in committe of the whole.

The Committee on Finance then reported: That they would recommend the sale of the remainder of the debentures issued under the authority of by-law No. 264, and that the Warden be authorised to sell as many of them as he may think best.

And your Committee would further report that it will be advisable to authorise the Warden and Treasurer to raise from the banks such a sum or sums as will be necessary to meet the current expenses of the County until the County rate is collected.

And your Committee would urge upon the Reeves the necessity of having the County rate paid by the first of the year if possible, and impress upon the Collectors the desirability of the course.

Your Committee would further recommend that your Treasurer be authorized to refuse to take more than 25 per cent of the County rate from any Municipality in silver, unless at the usual discount.

Your Committee would recommend the payment of the account of Weller & Hatton, for costs in case of W. A. Scott vs. the County—£28 13s.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

P. M. GROVER, Chairman.

A by law to authorize the building of a drill shed on that portion of the old burying ground held in trust by the authorities of the County, was read a first time, and afterwards referred to committee of the whole and read without amendment. It was afterwards passed.

Moved by Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. McCarthy,—That the by-law to repeal by law No. 281 be again referred to committee of the whole.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Peck,—That the 19th rule of the Council be temporarily suspended to allow a discussion on the subject of resubmitting a by law to repeal by-law No. 281. This motion was lost by a majority of 8.

Yeas—Messrs. Scott, McCarthy, Carroll and Lucas—4.

Nays—Messrs. Pearce, Peck, Patterson, Melville, Millar, Kidd, Fitzgerald, Gilmour, Grover, Probert, Dean and Dunlop—12

Mr. Dean introduced a by-law to repeal by-law No. 13 of the United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, for the preservation of public morals.

This by-law was read also a second time in committee of the whole without amendment, and was afterwards passed. It refers to bathing in exposed places, and the new by law provides that persons bathing must be clothed in a bathing dress so as to prevent the indecent exposure of person, &c.

A by-law was also passed to authorize the payment of Messrs. Weller & Hatton's account of $114.60, for costs in case of W. A. Scott against the County. This case being in reference to the re-survey of Harvey.

On motion of Mr. Grover, seconded by Mr. Pearce, the Committee appointed to superintend the erection of a drill shed was appointed.

A Committee was also appointed to erect a flag-staff in front of the Court House, instead of Mr. Sheridan who declined to act as directed at the last meeting of the Council.

The Council adjourned.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL.

The Municipal Council of the Village of Ashburnham met on the 6th inst. Present—A. C. Dunlop, Esq., Reeve, and Messrs. Mowry, Clark and Ludgate.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A petition from Lionel York and others, also from Mrs. P. McCabe and others, asking for aid to build side walks. Both were received.

Moved by Mr. Clark, seconded by Mr. Ludgate,—That in answer to the petitions of Lionel York and Mrs. McCabe, this Council will furnish the plank for said side-walks and crossings, if the petitioners will provide the balance of material necessary and do the work under the directions of the Council.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Clark, seconded by Mr. Mowry,—That the amount of Mr. John Craig's account and others for labour performed on streets and bridges, amounting to the sum of $292.45 be paid.—Carried.

A petition from the Board of School Trustees was read, asking the Council to provide the sum of $200 for school purposes for the current year.

Moved by Mr. Ludgate, seconded by Mr. Clark,—That the petition of the Board of School Trustees be received, and that the sum of $200 therein asked for to pay the Teacher's Salary and other expenses be provided as required.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Ludgate, seconded by Mr. Clark,—That to meet the current expenses of the year 1866 the sum of ten cents on the dollar be levied on the Ratable property of the Village, and collected in the usual manner.—Carried.

The Reeve having informed the Council that the Hon. Billa Flint had again offered the sum of ten dollars to the Municipality if the Council would grant the same, the sum to be expended in prizes for the children attending the school.

On motion of Mr. Clark, seconded by Mr. Ludgate, an equivalent sum was granted, and the Clerk was directed to forward the thanks of the Council to the Hon. Mr. Flint for his munificent liberality.

The Council adjourned, to meet the first Monday in September, at 7.30, p.m.

For the Examiner.

A VISIT TO ROCHESTER.

A short time ago I had the opportunity of taking a trip to the City of Rochester with a number of friends. Through the kindness of Mr. Williams, Superintendent of Port Hope and Peterboro Railway, we were allowed to go over the road at one fare. Arriving at Port Hope we were met by the agent of the Steamer Corinthian, who did all in his power to entertain the party until the arrival of the boat which made its appearance about 8.30, and at 10 o'clock all were aboard of that magnificent vessel,

THE CORINTHIAN.

This vessel is fitted up in a superb style, and Captain Chrysler is at home on his craft—"he is the man for Galway." Any person going across the lake with him is sure of having all necessary attention paid to him. After a run of about three hours and a half we were landed at Charlotte, where a train is always in waiting for the boats; and in a short time we were in the

CITY OF ROCHESTER.

The traveller who crosses Rochester by the Central Railroad gets a very faint idea of the city, for he sees but little of it, and that by no means the most attractive part. To see and appreciate the beauties of this really handsome city, one must drive through its broad, clean, well-paved and shady avenues, stroll through its parks, gaze upon its waterfalls, enter its public and private buildings, visit its churches and schools, go among its flour mills and manufacturing establishments, walk in its nurseries and gardens and then he may, to some extent, realize what an enterprising people can accomplish in half a century, upon a productive soil. Ornamental trees are cultivated with care, and the cultivation of fruit trees in the city is extensive. Here, within five miles of the centre of Rochester, are the great nurseries, consisting of thousands of acres devoted to the culture of fruit and ornamental trees, and millions of trees are annually sent abroad. The annual product of these nurseries is valued at over $2,000,000.

The population of the city is about sixty thousand. Here the waters of the Genesee river make their last leap ere they enter Lake Ontario. There are four distinct cataracts within a distance of 2 miles, the total fall being about two hundred and fifty feet, affording great facilities for milling.

The wealth that the citizens have accumulated has not been hoarded, as there are nearly forty miles of improved streets, including many finely paved with stone. There are thirty-five miles of excellent sewerage; nearly two thousand street lamps, a dozen spacious parks, four elegant bridges over the Genesee—including one of cut stone, costing nearly $100,000, upon which are built fine blocks of brick stores; the Court House and City Hall cost $80,000.—There are eighteen public school houses, some of which cost $15,000 each; fifty churches the best of which cost $70,000 The University of Rochester, a popular college, is situated on the eastern part of the city, near the Central Railroad. A line of street railways, twenty miles in length, is in full operation.

At Rochester five sections of the New York Central Railroad converge, viz.: lines to Buffalo, to Niagara Falls, to Syracuse direct, to Syracuse by the way of Auburn, and to Charlotte at the mouth of the Genesee. The New York and Erie Railroad extends from Rochester 19 miles to Avon, there connecting with the Buffalo, N. Y., and E. R. R., giving the city railway connection with Southern New York.

Manufacturing in Rochester is extensive, flour taking the lead. From 600,000 to 1,000,000 bbls. of flour are made annually. Other branches of manufacturing are prosperous.

MOUNT HOPE CEMETERY.

In the south part of Rochester, is an object of local pride, which is visited annually by thousands. The Cemetery contains about one hundred and sixty acres of hill and dale, thickly studded with forest trees, and beautified by the expenditure of many thousands in making winding paths, towering monuments, massive tombs and grassy mounds, pleasing to the eye and becoming the "City of the Dead." We are greatly indebted to Mr. Lewis, who formerly resided in Peterboro, for the courtesy we received at his hands in being shown through the Cemetery and the explanations given of the different avenues therein.

THE ERIE CANAL.

Divides the city near its business centre, and crosses the Genesee by an aqueduct of cut stone which cost the State more than $600,000.

Thus a mere glimpse at the city will show what an enterprising people can do in a comparatively short period, for Rochester is but of a late date. With no greater advantages for manufacturing purposes than Peterborough, she carries on manufacturing for more extensively and the trade of the city is fabulous compared with many places of older dates. The taste of the citizens too in ornamenting the city and private residences is evident every where you proceed. None of that narrow-minded penuriousness that hoards up thousands while living in hovels and surrounded by mud holes and quagmires can be witnessed there. Every man vies with his neighbor in ornamenting his premises, and aldermen and councillors complete the work in beautifying the public places. After enjoying ourselves in seeing the sights about the city and suburbs for a short period, we returned to the shores of our own fair country, where we found everything moving on in the usual, steady, progressive manner and we looked forward to the day when the towns and cities of Canada will be as prosperous, and as progressive as any on the continent, and when Canada will exercise an influence on this continent second only to the United States.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—It was indeed with feelings of genuine disgust and sorrow that I read a communication in the Review of last week, headed, "Col Haultain's Unpopularity." It was with a feeling of disgust that the good sense and intelligence of the public should be so insulted by the unblushing and despicably mean falsehoods contained in that communication as characteristic of the writer, with a feeling of sorrow that one in our Town could be found so mean, so cowardly contemptible as to disgrace himself and the Volunteer force, with which he is unfortunately connected, by attempting to detract from the character of another by publishing statements so false as only to recoil on himself, and instead of injuring as intended, only leaves himself in a position truly pitiable. It is indeed with shame and sorrow we find a Volunteer adopt such a course of action, instead of, in a manly manner, discussing the propriety of, and showing the danger of such a principle of appointment; he must needs become insultingly personal and call into question the character of one in comparison with whom he sinks into insignificence. Were what he stated in his letter only tinged with a shadow of truth, even then his course of action must be condemned; but when we find his whole epistle nothing but one great unblushing falsehood from beginning to end, we can only look upon himself and communication with the indignation and scorn so generally heaped upon him by every respectable person who has read his letter.

Let me assure the writer of that letter that he is not unknown; his whole epistle is so like himself—presuming, impertinent and untrue—the mark of the beast is so vividly evident that not a doubt is left as to who the author can be. How personal is he in regard to the Colonel? Did we become so to himself what a margin we would have? Has not his arrogant, egotistical and forward demeanor on every occasion made himself so notoriously singular, that even in type he cannot disguise those happy traits of disposition? It is a shame, a disgrace, a pity, that such an one should be permitted to malign the character of any that he may choose to accuse of actions they never performed, or of statements they never made. What a position does he occupy when we tell him that the Colonel did not resign before the Crimean War. It was not until 1860 that Col. Haultain sold out, and yet he dares to say, "that the Colonel resigned before the Crimean War." Really, Mr Editor, it is sickening to have to put up with such behavior. How can he expect any one to put himself on the same level with himself, and refuse his glaring and imbecile falsehoods? Why will he disgrace the whole Volunteer force by signing himself as one, and acting in a manner that every Volunteer in this Town is ashamed of? As Volunteers we are keenly sensitive of any slight offered to our officers, or to ourselves, or to any infringement upon their rights or our own. If the Government in making this appointment has not done justice to any officer or officers, we will stand by them as we ever did, and quickly see them righted. But do you think our officers would allow anything personal to come between them and their sense of duty? No, they are too gentlemanly and too generous to act in any such manner, consequently when any one pretends to be the mouthpiece he must act in a manner in keeping with such a position. Had the writer of that letter behaved as such, and in a dignified manner criticised and questioned the right of the appointment, showed us where an injustice had been done, or how it was to be remedied, then he would have had our sympathy; but when he utters abusive falsehoods, becomes vulgarly personal, and only gives vent to a petty spite, then he certainly is not acting as a gentleman, or a Volunteer should, and must alone bear the odium that has so justly fallen on him. If he cannot write a letter without telling untruths, or being insultingly impertinent, let him sign his own name or any other but that of a Volunteer, for as Volunteers we would be ashamed to have anything to do with his letter. His statement as to the Colonel's failing to raise two Volunteer Companies is a falsehood. The Colonel had as fine a body of men for his Field Battery as could be found—75 men, and we drilled for a long time, but were told the Government could not give us guns, upon this we disbanded. I was a member of that Company, and when "A Volunteer" says Col. Haultain failed in raising that Company, I say it is an untruth, and challenge him to prove his statement to be anything but such. He had as little to do with the wooden gun as "A Volunteer" has in being the mouth-piece of that body. His statement as to the other Company is just as reckless. His construction of the words of the Colonel on the occasion he refers to, is another instance of his sublime stupidity and determination to gratify his hates and spites. A charming instance of his own little nature showing itself. Yet this is the man that would babble about paths of rectitude, conscience, base and sordid motives, &c., &c. It is simply disgusting

I do not write this letter in defence of Col. Haultain or any of his actions, that gentleman is quite capable of doing so himself; I do not say the appointment is a good one or not, but I do write this letter to say that the common rules of decency have been so flagrantly violated that a protest must be at once entered or where would such a state of things end What a state society would be in! our private characters assaulted at any time by any unprincipled person who might choose to concoct a list of falsehoods and publish them at his pleasure.—My advice to "A Volunteer" is to at once apologize, the occasion demands it; he has behaved in a childish, silly manner, written a letter and forgot the principal thing, and that is whether *what he is writing is true or not. Let him re*member how he would like to be attacked in a similar manner, and perhaps he will not be so rabid again. Let him be frank, truthful, and liberal minded, especially when he rushes into print and places himself in the power of the public as criticise I am a Volunteer myself; I may if went to the front, and will always be the first to do so when required. I respect and esteem my officers, no one can be more proud of them than I am, and I would be the last one to suffer an injustice to be committed against any one of them or my comrades in arms, but when I see a Volunteer make such a disgraceful exhibition of himself as the writer of that penurious letter has done, I consider it my duty to say that we are ashamed of such conduct.

We are sorry to see him in such a position; he has only his own vanity, ambition and stupidity to blame for it. I crave your pardon, Mr. Editor for the occupation of so much space.

I am, sir,
Your ob't servant,
ANOTHER VOLUNTEER.

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial result, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid.

RIDE BOUND HORSES.

A horse is said to be hide-bound when his skin will not slip under the pressure of the hand, but sticks as if it was glued, which condition is always dependent on a deranged state of the stomach and digestive organs—by correcting which, and giving to them a healthy tone and condition, the disease or complaint will disappear. Experience has proved that the means best adopted to this end is "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine." It has been used in numerous cases with complete success, generally effecting a cure in a few days. It is the best condition medicine known, and may be given with perfect safety at all times, and does not require that the horse be kept from work.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the constitutional lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY
IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for American, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S
CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

ODE TO THE ORANGE FLAG.

BY R. DOTTRELL.

Air: "Who is the Enemy," &c.—McKay.

Emblem of loyalty! gladly we greet thee;
Flag of our fathers! we hail thee with pride;
Wave in thy glory, the terror of traitors,
Wave in thy beauty, our beacon and guide.
Oh! for the bold-hearts that once proudly bore thee;
The meteor-swords that once flashed at thy wave;
They're gone! but the spirit of Walker and Hamza;
Looks down from thy folds on the loyal and brave.

Chorus: Emblem of Loyalty, &c.

For, on our borders the pirates assemble;
Havoc and slaughter their watchword and cry
Demons of Discord! look Northward and tremble,
Hamza's bold Escign waves proudly on high.
Time-honored Ensign! let Fenians assail thee,
True to their colors, thy thousand's shall stand,
Till Canada, Britain and Erin shall hail thee
The guardian, the glory, the hope of the land.

Chorus: Emblem of Loyalty, &c.

Emblem of Liberty! William bequeathed us
A heritage holy, fair Freedom and thee.
Witness our vows in thy shadow, loved standard,
"Never that birthright surrendered shall be."
Bright as thy record of conquest and glory,
Ours be the care that it brighter shall shine;
Witness our vows to high Heaven before thee,
"Freely we'll die for thee, Flag of the Boyne."

Emblem of Loyalty! gladly we greet the,
Flag of our Fathers, we hail thee with pride,
Wave in thy glory the terror of traitors,
Wave in thy beauty our Season and Guide.

I highly approve of the above, and recommend it to be published.

Rector of Port Hope.

Facts Worth Remembering.

"Cosmo," in the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post, gives the following facts worth remembering:—

It is worth while for all farmers, everywhere, to remember that thorough culture is better than three mortgages on their farm.

That an offensive war against weeds, is five times less expensive than a defensive one.

That good fences always pay better than lawsuits with neighbors.

That hay is a good deal cheaper made in the summer than purchased in the winter.

That a horse who lays his ears back and looks lightning when any one approaches him, is vicious. Don't buy him.

That scrimping the feed of fatting hogs, is a waste of grain.

That over fed fowls won't lay eggs.

That educating children is money lent at a hundred per cent.

That one evening spent at home in study is more profitable than tea lounging about country taverns.

That cows should always be milked regularly and clean.

That it is the duty of every man to take some good, reliable, entertaining paper, especially your local paper and pay for it promptly—of course.

A worthy householder called upon a seedsman in a neighboring town and complained that the onion seed which he had purchased was worthless, not one of the expected plants having made their appearance above ground. The merchant looked serious, and said, "Are you sure you did not sow them wrong side up."

Love is no necessary to a woman's heart as a fashionable bonnet to her head, indeed, we rather think more so; for nothing less than a large measure of love will content her; whereas the recent fashion has shown that she can be satisfied with a very little bonnet.

A dispute arising relative to the best mode of dressing a beefsteake, the controversy was settled by one of the disputants giving Shakespeare as an authority, "If when done 'were well done, then 'twere well it were done quickly."

A Western editor, fresh from the reading of Gray's Elegy, penned the following;

"These hoops are like the poet Gray—
This you at once can see;
For they, as Grey did, show the world
A handsome L E G."

There is a gentleman residing in this city who is unusually scrupulous in regard to having his door-plate polished every morning, being determined to "leave an untarnished name behind him"—when he goes to the countingroom.

An American traveller lately describing a tropical shower, wrote to a friend in the following words: 'The rain-drops were exceedingly large, varying in size from a shilling to eightcenpence.

Hood said that when a young man, he couldn't wink at a girl but that she took it for an offer of marriage. The consequence was that a good many of the girls got hoodwinked.

Englishmen in Canada patriotically avoid placing green spectacles on their noses lest it be constructed into hooting "the green above the red."

"Now, papa, what is humbug?"

"It is," replied papa, "when ma pretends to be very fond of me, and puts no buttons on my shirt."

After all, there are only two sorts of disease, says a French doctor—one of which you die, and the other of which you don't.

When Haddin's wife kicked him out of bed, says he—"See here now! you'd better not do that again. If you do, it will cause a coolness."

The ladies—May their virtue exceed even the magnitude of their skirts, while their faults are even smaller than their bonnets.

'If,' as the poet says, 'beauty draws us with a single hair,' then what—O! tell us what—must the effect of a modern waterfall.

The Boston Saturday Press says that Gen. Kil-Patrick is the best general to put down the Fenians.

There are a great many laughable things happen upon the old earth, but she always keeps her gravity.

Be true to your friend; never speak of his faults to another to show your own discrimination.

There is no friend to man so true, so kind, so real, and so good as a woman—but then she must be a good one.

Why are umbrellas like pancakes?—Because they are seldom seen after Lent.

The one talent some men have, consists in blowing and swelling, as if they had cash.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, and so lasting the fine odor persists, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammations, to perfume clothing, for handkerchiefs, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by Burnap Ransom & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jee se P—" Exactly P—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt 'our boy" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or unusually oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins equare and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" " " " I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" " " " I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

" " " " I had lost all appetite—was so weak and emcrvated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. " " " The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES REMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" " " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

P. H. DRAKE & CO., New York City.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do.
It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 5 cts per bottle.

W. E. HAGAN, Troy, N. Y., Chemist.

DEMAS BARNES & Co.,
Wholesale Agents, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Heimstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

C. HEIMSTREET, Chemist.

Lyon's Extract of Pure Jamaica Ginger—for Indigestion, Nausea, Heart-burn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c., where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity makes it a cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bottle. Ask for "Lyon's" Pure Extract. Take no other.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1866.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

THE VICTIM.

"The end thereof is death."

I saw him at the festal board,
His bearing proud and high,
Health glowed upon his manly cheek,
And pleasure in his eye.
He stood among the revellers,
With one consent their chief,
With wine and song and merriment
Dispelling care and grief.

I saw him in the banquet hall,
His lofty step and air
Wrought dreadful havoc 'mong the hearts
Of maidens young and fair;
Had all who heard his gentle voice
And saw his winning smile,
Knew well that in his open heart
There lurked no secret guile.

And who can know the joy that filled
The widow'd mother's breast,
As on her sleeping son she gazed
While on his couch of rest?
It were no sin to worship him—
The doting parent said—
So like is he to him I loved,
Who now is with the dead.

But O, what changes time doth work
In everything of earth!
We see its wanton ravages
Commencing with our birth;
Death and decay are written
On every human brow,
And those we loved in early youth
O say, where are they now?

Years passed, and with them boyhood too—
Stern manhood came at length,
But he, that noble, high-souled youth,
Had thrown away his strength;
His earthly hopes had perished,
His early friends were gone,
In deep and loathsome drunkenness
His life was passing on.

And where was she who bore him?
That marble slab will tell,
How of a broken heart she died
When he her first-born fell;
The angry winds are sleeping o'er
Her grave below the hill,
Her cottage home is desolate,
All there is hushed and still.

Time rolled along, again I stood
A brother, at his side,
With horrid blasphemy he curs't
Our mother's God, and died!
Would ye not in perdition's gulf
At last be swallowed up,
Beware young man, the tempter's snare—
The REVEL and the CUP.

The Last Love Episode in the Life of a Philosopher.

The independence of the United States of America had been conclusively acknowledged and ratified by the Treaty of Peace of September 3rd, 1783; and, under the able direction of Benjamin Franklin, ambassador from the New Republic to the Court of Versailles, the diplomatic and commercial relations of the United States with France had been successfully established by Treaty, in consonance with the views and wishes of Congress.

Philadelphia ardently desired the return of her famed citizen who had displayed so much prudence and skill in effecting the great objects of his mission. He, no less anxious to return to America, never wholly free from the fear that his declining health might detain him in France, perhaps to close his life there, and, withal, that his most ardent prayer was to be spared to end his days in his native land among his fellow citizens, and surrounded by his grandchildren,—he yet seemed to seek a pleasureable excuse for the delay of his departure, under the influence of a sentiment which had less concern in the settlement of such collateral details as yet remained for adjustment, than the American philosopher had, perhaps, deemed possible, or cared even to acknowledge to himself at that period of his life.

During the latter part of his embassy to the French Court, he had taken up his residence at Passy, near Auteuil, in the environs of Paris.

In the latter charming village dwelt the widow of Helvetius. The relict of Helvetius was a most amiable and gifted woman. She reckoned among her friends the most distinguished men of letters of the period, by whom she was never otherwise designated than as "The good lady of Auteuil."

Although she passed that term of female life which had been so arbitrarily assigned as the climacteric to the fascinating powers of the fair sex, the widow of Helvetius was another exception to that questionable rule: and still most fascinating, both by the grace of her manners and the attractions of her person. The gentleness of her disposition, the charming versatility of her intellect, together with the prudent deportment which had distinguished her throughout a life of considerable trial, and had placed her beyond the reach of all reproach, invested her as it were, with an aureole of feminine grace and purity, to which all who came within the atmosphere of her intercourse paid homage of admiration and respect.

Strange as it may at first appear, when the then respective ages of the "good lady of Auteuil" and of Benjamin Franklin are considered, the American philosopher found the charm of her society too irresistible not to make a permanent alliance with her a serious subject of his thoughts; and in so much, at length, that he believed it desirable for his happiness.

On her part, the amiable widow had not the most remote presentiment of such a design; and always received Franklin as a friend who entertained no other sentiments towards her than those he had expressed, and as one in whose near society she would have esteemed herself happy to live.

Between Passy and Auteuil a frequent intercourse of visits had for some time been established. Once in every week Madame Helvetius dined at Franklin's house, in company with the Abbe de Laroche, the physician Cabanis, who resided under her roof and Morellet, another esteemed friend, but less frequent guest. Franklin, on the other hand, dined much more frequently at the house of the charming widow, where he often passed the whole evening, but had never yet paid her a morning visit.

The intercourse with Franklin was most cordial on all sides. The simplicity of his manners, his noble sense of right and duty, which revealed itself in the most trivial things; his affability, the purity of his soul, his cheerfulness, and his delightful power of narration, were inexhaustible themes for admiration to Morellet.

One morning, contrary to his usual custom, Franklin left his apartment at a very early hour, and summoned the young man who officiated as his valet and general servant, by his usual appellative of "Dick! Dick! I am going to Auteuil get thee ready to come with me."

No sooner was Richard called than he made his appearance, and almost in less time than it took his master to communicate his intention, the gold headed cane, hat and gloves of the philosopher were handed to him, and without further delay, master and man were upon their way to Auteuil.—Franklin found Madame Helvetius in her salle de reception, which looked out upon the beautiful garden of her house, from which close, and up to the very sill of the window, near which she had been seated, the thick foliage of a lime tree spread its cool and refreshing verdure.

"So early a visitor, my worthy Dr. Franklin!" said the charming hostess, as she rose to receive him. "I hope it may be no unpleasant intelligence that you have to impart to me, and which has set you astir at so unusual an hour?"

"Not in the least, Madame Helvetius," replied Franklin. "I am come thus early to relate to you a circumstance that occurred to me last night."

"Ah! then, my dear friend, how charming it is of you. You are come to relate to me some pleasant little story."

"Well, you shall judge for yourself, dear Madame. You will perhaps recollect our conversation of last evening, and how I endeavored by the most cogent arguments to make you sensible that you ought no longer to lead thus a single life, but should marry again?"

"O heavens! my dear friend, why revert to such a subject! Let us rather speak on some other."

"Is it then possible, Madame Helvetius, that you have not perceived the regret I feel in regard to the strange persistence with which you still persevere in your troth towards your deceased husband, which is not only without any reasonable ground of excuse, but perfectly futile?"

"At another time we will talk of that,—at another time, dear friend!" interposed Madame Helvetius, with a simultaneous motion of her hand towards Franklin's white head, as though she would have smoothed down his gray locks.

"Well," resumed Franklin, "after our conversation of last night, I returned home, went to bed, and dreamed—that I was dead. Shortly I found myself in that paradise where the souls of the departed enjoy imperishable happiness and repose. The gate-keeper of that Eden asked me whether I was desirous to see any of the spirits of the blessed; and I made reply that I much desired to be led where the philosophers were wont to meet. 'There are two,' replied the guardian, 'who much frequent a spot close by. They are most intimate neighbors, and take much pleasure in each other's society.' "Who are they?" said I. "Socrates and Helvetius," was the guardian's reply. "I have an equal esteem for both of them; but lead me first to Helvetius, for though I speak French, I am not a master of the Greek language."—Helvetius received me in the most friendly manner. He questioned me eagerly upon the present state of religious matters in France, and on the political subjects which most engaged the attention of Europe. But I, who had imagined he would have been more anxious to be informed upon matters that concerned him more nearly, and surprised that he made no inquiries about you, interrupted him at length in his interrogatories, and exclaimed, "But, good heaven! have you no desire to know how fares your old faithful friend and partner in life, Madame Helvetius?—she who still loves you with such affectionate constancy? Scarcely an hour since I was in her house at Auteuil, and had the most convicting evidence of the undiminished interest and devotion with which she regards you, and cherishes your memory."

"'Ah!' said he, 'you speak of my former matrimonial felicity. We must learn to forget those things here, if we would be happy. For many years I thought of nothing else, she was constantly before my mind, and even here I felt desolate. But at length I have found a consolation for the loss of her society. I have married another charming woman, and it would have been impossible to find one who resembled more my first wife, than her on whom my choice has fallen. She is not so handsome, it is true, as was my former spouse; but she is gifted with as much feeling and intellect; and loves me tenderly. She has, indeed, no thought but to please me, and to render me happy. Stay awhile with me, and you shall soon behold her."

"'Upon this I resumed: 'I perceive very clearly that your first wife is infinitely more true and constant than you are.—Since your death, she has had several very advantageous offers of marriage, but she refused them all. I will candidly confess to you, that—I loved her myself with the most intense affection; but she remained cold and insensible to all my entreaties, all my arguments; in fact, she refused my hand from love of you!'"

"'I am exceedingly sorry to hear that she was so unreasonable, and pity her inconsiderate willfulness; for she was indeed a most excellent and truly lovable woman.'"

"At these words, Madame Helvetius made her appearance; and in her I recognised—imagine, only, who I saw before me? No other person than Madame Franklin! my old faithful American friend and wife! On the instant I had claim to her as belonging to me—but, in a cold and somewhat repulsive tone, she said: 'For forty years and four months, nearly half a century, I was your wife. Rest satisfied with that. I have formed another alliance, will endure forever.' Deeply chagrined to be rejected in so cold a manner by my departed wife, I immediately resolved to quit such ungraceful spirits. I longed to return to our planet, and behold once more the sun and you! Say shall we not avenge ourselves for such inconstancy?"

But the charming widow of Auteuil was by no means disposed to avenge in such a manner the faithlessness of the spirits which the American philosopher's brain had so vividly impressed upon him in his dream.—Her determination to remain single had long been an unalterable resolve. Had such not been the case, it may be readily believed she would have hesitated before she rejected an offer that conferred with it so much honor, and which, had she accepted, would have bestowed upon her a name equally celebrated in two quarters of the globe.

As they sat opposite to each other at the open window, it was not without a certain degree of emotion that she gazed on the earnest, truthful countenance of him who spoke to her so frankly, and, with a cheerful hopefulness of soul at once so tender, so affectionate! She appreciated at their full value the high esteem, and the sincere friendship, of which he had given her proof so incontestible in the solicitation for her hand. Neither in his manner, nor words had Benjamin Franklin made himself ridiculous. There was nothing of the love-sick dotard in his demeanor. Before her sat a sage, who spoke deeply impressed with the conviction that, in all the circumstances, and in every stage of life, no partner was so desirable and indispensable as a wife who was fitted to embellish our existance, to give two-fold increase to our happiness, to alleviate the cares and sweeten the bitter anxieties which are our inevitable fare, however highly or lowly cast; and, if destined to survive her husband, to make his death-bed one of peaceful resignation.

On the previous evening, Franklin, in discourse with Madame Helvetius had, indeed, purposely adverted to, and eventually dwelt with much earnestness upon the propriety of her entering the marriage state; but in doing so, whether from timidity or forethought, he had expressed his opinion in a general point of view only, without in the least permitting his own personal sentiments towards her to betray themselves.—Nor in truth, during that conversation, whether from less vanity than most of her sex, or a less share of that innate perspicuity in matters of the heart, which most women possess, she had not in the remotest degree detected the deep interest he felt in the counsel he advised her with such tranquil, yet earnest eloquence.

But now the amiable widow's eyes became suffused with tears; she leaned her arm on the window cushion, and buried her face in her hand.

"Come, then," exclaimed Franklin, after a short silence,—"come, then, charming lady of Auteuil, let us both avenge ourselves."

"Wist! listen! my dear friend, listen!" said Madame Helvetious in a low tone, and in an attitude of attention. "Do not speak for I hear voices in discourse close to us."

Both gently rose from their seats, and putting aside as gently the foliage of the lime-tree branch that obstructed somewhat their hearing and view of what was passing in the garden beneath, they beheld there, seated on a stone bench immediately under the window, Franklin's valet, Dick, in close discourse with Annette, the daughter of Madame Helvetius's gardener, a young maiden of seventeen, and a by no means unattractive specimen of those dark eyed daughters of France, frequently to be met with among the peasant girls of the environs of Paris, whose rustic beauty is not a little enhanced by the charm of a costume at once simple and picturesque.

Between the leaves of the lime-tree both Franklin and Madame Helvetius remarked that the heads of the two young people were so closely inclined to each other, that the fair hair of the American almost touched the black braided tresses of the maiden of Auteuil.

"Let me go Monsieur Richard!" said the damsel, the light olive complexion of her sunny cheeks, suffused the while with a richer blush of red. "If Madame knew that you were following me so, she would be sure to discharge me from her service. Let me go, I beseech you. O, I must go! There don't you hear? I think my father called me to water his peas. Yes, and besides, I have not yet made the cheese for Madame, nor yet skimmed the last night's milk."

"You will not understand me, Annette," was Richard's reply to the maiden. "What I say to you, I would as openly say in the presence of Madame Helvetius and Monsieur Franklin. Go call your father, if you will, and I will speak before him."

The young girl inclined her pretty head in silence, and as though her inmost heart responded in sympathy to the frank avowal of the young man's sentiments toward her, the slight motion made by the neat little foot that mechanically rubbed up the gravel path on which it rested, brought her somewhat yet closer to Richard. No further reply from her was needed.

"Well, then," continued the young man, "we will be married. I will open my mind to Monsieur Franklin. He will speak to Madame Helvetius, and then both will arrange matters with your father."

"Are you really in earnest, Richard?—You wish to marry me?"

"In all truth and earnestness I mean it, dear Annette. We will go to America, and you will see that it is the finest country in the whole world. Monsieur Franklin will give us some land, which I will cultivate. We shall be free there, and live content and happy. O my dear Annette! if you but knew my magnificent native land! how gloriously the sun rises above our forests, you would long, as ardently as I do, to be there; and the sooner the better, for I am sure you will learn to love it as I do. Compared to the grandeur of our rivers, your Seine and Rhone are merely insignificant brooklets; and in say one of our lakes you might sink all Paris, and not a vestige of it would be seen. Say but the word Annette, and before Monsieur Franklin leaves the house all may be settled."

"How?" said the maiden; her dark, soft eyes expanding with an expression of astonishment, and her whole countenance breathing as it were, the doubt and curiosity which Richard's description of his native land had awakened in her simple mind; above all, at hearing of lakes in which Paris would disappear, without leaving a trace of it. "Are there, then, such grand and beautiful things in your country?"

"Yes, Annette, indeed, and God knows that I speak the truth."

"And is there then also, a duck-pond like here at Auteuil?"

"What, the duck-pond of Auteuil?—That little pool of water you pass at the entrance to the village—that mere ditch planted round with sickly trees, and full of nothing else but frogs and toads?"

"Yes, yes," resumed the village lass, withdrawing herself gently from Richard's circling arm. "A duck-pond like here in Auteuil?"

"But, Annette! how can you then think of that duck-pond? You surely do not love me; and there is some young man in the village whom you like better than me."

"No, Richard. But the duck-pond of Auteuil is more to my taste than your great lakes in which you seem to have a fancy to put all Paris; and then your rivers, as compared to which the Seine, my loved, beautiful Seine, the river of my native land, is but an insignificant brooklet! Richard, I will be your wife; but you must remain in Auteuil!"

"What, Annette? You would have me leave Monsieur Franklin? Have me abandon forever my native land? That would be as though you would have me desert from the flag of my country? You would surely never require such a sacrifice from me, Annette? Reflect only a little that my country has need of all her citizens, however humble their station. That England which could not crush us out, may again become our enemy. Good heaven! what would Monsieur Franklin say to such a thing, were I to tell him I would not return with him to America? Annette, I love you; I would willingly lay down my life for you, if my country had no call for it. Annette! my beloved Annette! there is yet something greater, something higher than love, than happiness; and that is the duty we owe to the land that gave us birth. But you—you are not so situated. What can withhold you? France has no need of you, a humble maiden. You can leave your native land, and your absence would never be remarked; you, whose name is perhaps not known beyond Auteuil, and who never can render any service to your country.

"You are in error, Richard!" replied the maiden, rising from the seat, and assuming a graceful dignity of attitude that struck Richard with astonishment, as with the spontaneous impulse of all her genial nature, she exclaimed, "I, too, love my country,—our beautiful France! And I will that my children, should it please God that I have any, shall love it to, as I do! Have you never heard in your America, of that maiden of France, the humble village girl of Domremy, who delivered our land, too, from the yoke of those proud English, against whom you have fought? Duty, you say, calls you back to America. My happiness binds me to France. You love your lakes, your rivers, your forests; I love the duck pond of Auteuil, on whose banks I was born. As a child I sported by that pond side; and those sickly trees of which you spoke with such contempt, were witnesses to the pleasure of my youth. Adieu, Monsieur Richard! Fare ye well! I must go and water my father's peas, make the cheese for Madame Helvetius, and skim last night's milk."

With the native grace of her countrywoman, she curtsied slightly and slowly to her dumb-stricken and bewildered American lover; then, turning from the spot in visible emotion, and eyes suffused with irrepressible tears, she hastened to the kitchen garden, where her father had been engaged all the morning with his watering pot.

"My dear friend," said Madame Helvetius to Franklin, "you are a more valuable citizen than Richard; at least you are more useful to and needed by your country than he. Will you, can you resolve to give up your America entirely? Will you end your days in France near the duck-pond of Auteuil, far away from your great rivers, your immense lakes, your sun that rises so glorious, over your virgin forests? I, for my part,—I think like Annette. I prefer the little insignificant duck pond of Auteuil to that new world you have contributed so much to enfranchise. Your narrative of the dream is as charming as it was ingenious, she added, but, my dear friend, what say you to the little narrative we have just heard together?"

Franklin spoke not. After a short pause, in which he seemed to be collecting himself, he raised the hand of the woman he loved to his lips, kissed it with respectful tenderness, and immediately sought the apartment of the physician Cabanis, who was to prescribe for him the regimen he was to follow during the long voyage across the Atlantic, in alleviation of the suffering he always experienced on the passage.

A few days afterwards he embarked with Richard at Havre for America.

Annette left neither the duck-pond of Auteuil nor France. But after the lapse of twelve months she married one of her neighbors, who in 1789, joined the army, and was accompanied by her on the march to the frontiers. Under the Empire, Annette played a brilliant role; and her husband fell gloriously on the field of honor in 1812.

As far as relates to Madame Helvetius, "the good lady of Auteuil," proved herself constant both to her predilection for that quiet village and her resolution to remain a widow. Her house was still the favorite resort of the most distinguished men of the day. Benjamin Franklin had for successors, Turgot, Garat, Destut-Tracy, and Bernardin de Saint Pierre. When Bonaparte, then First Consul, was walking one day with her in her garden, she said to him, "General, you do not know how happy one can live on a small patch of this globe of scarcely three acres!" Those were truthful words from the lips of a woman who had rejected the hand of Benjamin Franklin, and preferred to live and die in modest retirement, in which, sustained throughout by the noble impulses of a kindly heart and gifted intellect, the love of her country was, next to that of God, the constant aspiration of her gentle soul.—Once a Week.

General Lee in Civil Life.

A correspondent to the Richmond Times writes as follows,—A visit to Lexington, pleasant on many accounts, is particularly so by reason of the fact that you hear on all sides incidents, anecdotes and personal reminiscences of the two great men whose names are so dear to the South. Every one loves to talk of Lee, and every one has something new to tell about Jackson.

I know not when in all my life, I passed so pleasant an evening as that at Col. Mesie's, where, for hours, the conversation related to his colleague and intimate friend, the leader of the Stonewall brigade. It is surprising what a number of characteristic incidents are remembered by almost every person you meet, and this fact alone is enough to prove that Jackson must have been no ordinary man.

With regard to General Lee, the following question and answers will afford you some idea of his way of life, and of the esteem in which he is held by all classes:—

"Do the college boys like him?"

"Like him? They love him."

"Well, does he like his position as president, or does he merely put up with it in view of something better?"

"Unfortunately he likes it. When the place was first offered him by letter, he then declined it, but after Judge Brockenbrough had visited him and explained to him fully the views and wishes of the faculty, he then accepted, and accepted in good faith, being satisfied that he could discharge the duties of the position, and also be of service to his country."

"Since he came he has been pleased, I suppose?"

"How could it be otherwise? Everybody delighted with him, as he must know that whenever he looks in the face of student, or cadet or citizen; besides he is conscious that he is doing good."

"He lives comfortably?"

"Quite so. He has a comfortable house well furnished, and while his salary is not large his every want is supplied, and often times anticipated."

"How do you mean?"

"Why, every stage that enters the village brings him a parcel or box, sent by express, and these boxes and parcels contain almost every imaginable thing, from books and pictures down to clothing and provisions."

"Where do these boxes come from?"

"From every quarter of the globe, you may say, but chiefly from Baltimore."

"Are the donors known?"

"Not always; indeed I do not think they generally are, but when known the gift is promptly acknowledged. The other day a little girl living some four miles in the country, sent the General a present of some fine apples, and the very next evening to her great joy and the amazement of her parents, General Lee rode up, alighted, entered the house, and returning his thanks, paid his little friend a visit of some length."

"Does he mingle freely with the people, and social?"

"He is not at all unsocial—he is free, yet cautious in conversation; but his visits are chiefly made to ladies."

"I suppose he is greatly annoyed by his visitors?"

"No, you can hardly say that. Sometimes his patience is tried by persons requesting him to sit for his picture or bust, and on one occasion he was heard to declare that he had rather stand the fire of half a dozen of the best marksmen in the army of Northern Virginia than be vexed by the continued solicitations of artists, photographers, and the like.

He was particularly worried a few days ago by an old lady from the South, who had insisted on having a lock of even "three threads" of his hair, which she had promised faithfully to carry to a young female friend in Alabama or Georgia."

"How did he manage to get rid of her, then?"

"After considering the difficulty he persuaded the old lady to take a photograph in place of the lock of hair. She was by no means satisfied, but the General was firm. He is also annoyed by letters on all sorts of subjects. One of these lately received was from an old woman in England who sent him a bull for $4, which a man of his name, Robert E. Lee, had borrowed from her in 1862. As the old lady was evidently in earnest, and the letter genuine, the General very promptly paid the bill."

AMUSEMENTS OF GREAT PERSONAGES.—A paragraph has been going the rounds, to the effect that the Prince Imperial of France, having desired to learn the art and mystery of printing, has had an amateur office fitted up for him, and that a gentleman well acquainted with the said art has been appointed to teach him. Princes must have their pursuits as well as other people, and printing is a very pretty trade provided you have not got to get a living at it. One of the French papers contradicts the report somewhat indignantly, but what is there to be indignant at?—The Duke of Edinburgh, when he was Prince Alfred, had a great fancy for the turning-lathe, and used to make all sorts of fancy articles for his friends. The Queen used to be very fond of photography, and the Princess Royal and Prince Alfred were also very fond of it. The Royal Family possess innumerable photographs of persons and places taken with their own hands.—But the Prince Imperial had an august predecessor in the art of printing in the late Prince Consort, who had a press, founts of type, and the whole paraphernalia of a small printing office; and some of his handiwork still remains in the Royal Family, where all the materials of his amateur workshop continue just as the lamented Prince left them.

"You can't do that again," as the pig said to the boy who cut off his tail.

What Will Become of Them?

[From the Pall Mall Gazette, July 1st.]

There is one class of persons, or rather of personages, who will suffer much if the smaller German States are all merged in their larger neighbors. Where are the kings, the queens, the princes, and the princesses of the rest of Europe to find a sufficiency of eligible candidates for their hands as wives and husbands? Already the supply is barely equal to the demand, and with the new fangled notions about our "common flesh and blood," as applied both to princes and working men, it is hard to imagine what will be the consequence of a large diminution in the number of German royalties. At the present time there are hardly any sovereignties in Europe in which a German prince or princess is not either king or queen or father-in-law or mother-in-law or married to the heir-apparent, or heir presumptive to the crown. It has hitherto, indeed, been the mission of Germany to supply Europe with theology, classical dictionaries and royal wives, and what is to happen when a dozen more thrones are abolished it is difficult to see. When the various Coburgs, who judiciously keep up a couple of religions in the various branches of their family, so as to be available both for Catholic and Protestant emergencies, have ceased to be themselves royal, the embarrassment will be really serious. Then, too, for obvious reasons the whole question of the validity of which they call Morganatic marriages must be investigated. If a common understanding as to these legality is not come to between the various governments of Europe at least some definite principle must be recognized among ourselves for future application. Supposing a case were to occur in which the legitimacy, that is, the royal character, of the offspring of a morganatic marriage were recognized in one instance, it would follow that its arbitrary rejection in another instance might lead to apparently bigamous complications of an unpleasant kind. At any rate, it is perfectly clear that the whole question as to the point at which the descendants of a royal ancestry cease to be royal, and therefore assortable as husbands and wives to actual royalty, must be defined.

The Wars of Forty-nine Years in Europe.

A writer in the London Star says:—"The following statistics will be read with much interest at this moment:—Between the year 1814 and 1864, 2,782,000 men were killed in battle. Of these 2,148,000 were Europeans, and 144,000 inhabitants of the other countries. Thus, during forty-nine years the average annual number who thus perished amounts to 43,800 men, not including the victims of disease engendered by the consequences of war. The Crimean war (1852-56) was naturally the most destructive, 511,000 men having perished during its course; 176,000 of these died on the field of battle; 336,000 from disease in hospital—256,000 being Russians, 98,000 Turks, 107,000 French, 45,000 English, 2,600 Italians, and 2,500 Greeks. The war in the Caucasus (282960) cost the lives of 330,000; the Agio Indian war (1857-59), 196,000; the Russian and Turkish war (1828-29), 193,000; the Polish insurrection of 1831, 190,000; the civil war in Spain, which raged from 1833 to 1840, 172,000; the war of Greek independence (1821-29), to which Lord Byron fell a victim, 148,000; the various French campaigns in Algeria, from 1830 to 1850, 146,000; the Hungarian revolution 142,000; the Italian war of 1859-60, 129,874, which last number may be thus analyzed—96,874 fell on the field of battle, and 33,000 died of disease; of which 59,664 were Austrians, 30,220 French, 23,600 Italians, 14,010 Neapolitans, and 2,370 Romans.

A curious result may be deduced from the above—namely, that a greater number perished by the disease incident to a camp life than are actually killed by shot and shell or any other engine of destruction. As to the sums of money swallowed up by these wars, it is impossible to arrive at any thing approaching a correct calculation.—The Crimean war cost Russia 2,328 millions of francs (one million of francs is equal to 200,000), France 1,348,000 England, 1,320 millions, Turkey, 1,090,millions Austria for mere demonstrations, 470 millions. Thus in two years and a half, 6,526 millions francs were spent.

The Italian war of 1856 cost France 345 millions, Austria 730 millions, Italy 410 millions. Thus in two months 1,458 millions were swallowed up.

The fortifications at Hurst, near Portsmouth, England, are nearly finished. They are of enormous magnitude and strength. Their total cost will not be less than £20,000,000 sterling! There will be upwards of fifty steel 300 pounder Armstrong guns mounted, between £3,000 and £4,000 each, with a range of about five miles. The sea wall upwards of a quarter of a mile in length, is built of gigantic blocks of granite, ten and twelve tons weight each. Altogether, when finished, it will be the largest artificial fort in the world.

The harvest prospects in Ireland, says a Dublin correspondent, are the very finest. The late rains and the strong sun that followed them, have produced an amazing growth within a short space of time, and all the appearances are presented which bespeak abundant and early crops. There is a large breadth of cereals in Ireland this year, especially of wheat; the flax crop is expected to be very good, and the potatoes is in a highly flourishing condition.

Gen. Woods, in command of the United States troops in Georgia, officially reports a case of lynch law in Wilkinson country, which equals the incredible stories of the old slavery regime. A negro, under arrest for murder, was taken from the jail, seized by a mob of two or three hundred persons, and by their unanimous vote was chained to a tree, and after his ears were cut off, was tortured to death by burning. A reliable correspondent says that the colored people were compelled to pile the fagots around the victim; and after he was burnt to death, his body was thrown to the dogs.

PROGRESS OF CATHOLICISM IN AMERICA.—At the laying of the corner stone of a new Catholic Church in Detroit a few days since, it was stated by the Rev. Mr. Kilroy in his sermon that 80 years ago there were but 60,000 Catholics and 25 priests in the United States, while now there are 4,400,000 members of the Church and 2,500 priests, and that the present Bishop has founded no less than six churches, and has added 40 priests during his ministry.

On Saturday last, eleven messages were forwarded from New York city to Europe via Atlantic Cable. The tariff for these eleven messages was $1,196. Most of the daily papers call for a reform in the management of the cable, particularly in regard to the press despatches, and complain of the excessive charges. No wonder that they complain. Opposition will, however, doubtless, set this right before a long time elapses

EUROPEAN.

The hopes of peace are day by day becoming darker. The Belligerents are scarcely brought to their right mind. Austria has not yet been humbled enough to give up, nor does Prussia yet feel the burden of supporting her immense armies. Italy, too, has not been awarded that military glory she so much desires, for she desires glory as much as territory. France, however, is the obstacle in the way of peace at present. The Atlantic cable brings us the news that "Napoleon has demanded from Prussia the rectification of the French frontier by its extension to the Rhine as it was marked prior to its disturbance in 1814. The military and naval preparations which are being carried on in France, induce the belief that the Emperor will make war if his demand is not peaceably complied with." That Prussia will accede to these demands is more than can be expected or desired; she has been victorious in her late encounters, she has a powerful and well equipped army in the field, and an ambitious leader in the person of her Prime Minister who will not easily succumb to French influence. There is a movement on foot in Berlin to reconstruct Germany on liberal principles, such as will induce a hearty co-operation of the states that are to be annexed, by guaranteeing to them the constitutional rights of each state, and if this can be successfully accomplished, Prussia will be in a position to offer a bold front to the designs of the French Emperor. Italy is still placing her troops in strong positions, probably to be ready for any emergency, although on these matters, reports are contradictory.

Another Gunpowder Plot.

News by the Atlantic Cable informs us that an attempt was made about the 9th inst. to blow up the two Houses of Parliament, in England. 10 packages of powder were discovered under the buildings, and a partly burned fuse near by; supposed to be another Guy Fawkes attempt.

The Treatment Upper Canada Receives.

In the estimates, the nice little sum of $191,000 is found for the purposes of indemnifying the Eastern Townships, Lower Canada, for certain sums in payment of seigneorial claims. On the item of this $191,000, Hon. Mr. Brown asked explanations. Mr. Galt merely replied that the matter had been fully discussed, and that the auditors had gone into it carefully and had concluded that the claim should be paid with interest since 1859.

Mr. McKenzie asked why this should be paid to those Townships and not to the Municipalities of the West. Mr. Galt replied that reserve money, to the amount of $70,000, that used to be paid to indebted Municipalities had been paid to Upper Canada.

It appears from the debate, that an agreement had been made at the Quebec conference, that the Lower Province would indemnify the Townships after Confederation. There are very large amounts due Upper Canada, $1,400,000, yet not a word about paying this sum, while Lower Canada is to receive $191,000 to pay off her liabilities to the Townships. The matter is not whether this amount is or is not due to the Townships, but whether Lower Canada should or should not pay it herself, it being so agreed at the Quebec Conference. It was also reasonably set forth that if this amount be given to Lower Canada, a proportionate amount should be given to Upper Canada, but not a word is heard about doing this. To give our readers a view of the reasoning set up in favor of this piece of injustice, we copy from a report of the debate:—

Hon. Mr. Galt said it was a debt of Canada until Confederation should be consummated. This had been admitted.

Hon. Mr. Brown said the debt in Upper Canada had stood since 1855, eleven years, and not a sixpence of principal or interest had been paid. This was postponed till after Confederation, while, before we broke up, all that was due to the Township must be paid them. And it was not merely paying them and postponing the amount to Upper Canada—it was making Upper Canada pay more than three-fourths of the amount for the Townships, while her own debt was left to be dealt with in the distribution of accounts under the arrangement of the Confederation scheme.

Mr. Ferguson went on to suggest that if the $191,000 was now to be paid to Lower Canada, something should be paid to Upper Canada also. The two ought to go hand in hand. He hoped the member for South Oxford would prepare a motion, the effect of which would be to do justice to Upper Canada. If that could be agreed to, there could be no objection to granting the $191,000.

Hon. Mr. Brown, after some further explanations of the position of the question, moved that the large sum of $191,000, as seigneorial indemnity to the Townships of Lower Canada, be not concurred in—the payment of said indemnity having been assigned, under the arrangement for the Union of the British North American Provinces, as a liability of the Local Government of Lower Canada.

Hon. Mr. Galt objected that the motion was not in order because it contained what was of the nature of a preamble.

The Speaker ruled that the motion was in order.

Hon. Mr. Galt then argued against the motion on the ground that it alleged that a certain agreement was entered into by the Quebec Conference. The House could not properly recognise such an agreement. It could only recognize what was on the Statute book.

Mr. Gibbs said the case was that of two persons in a partnership about to be dissolved. There was a debt due by the firm to each of the parties; and the manner in which the late Finance Minister desired to deal with the matter was as if one of the partners took the cash assets of the firm to pay his claim, while the other did not get a shilling but was left to take his chance after the affairs of the firm were wound up. (Hear, hear.) He felt bound to vote for the amendment.

Messrs. Macdougall and Dunkin spoke in support of the item.

The House divided on Mr. Brown's amendment. Yeas, 17; nays, 68.

YEAS—Bowman, Brown, Burwell, Gibbs, Jones, (North Leeds,) Mackenzie, Magill, McKellar, Munro, Oliver, Parker, Rymal, Scatcherd, Scoble, Wallbridge, (North Hastings), White, Wells—17.

NAYS—Archambeault, Ault, Bell, Bellerose, Bourassa, Blanchet, Cameron, (Peel,) Carling, Carter, Cartwright Cauchon, Chapais, Cockburn, Cowan, DeBoucherville, Denis, Dickson, Dorion, (Hochelaga,) Duckett, Dufresne, Dunkin, Ferguson, (South Simcoe,) Galt, Geoffrion Harwood Higginson, Holton, Howland, Huot, Jackson, Jones, (South Leeds,) Lafrenboise, Langevin, Le Boutillier, Macdonald, (Attorney-General,) Macdougall, McGiverin, McIntyre, Morris, Morrison, Paquet, Pope, Poulin, Powell, Rankin Raymod, Robitaille, Shanly, Somerville, Stirton, Sylvain, Taschereau, Thompson, Walsh, Wright, (Ottawa)—56.

The item was then passed on a division.

An effort was made to limit the No. of days for carrying on an election from two to one, but by 12 votes of a majority it was agreed to continue the old system of two days polling. Very little can be gained or lost by the retention of this in the statutes.

A bill has been passed that makes Reeves elective by the whole municipality which they are to represent. We do not know that much profit will be reaped from this change in our municipal law. The choice of the Councillors, heretofore, has been reasonably good, and we are not yet able to learn how the people of a whole municipality will be able to make a better decision than was done by the members elect selecting one of those whom the people had already chosen. The nomination of Reeve, if we mistake not, will take place on the last Monday of December in each year. If only one candidate is proposed there will be no election for Reeve; but if two there must be an election of necessity.

The time honored custom of taking a show of hands at nominations for M. P. P's is also done away with as useless, as really it was.

A WISE PRECAUTION.

It is now generally believed that we are to have more Fenian trouble. Those out casts and dregs of creation, but especially of the United States, are not yet satisfied with what they have done, as they are supposed to be meditating another invasion of this Province. In view of this, the government are calling out two or three battalions of volunteers—infantry and cavalry, and regulars, together with a battery of artillery. This force is to be stationed on the Niagara frontier, under canvas, where they will undergo their regular eight days drill, when in due time they will be replaced by others. The Globe says:—

"The 10th Royals, and Governor General's Body Guard leave this city on Friday morning, as part of the corps of observation to be thus formed, to be joined by the 13th from Hamilton, with that portion of the regular force ordered into camp. The recent determination of the Militia authorities to place the whole volunteer force under canvas has resulted in the movement taking the form it has; but the concentration on the Niagara frontier is no doubt dictated by prudential motives. The Government have been actively in communication with the Commander of the Forces in making these arrangements, and by the time the volunteers move everything will be in readiness for their reception."

COMPLIMENTARY SUPPER TO CAPTAIN MCNAUGHTON.—A complimentary supper was given last night, in the Firemen's Hall, to Captain McNaughton, on the occasion of his being about to remove to Lindsay. Mr. McNaughton has been Captain of the Fire Company almost ever since he came to Peterboro, and most untiringly did he attend to every thing relating to the affairs of the Company. His skill and energy at fires was acknowledged by all. This parting tribute of respect is most cordially entered into by every member of the Company. We regret that our going to press very early on account of the holiday will not allow us to give particulars this week.

FIRE COMPANY.—At the monthly meeting of Protection Fire Company, held on the 7th instant, it was resolved that a vote of thanks be tendered to the following gentlemen, for donations to the Company:—A. Williams, Esq., for the sum of $20; S. Dixon, Esq., $10; and Richard Cook, Esq., $5; also that a vote of thanks be tendered to Mr. E. C. Lane of New York (formerly a member of the Company) for a number of beautiful transparencies presented by him, and that he be made an honorary member of this Company.

CRICKET.—At a match played between Port Hope and Peterborough clubs, we learn that Port Hope was victorious—Port Hope, 199; Peterboro, 64. We trust that Peterboro will bear it with grace and await an opportunity to manfully avenge the defeat.

Because of the Holiday, to-day, and the Printers wishing to enjoy it in common with others, we have been forced to omit some items, and among them the minutes of the Monaghan Council, which we will give next week.

The Fenian prisoners taken in the late raid are likely to be tried at the approaching assizes, as eight men of the 47th have been retained at Toronto to be witnesses against the raiders.

Dennis Brennan, lately tried in Port Hope for sympathising with Fenianism, is out on bail, and is again in Peterborough. We don't see that the incarceration has made any change in his outward appearance.

Provincial Agricultural Association.

The annual exhibition of this Association will be held this year at TORONTO, on the 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th and 28th days of September. The Prize list is extensive, and every arrangement is being made for the convenience of exhibitors and visitors.

Entries for horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry may be made on or before the 18th of August. Grain, field roots and other farm products, agricultural implements, machinery and manufactures generally must be entered previous to or on Saturday, September 1st, three weeks preceding the Show. Horticultural products, ladies' work, the fine arts, &c., may be entered up to Saturday, September 15th, one clear week preceding the Show.

Exhibitors are particularly requested to take notice that it is absolutely requisite that the entries be made at the dates above mentioned, in order to afford sufficient time to examine the entry papers, and to correspond with parties, where necessary, for the correction of errors and omissions.

With a view to economy, instead of a ticket good for the week, members will be furnished with 4 small tickets, which will have to be given up on passing into the grounds; and after these 4 tickets have been used the members will have to purchase, same as non-members. Life members and members of the press will be furnished as heretofore.

PAYING THE PREMIUMS.

The Treasurer will be prepared to commence paying the premiums on Saturday, September 29th, at 9 a. m., and parties who shall have prizes awarded them are particularly requested to apply for them before leaving Toronto, or leave a written order with some person to receive them, stating the articles for which prizes are claimed. Persons entitled to cash premiums must apply for them at the Secretary's office of that department in which they are awarded, who will give orders on the Treasurer for the amount. These orders must be endorsed, as they will be payable to order, not to bearer, and on presentation to the Treasurer, properly endorsed, will be paid either in cash or by cheque on the bank. Orders for premiums not applied for on Saturday as above, will be given by the Secretaries, and the amount forwarded by the Treasurer, on receipt of proper instructions.

Provender for live stock will be provided at cost price.

The first prize tickets will be Red; the second blue; the third Yellow; the fourth White; Extras, Green.

Dead Body Exposed.

We are informed by parties who have been to the back lakes that the body of the unfortunate man, Samway, who got drowned about a week since, is now lying exposed between two rocks or large stones where it had been placed by some one. Our informant tells us that the birds are to be seen by passersby picking the flesh off the body, where it lies exposed. Surely some human being can be found to bury the body, and if no one can be found to undertake it, if we mistake not, it becomes the duty of some Coroner to see that it is buried.

Fatal Accident.

On Thursday last, a farmer named Robert Sanderson, who resided about a mile from Omemee was accidently killed at the Omemee Station. No one saw the accident, but it is supposed that while getting on the train he in some way stumbled and fell across the rail, and the cars passed over his legs. He died a few minutes after, leaving a wife and two children to mourn his untimely end. He was under the influence of liquor at the time. When will men learn wisdom?

"The End thereof is Death."

On Tuesday last, Angus Kennedy, who kept a grocery and liquor store on Hunter Street, passed from this to the spirit world. For some time he has been drinking freely, to such a degree as to bring on delirium tremens, and, sad to relate, is reported to have made his departure to the untried abodes of the dead in that awful state. This is another victim taken away. Surely this will prove a warning to some one.

Agricultural.

The Fall Show of the East Durham Agricultural Society, will be held at Millbrook, the second week of October.

The Fall Show of this County will be held at Lakefield, on Thursday the 11th of October.

A correspondent from the back country, in answer to the question, "What's to be done with the Fenian prisoners?" says he would make a railroad across British North America, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, cutting through the Rocky Mountains, and make the Fenian prisoners perform the labor, that thus their evil might be turned into good, in opening up a fertile country for settlement. He further asks what should be done with a man who, last year on a government road, and while in government pay, said, "To h——l with the Queen?" and answers it much as above. We regret that the communication is not in form to be published.

LONDON SOCIETY and the CHURCHMAN'S FAMILY MAGAZINE have been received from Messrs. Chewett & Co., Toronto; they are both popular magazines. This number of the Churchman contains interesting reading matter, both secular and religious. The contents are—"A Holiday sketch," "Ritualism," "The Church and the Wesleyans," "Secular illustrations of Scripture texts," "The Holiday task," "Summer reminiscences of Yorkshire life and manners," "Plain words on Biblical criticism," "Servants vs. Mistresses," "A Village sketch," "Our Clerical Club." All the magazines may be obtained from the Messrs. Chewett & Co., or at Graham & Stratton's, Peterborough.

A RUMOUR.—On Monday a rumour was current here, that several thousand rounds of ammunition which had been shipped at Rochester and destined from some place westerly, had been siezed at Port Hope.—Upon enquiry, however, the ammunition was found to be directed to the Captain of a Volunteer Company in Oshawa or Whitby, and of course from our own authorities.

A man, named Alex. McConnel, was hung at Cleveland on the 10th instant, for the murder of Rosa Colvin. After committing the deed he fled to Ottawa, whither he was traced by United States officers. He was extradited, taken to Cleveland, Ohio, tried, found guilty and on the 10th suffered the penalty of his crime.

CHANGES IN THE NORMAL SCHOOL.—The Cornwall Freeholder says that the Rev. Mr. Davies, lately Principal of the Grammar School, Cornwall, has been appointed to be second master of the Normal School, Toronto; Mr. Sangster taking the place of head master, which place is rendered vacant by Mr. Robertson resigning.

The Anglican Synod has concluded its sittings on Tuesday. During the sitting several very important subjects were under consideration. One of the most important was the matter of the election of a Coadjutor Bishop. One party was desirous of referring the choice to the Bishops of England, while a second thought it best to elect one from among the ministers of the diocese. The first scheme being believed to be illegal, was abandoned, and in view of the second, the 19th day of September is appointed for holding the election. Let us hope that the electors will be guided by wisdom so that they may choose a man in whom they will hereafter have general confidence, and by whose wisdom and prudence the affairs of the Church will be directed so as to fulfil the great end of all such organizations, viz:—The honor of the head of the Church and the good of the members. The diocese of Huron has been most happy in the choice made. The diocese of Ontario not so happy. We trust that the diocese of Toronto may act as wisely as Huron did.

Sabbath School Association of Canada.

A Sabbath School Convention of Ministers, Superintendents, Teachers and Friends of Sabbath Schools will be held in Dr. Wilkes' church, Montreal, on the 4th, 5th and 6th of September, proximo. A very general invitation is extended to the friends of Sabbath Schools.

The several Railway and Steamboat Companies have agreed to convey persons attending the Convention for one fare, with the exception of the Great Western, which charges one quarter fare on return. Delegates will pay their fare to Montreal, and, on leaving, be furnished with certificates which will entitle them to return free.

Delegates and Visitors are requested to give notice of their intended presence at the Convention to Mr. F. E. Grafton, Bookseller, Montreal, that arrangements may be made for their comfort during the Convention.

On arriving in Montreal, they will please go to Zion Church, Dr. Wilkes', where the Local Committee will attend in the basement to give them introductions to friends, who will kindly receive and entertain them during their stay.

A Prize of $20 will be given to the writer of the best Essay, to be read before the Convention, on "The Sabbath School Teacher, his place and power." The Essay not to exceed the size of an ordinary eight page tract, and to become the property of the Association.

It is requested that the Essays be distinguished by suitable mottoes, and that the real names of writers be enclosed separately, in a sealed envelope, to be opened after the decision of the Judges.

The Rev. J. M. Gibson, F. A. Torrance, Esq., and Rev. Jenkins, D. D, have been requested to examine the Essays and award the Prize. The Essays to be sent to the Rev. J. M. Gibson, of Montreal, not later than the 28th of August.

Those who purpose attending are requested also to give the following subjects, proposed for discussion, due consideration:—

1. Teachers' Training and Preparation Class Meetings.
2. The gathering in and retaining of neglected Children.
3. Infant Means of Grace.
4. Libraries.
5. Singing.
6. Retention of Senior Scholars.

Return of Dr. King to Fort Robinson.

On Thursday last, Capt. King, of the Welland Canal Field Battery, returned to his home, from Buffalo, where he has remained ever since he received his wound, during the Fenian raid. His fellow villagers determined to receive him with becoming honors, and, accordingly, he was received amidst the most unbounded enthusiasm.—There was a general holiday in the village; flags, banners and evergreens everywhere abounded, and several arches were erected, on which were mottoes of "Welcome to our brave Captain," "Honor to the Brave," &c. Crowds from Port Dalhousie, St. Catherines and Thorold; also from Port Colborne, Welland and Allenburg several infantry companies and the Captain's own Field Battery were present. Down the river Welland a distance of three miles was placed the steam yacht, Bennett; and another boat, the L. M. C., was stationed at the mouth of the river, both to signal to the expectant crowd at Port Robinson on the approach of the yacht, Wave, owned by Mr. Kilpatrick, of Chippawa, which was to convey Captain King home. By this boat a deputation from the village, consisting of Dr. Frazer, ex-M. P. P., James Cumming, Esq., Sheriff Hobson, Jas. W. Cowan, Esq., and S. Clarke, Esq., proceeded to Buffalo, where, taking their guest, Professor King and Dr. Minor, his medical attendant, on board, they proceeded to Fort Erie. The Warden of the county was waiting and presented the following welcome on his return to his own county:—

To Captain Richard S. King,
Commanding Welland Field Battery.

The inhabitants of the country of Welland have very great pleasure in being allowed to welcome you on your return home at this the scene of your heroic conduct on the 2nd of June last, in which you and the gallant men of the Welland Canal Field Battery, and the Dunnville Naval Brigade, made yourselves memorable in Canadian history by the daring and heroic stand made by you against the fire of an enemy ten times your number, and we also desire to convey our sincere sympathy for the sufferings of you and the noble and gallant men of your battery and of the Naval Brigade who were with you in that engagement, and earnestly hoping that you will soon be able to recover health.

I am,
EDWARD LEE,
Warden.

Fort Erie, Augt. 9, 1866.

Dr. King made a short reply, confessing that he hardly felt able to express his feelings on such an unusual occasion. When he left home on the morning of the 1st of June last, in command of the Welland Canal Field Battery, his brave companions in arms, to repel the invaders of our common country, he little thought he would be now returning home under the present circumstances. He expressed his gratification at receiving the flattering reception in this village, from the leading men of this county, where they first encountered the enemy. In the present state of his health, he was compelled to be brief. However, he desired, at some future period, to have the pleasure of personally seeing them. He thanked them for their sympathy on this occasion.

Captain Verner, of Clifton, and Dr. Verner then made short addresses, when the party proceeded, touching at Chippewa, where congratulatory sentiments were exchanged. Proceeding up the Welland, at half-past five the battery took up the signal given by the Bennett, and fired a salute in honour of the wounded hero, the three yachts shortly afterwards gliding prettily up the river to the Welland Railway dock, where a dense mass of human beings was assembled. A general cheer was given as Dr. King was recognised sitting on deck. The doctor was accompanied by Jas. Cummings, Esq., Chippewa, Dr. Frazer, Sheriff Hobson, James McLoppin, Esq., Prof. King, Captain Verner, S. Clarke, Esq., R. Kirkpatrick, Esq., Mr. Fleet, and Dr. King, jr., while assembled on the dock were Messrs. F. H. Medcalf, Mayor of Toronto, Duncan McFarlane, D. Coleman, and others, of Port Robinson. Being lifted off the boat Dr. King was carefully seated in the carriage of T. C. Street, Esq., M. P. P., in waiting, when he proceeded to address his men, expressing his great pleasure at meeting the old battery which he had until lately commanded. He expressed himself, heart and soul, a Canadian; though not a native of the country, he was attached to it. He said they could have done better than they did but for the way in which they were commanded. Dr. King complained bitterly of the management of the commander; but said he knew they did their best, and that there is not a man among them that would not stand by him. He wanted to take cordwood off the dock and lay it on the boat high enough to shoot from, so as to form a chevaux-de-frieze, but did not get permission. He had to see these men cut down and barbarously treated. He did not know where a better fight was made than by the men at Fort Erie. If they looked back to the days of their forefathers, they saw earnestness at Fort Erie equal to theirs. He was an Irishman by birth, but a Canadian by adoption, and we will defend Canada to the last. But said he, I thank the Fenians for this (raising his leg, of which the stump from a little below the knee remained.) He hoped he should have enough or a piece of a leg left to lead them against the Fenians again. After firing his last pistol shot, when his sword was gone and he was wounded, he threw himself into the river to die rather than let the scoundrels catch him.

Rousing cheers, again and again repeated, greeted Dr. King's speech; after which, a procession being formed, the party, headed by the band, proceeded through the village to Dr. King's house. At the house another halt was made, when Dr. King addressed the immense crowd assembled in similar language, saying that he had intended to die before falling into the hands of the Fenians, but by the pleasure of the Almighty he was saved. He again thanked the members of the Welland Canal Field Battery, and said that 68 men engaged 800 of the scoundrels, and were able to shoot down five and wound nine. The material is in Canada to drive these Fenians out of the country if they come again. There is not better material for fighting than the men of Canada.—Globe.

Despatches from New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Gen. John H. Gleeson, Capt. Candon and Major Comerford have arrived from Ireland. The two former were released by the government on condition of leaving at once for America. While confined they had a correspondence with Mr. West, U. S. Consul at Dublin, who admitted they were American citizens, but stated that the Lord Lieutenant would deal with them the same as ordinary subjects.

Mr. Crawford comes as an envoy to Mr. Stephens, and says the numerical strength and hopes of the Fenians in Ireland are better now than when Stephens was there; that the people are determined to fight, aid or no aid from America. Their confidence in Stephens is unabated, and that they condemn the conduct of the factions in America.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct. Aug. 10.

The citizens of Bridgeport, Ct., have collected the sum of $3,200 for the Portland sufferers.

NEW ORLEANS, August 10th.—There were 24 deaths from cholera in this city from 6 a. m. yesterday to 6 a.m. to-day.

The steamers Adam and Saratoga were destroyed by fire last night, loss $50,000, about half of which was insured.

By the Atlantic Cable.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The following despatches were received by the associated press last evening:—

"LONDON, Aug. 8.—The relations between the governments of Austria and Italy are assuming a threatening attitude.

"LIVERPOOL, Aug. 8.—The ship Danube, Capt. Broughton, of Portsmouth, which sailed from Bristol on the 27th ult. for New York, has been burned at sea. All the passengers and crew were saved and brought to this port by the ship Compeer, from Mobile."

It will be remembered that, at the Berlin Assizes last Spring, George Seddons, keeper of the Black Horse Inn, Hamilton, was put upon his trial as an accomplice in the attempted robbery of the Gore Bank in Galt. The evidence against the prisoner at that trial was not strong, and the judge summed up strongly in his favor; but the jury brought in a verdict similar to the Scotch one of "Not proven"—the foreman saying they "had nae doubt of his guilt, but they didna think it was proven." The judge, of course, did not accept this verdict, but directed the jury, if they did not think the crime proven by the evidence, to bring in a verdict of Not Guilty. This, however, the jury did not do, but after a short consultation, returned a verdict of "Guilty." Under these circumstances a new trial was granted and the case was brought before the judges at Toronto at a late sitting, who after a thorough sifting of the evidence, sustained the verdict rendered, and ordered that Seddons be brought up for sentence at next court.

SAD CALAMITY.—We have to announce a melancholy occurrence which took place on Tuesday night last in the 3rd concession of Sydenham. From some cause unknown, the barn of Mr. James Murray was consumed by fire. There was at the time, sleeping in the granary, Mr. Murray's four sons, aged respectively 17, 15, 13, and 11 years, one only of whom—the eldest—escaped the devouring flames. He was awakened by some noise, which he at first supposed was his father calling him to work. On musing himself up he heard a crackling noise which he supposed to be hail falling on the roof, and on getting up to look out he saw that the barn was on fire. In the excitement of the moment, instead of returning to see that his three brothers were awakened, ran to alarm his father and the rest of the family, but although he met him a few rods from the barn and returned at once, yet, sad to relate, it was found impossible to reach them.—Owen Sound Advertiser.

PRESS ASSOCIATION.—The Annual meeting of the Press Association will be held in Montreal on Wednesday, August 22nd, at 10 o'clock, A. M. After the meeting the party will proceed to Quebec by Steamer or Rail, and thence to the Saugenay. The different railways of the province have agreed to pass all members of the Association over their respective roads. Application for Passes over the Great Western to be made to Wm. Gillespy, Esq., Hamilton; and by other roads to M. Bowell, President, Belleville, or W. T. Cox, Secretary, Goderich.

Some of the Protestant residents at Murray Bay have expressed strong feelings on account of the parish priest forbidding his parishioners to let any building or room, directly for the purpose of Protestant worship. At a meeting of Protestants there it was decided to erect a Church.

By late arrivals from England it is said that there is reason to fear that Cholera had invaded England in earnest. Outbreaks at Liverpool and Southampton had assumed a decided character.

THE EDITOR AND THE "DEVIL."

AN INTERVIEW;
OR,
The "Review" and its Contributors.

A POEM.

Black midnight reigned; a starless sky,
All dark and dismal, was on high;
The mustering storm came roaring forth,
With dreadful fury, from the North;
The Ottonabee, swol'n with treble sway,
Held by the town its rapid way;
Its thundering rush upon the breeze,
Seem'd like the sound of distant seas;
Grim ghosts of midnight, whirlwind driven,
Howl'd through the darken'd arch of heaven;
Fleet flash'd the lightning thru' the wold,
And harsh, deep-muttering thunder roll'd.

Such was the night, and such the time,
When lo! a scribbler, all sublime,
Went walking slowly down a street
Where dirt and darkness nightly meet;
He gained the meridian of the place,
The lights went out before his face,
Thus from a corner, dark and drear,
Where oft the drunkard draws his beer,
Bounded the Dv'll, for deeds array'd
Dark as the sternest Stygian shade—
"Stand, ho!" has sable worship cried;
"Stand, ho!" the echoes loud replied;
And thundering pistons of the wind,
With dread, on Nature's back reclin'd,
As the lone street and walls around
Returned the harsh infernal sound.

Like Autumn's last leaf on the spray,
Trembl'd the scribbler's staggering clay;
Back reeling to the wall he went,
And on his damp posteriors leant.
There as he stood, the grim old chiel
Came clattering up with airy heel;
His waist so small, his limbs so handy,
You'd ta'en 'em for a modern dandy,
Or some poor wretch whom stagnant trade
And fortune bad, bad Beshrew made;
Yet who his motion wild and furious,
In whole a figure truly curious.

But when "Great Galt and John A.'s" hind
Beheld his benefactor kind—
A friend of many years acquaintance—
As flies some drunken wight's repentance
Before the glass, so fled the fright
Of our worthy at the welcome sight;
Yet still he kept his resting place,
With solemn, serious, saint-like face.

After such complimenting sweet
As passes oft when kinafolk meet—
While through his ribs the night winds sang—
Thus pour'd the Dell his wild harangue:
("Satan reproving sin.")

"You truckling, low, mean son of earth,
"A baser paper ne'er had birth;
"Your Ottawa patrons, one and all,
"Are creatures merely formed to crawl;
"Unblest with wings to speed their flight
"To patriotism's noble height;
"Or the inspiring flame to feel
"That lights the lamp of common weal;
"Plain want of truth and public spirit
"Passes with them for real merit;
"While the Review roars with ceaseless yell—
"'Things as they are—all's well! all's well!!'"

"And were the whole assembled here,
"By Styx and all the gods I'd swear
"Your contributors would bring disgrace
"On any people, town or place;
"Such hath ne'r our world defil'd
"Since first she rods from Chaos wild;
"Unmatched for lies, should search explore
"Earth to her very utmost shore,
"And chief of all, I'll name him here,
"He calls himself 'A Volunteer.'"

The Devil done—stretch'd forth his form—
Died the shrill sound along the storm;
And the Editor, now, as ceas'd the noise,
Re-raised his sweet melodious voice
In praise of him, his stay and joy,
The smart, aspiring lawyer's boy.

Awake, ye sons of song, arise!
Each power invoke in earth and skies;
Tune well your harps—hark! hark! Fame cries,
While hosts appear,
Among them all he'll take the prize,
"A Volunteer."

His name on every sephyr scuds,
'Tis heard in wilds and loneliest woods;
Sweet Otonabee, gentlest of our floods,
Fast onward bear
To tell the ocean's guardian gods
Of "A Volunteer."

Thou moon, meek mistress of the night;
Ye stars that roll in radiance bright;
Ye comets, whose revolving flight
Takes many a year,
Rejoice in our great dazzling light—
Our "Volunteer."

Sound him, thou sea! like thunder roar,
Lift thy deep voice along the shore,
The same let all on earth encore!
And sing ye sphere,
As through realms of space ye soar,
Our "Volunteer."

At birth of this great lawyer lad,
Strange things they say were seen and heard—
The sun rose east, grass deck'd the sward—
In gossip's ear
Doors on the oilless hinges roar'd
Out, "Volunteer."

"Stop!" says the dell; but as he spoke,
Was heard the clarion of a cock;
Spectres and spirits fled amain,
And the Dell the foremost of the train.

"Now, since your goose," said our Editor witty,
"I'll send you per mail the rest of my ditty."

Slow murmuring home went our editor lad,
With grief oppressed, with heart right sad;
"Tell it not in Gath," by G——d
It is a shame,
He'd bring a stain and odium bad
On Volunteers' name.

And as he raised his plaintive wail
The walls gave back the mournful tale.

SCOTIA.

ARRIVAL OF GUNBOATS.—Two of the gunboats recently sent out by the British government, the 'Cherub' and the 'Heron,' reached here during last night, and came to anchor off the city. This morning no little excitement was got up in consequence, and the docks were lined with groups of citizens anxious to get a sight of the welcome visitors. The 'Heron' had all her flags up, and presented a gay appearance. During the morning the 'Cherub' came into Berry's wharf to coal, preparatory to leaving for the upper lakes, and was met at the wharf by a number of people, very few of whom, however—not more than half a dozen—were permitted to go aboard. The flag ship, 'Britomart' met with an accident somewhere about Cornwall and had to be left behind to be towed up. The 'Cherub' is commanded by Captain Huntley; Mr. Love second master. She carries a 110 pounder and 40 pounder Armstrong guns. The 'Heron' is similarly equipped, and is commanded by Captain Stephenson; second master, Mr. Brown. They each have a complement of 46 men. The fourth vessel of the fleet remains at Halifax. The 'Britomart into the harbor shortly after noon. She will go on the ways here for repair.—Her commander is Captain Ellington; second master, Mr. Stevens: and her armament the same as that of the 'Cherub' and 'Heron.' The 'Cherub,' no coaling, will probably leave to-morrow. All these vessels are represented as having made fair and pleasant passages across the Atlantic, experiencing no decidedly rough we are no places of call, like Malta or Aden, or the Cape, or St. Helena, for nearly 3,000 miles of open and tremendous water. If the trident is to pass from her grasp she might as well loose Portsmouth as lose Halifax—she might as well give up the narrow seas that surround our ancestral Islands as give up the Gulf and river St. Lawrence. To continue an Atlantic power, she must remain to some extent an American power—a British-American power. (Cheers.) Before this day twelve-months, Mr. President, I trust we shall hail, in Ottawa, the first Parliament of an United British American—that we shall see the first chapter of a new volume in the history of the Empire worthily commenced. But that we may see all that we desire in this respect accomplished, let me include as I began by earnestly advising that we proclaim this new Capital, as between races and creeds, and sections, neutral ground; and that we all endeavour, day by day, each in his sphere, to promote a feeling of unity and good will, and a keen sense of having one common country, among all classes of Her Majesty's North American subjects. (Cheers.) Speaking to Irishmen, and Irish Protestants, I will only add to what I have said, which has already detained you too long, what one of our own class has so beautifully written on this subject of social and national union:—

"And so, it were a glorious deed
To shew before mankind—
How every class and every creed,
Could be by love combined—
Could be combined, nor yet forget
The fountain whence they rose,
As, filled by many a rivulet,
The sturdy Shannon flows."

(Prolonged Cheering).

A Passenger to my Heart.—Our telegraphic news, this afternoon, contains the unwelcome announcement that the fatal Asiatic scourge is assuming an epidemic character in New York, and is rapidly extending its ravages. The report of fatal cases in the city adjacent places shows an alarming increase within the previous twenty-four hours, and reports from other points indicate that the cholera has commenced irresistible march to the interior. Past experience has shown that the malady can make little headway inland in this latitude of the continent, until that period of the season when the waters of our lakes and streams have become tepid, and vegetation has reached the point when decomposition commences. The months of August and September are therefore the critical time, when not only cholera but all other disorders peculiar to the heated term, are most aggravated in form. Although indisposed to excite unnecessary alarm, we can hardly hope to escape a visitation of the cholera era many weeks, and in this anticipation it behooves one and all to look well to sanitary precautions, which may have grown slack in fancied security from the delayed incursion of the scourge from the sea board.—Hamilton Times.

Billiards, boating and horseracing are among the most popular amusements of Young America. But as our Yankee cousins have sneered at the Provincos, whose native abilities they pretend to consider dwarfed by the want of "nationality" which they boast of, it is not a little singular that a Montreal billiard player beat the billiard champion of the United States a few weeks ago in New York; that a Canadian horse and jockey won the American Derby at Hoboken a few days ago, and on the "Fourth of July," a crew of St. Johns oarsmen carried off the chief laurels of the great anniversary regatta from the most practised and powerful crews of New England, and before hundreds of thousands of disinhabed "solid men of Boston" and their neighbors. Hammill, the American champion rower, was recently beaten most disgracefully by Kelly, the English champion, at Newcastle on Tyne, who headed him at the close of the first race by a quarter of a mile, Hammill giving up in the second; and to cover his defeat a writer in the New York Herald now pretends there was foul play. He says that the American champion's boat was so contrived that when he sat on it his weight displayed "an under-water wooden obstruction, which offered direct contrary influence to the boat's motion and added much to the resistance to be overcome by the champion!" A very likely story, seeing that Hammill's boat was made in the States under his own inspection!

The Lot of Bavaria.

As in America, so in Germany, the "reconstruction of the South" will be the most difficult problem after the war is over. The ignoble part of Bavaria in the great drama now being enacted goes far to show that she is incapable of heading a new Southern Confederation. It is a part which more than once in history Bavaria has played with equal vacillation, with equal dishonor, and with equal ill-success.—When Louis XIV. was making war upon Germany at the beginning of the last century, the Elector of Bavaria sided with France, was beaten with France at Blenheim, and soon afterwards experienced the retribution which he richly deserved. The policy of Bavaria was the same during the long conflict between Napoleon and Germany; she was the faithful ally of France during the campaigns which ended at Austerlitz, Jena, and Wagram, and received her reward in large accessions of territory. Nor was it till victory had finally declared against Napoleon at Leipsic that she repented of her error, and strove to atone for it with characteristic baseness. A Bavarian army was then sent to cut off the retreat of the French at Hanau, and the defeat which it sustained is one of the few triumphs which it is impossible for a student of history to grudge Napoleon. Another crisis has arisen in Germany, and Bavaria is again found taking what she believed to be the stronger side, and discovering her mistake too late. No one can blame her for casting her lot with Austria, and declining the overtures made by Prussia; but, having done so, she ought at least to have rendered prompt and loyal assistance to her confederate in the hour of trial.—Had an effective diversion been made by Bavaria, the Hanoverian army, which had already beaten the Prussian force opposed to it, might have escaped. Had their rear been threatened, and their communications endangered, by the march of a Bavarian army towards Saxony, the Prussians would have advanced more cautiously into Bohemia. Bavaria, however, stood on the defensive, and has paid the penalty for it by losing a battle on her own soil at Kissingen. She has since obtained a truce for herself alone, and we are prepared to hear that she has concluded a separate treaty of peace with the conqueror.—Whatever its terms may be, Bavaria will find no sympathy. She has incurred the enmity of Prussia without earning the gratitude of Austria, and when the time comes, if it ever does come, for a ratification of frontiers between France and Germany, she may perhaps learn that an arrangement has been made eminently satisfactory to all parties but herself.—London Times.

Peterboro, August 13th, 1866.

The New York Herald of Saturday, in noticing the Trotting Fair to be held in Buffalo says:—"Nearly all the fast trotters in the country are now on their way to Buffalo to contend for the large purses offered by the association having charge of the great horse fair which will take place on the 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th of this month. Dexter, Patchen, jr., General Butler and others are already on the ground, getting ready for action, while Lady Thorne, George Wilkes and Toronto Chief will likely be on their way in a few days. Canada and the West will have their fastest nags on hand, and as the purses are made for all classes and grades of trotters the entries for each will be numerous."

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

HIDE BOUND HORSES.

A horse is said to be hide-bound when his skin will not slip under the pressure of the head, but sticks as if it was glued, which condition is always dependent on a deranged state of the stomach and digestive organs—by correcting which, and giving to them a healthy tone and condition, the disease or complaint will disappear. Experience has proved that the means best adopted to this end is "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine." It has been used in numerous cases with complete success, generall effecting a cure in a few days. It is the best condition medicine known, and may be given with perfect safety at all times, and does not require that the horse be kept from work.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

THE TWO BARRELS.

There's a barrel I have got in a corner so snug,
Well charged with the best of good ale;
With a tankard of that, how the time will slip by,
With a pipe and a song or good tale;
If a friend from just over the way should step in,
He's hailed with a hearty good cheer,
And neither requests as he tastes the contents
Of an Englishman's barrel of beer.

There's a barrel I have, but much stronger than beer,
In the charge which for that I intend;
It hangs by the chimney, in readiness near,
For I mean it my hearth to defend;
If a foe from just over the way should drop in,
We'll meet him with three hearty cheers;
But I think he'll repent when he tastes the Contents,
Of the barrel of stout Volunteers.

And thus double-barrelled, my boys fit us five,
Prepared for our friends or our foes;
The hand that is friendship we readily give,
In all ready at need to give blows;
And whether the spigot or trigger we draw,
Our barrels want fill us I ween
So tankards, and Rifles let's charge hip- hurrah,
For our Freedom, our country and Queen.

WISE COUNSELS.

The subjoined valuable maxims if read carefully may tend to improve the habits of the young particularly :—

Keep good company or none. It is bad company that does the mischief.

Never be idle. If your hands cannot be employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind.

Speak the truth on all occasions—keep this in mind.

Make few promises. Live up to your engagements.

Keep your own secrets—if you have any, caution should be observed.

When you speak to a person, look him in the face.

Good company and good conversation are the sinews of virtue.

Your character cannot be essentially injured, except by your own acts.

If any man speak evil of you, let your life be such as none will believe him.

Endeavour to live within your income—if possible.

When you retire to bed think over what you have been doing during the day.

Make no haste to be rich, if you would prosper.

Small and steady gains give competency with tranquility.

Avoid temptation through fear that you may not withstand it.

Earn your money before you spend any of it.

Never run in debt unless you see a way to get out of it.

Never borrow, if you can possibly avoid it.

Do not marry until you are able to support a wife.

Never speak evil of any one—particularly in their absence.

Be just before you are generous—that is pay your own debts first.

Keep yourself innocent, if you would be happy.

Save when you are young to spend when you are old.

Read over the above maxims as often as you possibly can.

A Point of Law.

Not a hundred years ago, on account of political disturbances, certain municipal regulations were made, conducive to the better order of the Bostonians. Among them was an order to 'arrest all negroes found out after dark, without a lantern." Soon after, it happened that an old colored man was found "prowling about in total darkness." The next day the following examination took place :—

"Are you guilty ?"

No, sah! I has de lantern," holding up before the astonished court an old one with neither oil nor candle in it.

He was discharged, and the law amended so as to read—a lantern with a candle.

Old Toby, not long after, was arrested a second time on the same complaint, and he again pleaded not guilty, producing a lantern with a candle. The wick, however, had not been discolored by a flame.

The shrewd darkey was again discharged with a reprimand, and the law was again amended so as to require "a lantern with a lighted candle."

Old Toby never troubled the watch any more. He was heard to say 'Massa got too much light on de subject.

A man most open to conviction—The prisoner at the bar.

Thought is the father of words; but many a great and noble thought dies childless.

The man who was always behind-hand has recently purchased several bottles of ketchup.

A house is no home unless it can contain food and fire for the mind as well as for the body.

'I admire your beautiful 'crops' this year.' As the fox said to the poultry, in the hearing of the farmer

The purest joy that we can experience in one we love, is to see that person a source of happiness to others.

"Mr. Swipes, I've just kicked your son William out of my store." Well, Mr. Swingle, it's the first bill you've footed this many a day."

A man said to some friend that when he married he loved his wife so much he could have eaten her up, and ever since regretted he didn't.

In the little village of Blakeney, in Gloucestershire, are three persons living in three adjoining houses whose names are Steel, Pens, and Holder respectively.

A carpenter was employed by a farmer and rendered the following curious bill :—"To hanging two barn doors and myself seven hours, three shillings and sixpence."

If your neighbors asks the loan of five dollars of you, tell him you were not present but if he passed on to Jones or Smith he will ascertain exactly the whole particulars of the accident.

A gentleman who had been spending the evening with a few friends, looked at his watch just after midnight, said, it is to-morrow morning! I must bid you good-night, gentlemen.

A poor widow was asked how she became so much attached to a certain neighbor, and replied that she was bound to him by several cords of wood which he had cast to her during the hard winter.

A gentleman lying on his death-bed called to his coachman, who had been an old servant; and said: "Ah! Tom I am going a long and unusual journey, worse than ever you drove me." "Oh, dear sir," replied the fellow (he having been an indifferent master), "never let that discourage you, for it is all down hill."

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to make the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and concert singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by Demas Barnes & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "cranky" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he looked opposite, was weak, languid or morbidly oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Four persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following :

"• • • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"• • • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me.

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"• • • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • • The Plantation Bitters have put me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"• • • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman :—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic.'

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SHELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

W. E. HAGAN, Troy, N. Y., Chemist.
DEMAS BARNES & Co.,
Wholesale Agents, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

C. HELMSTREET, Chemist.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER—for Indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c., where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity makes it a cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bottle. Ask for "Lyon's" Pure Extract. Take no other.

THE RIVER OF LIFE.

A thousand streams glide o'er the earth,
That rise in mountains gray;
Which swe to clouds and sterge the birth,
Swift speeding on their way.

Through fields of green and flowery meads
The sealing waters rush:
And 'neath the shade within the glade,
Clear fountains freely gush.

The streams unto the ocean glide,
Their watery wealth to pour;
And leaves horse down upon the tide,
Return again no more.

So we, upon the stream of life,
Are swiftly borne along;
Through various scenes of peace and strife
Of sunshine and of song.

Until at last, our bark shall side
Eternity's dark wave,
Whose waters can return no more
The shores of time to save.

Then may we, as we speed away
Upon the silvery stream,
Rare jewels gather while 'tis day,
Nor stop to sleep and dream.

That when we find our journey o'er,
And life no longer ours,
We may rejoice on that bright shore,
Where bloom immortal flowers.

THE ARREST.

'Ah! M. Vibert!' exclaimed the porter, as the agent of the secret police returned home. 'There is a letter for you.'

Vibert took the letter. Its printed heading showed that it came from the Commissary of Police of the 1st Ward. It ran as follows:—

'MY DEAR VIBERT.—While you were employed in this office, your attention was called one day during my absence to an escaped convict named Langlade, and to a tall red haired girl known by the nick-name, 'Soleil Couchant.' The Prefecture of Police has requested me to furnish some information about these parties, who were believed to be in England, who are in Paris, but who have heretofore escaped, notwithstanding all the efforts made to arrest them. I know nobody but you who can give information about these two people.—Will you be so good as to call at the Prefecture of Police to-morrow morning and give him all the information you possess?

Your old master,
DORIEUX.'

'I will go to-morrow morning,' said Vibert to himself, as he put the letter in his pocket and went up stairs.

He went the next morning to the Prefecture of Police, and was shown into the office of one of the Superintendents. While he was waiting his turn to speak to the Superintendent, he overheard the following dialogue between the former and an agent of the secret police.

'And so Soleil Couchant has not only been arrested and brought here, but has given important information. Do you believe what she says?'

'Yes, because it is her intrest to speak the truth.'

'And if she is to be credited, Langlade will sleep to-night in the Rue Croix des Petits Champs?'

'She says it is more than probable he will sleep there.'

'Very well, then, nothing can prevent you arresting him to-morrow morning?'

'If I can find men willing to undertake the job?'

'What is to prevent you from finding all the men you want?'

'Langlade's terrible reputation. He has already escaped twice from the hulks at Toulon and Brest. He is a Hercules in size and strength. He never sleeps without loaded pistols by his bedside. The first man who enters his bedchamber is sure to be shot down. My men know all this, and I am afraid they will hesitate.'

'They are cowards, then?' suddenly exclaimed Vibert from his seat.

'The Superintendent of the secret police and the other agent turned round with astonishment to see who spoke.

'Ay, they are cowards!' repeated Vibert. 'Should a police agent draw back from a malefactor? Should a police agent hesitate when he knows he has it in his power to rid society of a desperado covered with crimes?'

'Ah, Vibert!' exclaimed the Superintendent, recognizing his agent.

'I should like to see you do it,' said the other agent.

'Nothing is easier than to gratify your desire. You have but to walk behind me, if I am authorized to arrest Langlade to morrow morning at his lodgings in the Rue Croix des Petits Champs.'

'Are you in earnest?' asked the Superintendent.

'Assuredly I am.'

'But,' exclaimed the other police agent, 'you really don't know what sort of a man this Langlade is.'

'You are mistaken. I had Langlade in my hands when I was Secretary of Commissary of Police in the Rue St. Honore. He dared come one day to ask me to give him a pasport for England. He struck me as a suspicious character. I had him followed and arrested. Since that he has escaped a second time from the hulks whither I sent him.'

'As you are so familiar with him,' said the other agent, 'I am astonished that you are not more afraid of him. Surely you must remember what a giant he is; I never saw a more stalwart man.'

'Perfectly well. I am a dwarf by the side of a great many persons; I am a mere pigmy compared to him.'

'How many men will you require?

'None.'

'Surely you do not pretend to say you mean to arrest him unaided?'

'I certainly do. What use would your men be to me since you yourself say they would be afraid of him? They would only be in the way.'

'Do you want to be killed?'

'That's none of your business. The question is, how shall a difficult task be performed? Everybody declines attempting it. I volunteer to do it.'

'Very well then,' said the Superintendent, once more taking part in the conversation, 'I will give you all the information you may require to enable you to undertake this job,—or rather, go into the next room and tell M. Liveirarie to put you in possession of all he knows, and to let you question Soliel Couchant, if you please.'

At half past five o'clock the next morning, Vibert with a determined step, went up the stairs case of the house in the Rue Croix des Petits Champs where Langlade lodged. After hunting in vain for a bell rope at the door which the porter told him was Langlade's, he boldly rapped.

'Who is there?' cried a voice from the chamber.

'An agent of the secret police who has come to arrest you,' replied Vibert.

'Shut up, you joker! Were you an agent of the secret police, you would not let me know it. They take rather more precautions than that before they wake up this passenger. It is you, Crampin, isn't it?'

'Yes; come, open quick.'

'Egads! old fellow, it is hard to tumble out of bed in such cold weather at this early hour; but for a friend I suppose I must, although I run the risk of catching cold; but I warn you I hop back to bed again!'

The key had scarcely been turned and the bolt had scarcely ceased to grate, when Vibert, who stood near the door, shoved against it with might and main, darted into the chamber, made for the bed, seized the revolver lying on the table near it, and aiming at Langlade,—all which was done as quick as thought,—said, 'if you budge you are a dead man!'

'A thousand thunders!' screamed the escaped convict. 'Hang me if it isn't an agent of the secret police.'

'Didn't I tell you so, you numskull? Come, you are caught. Surrender.'

'Never!' exclaimed Langlade, foaming with rage. 'I'll devour you first, but I have hands strong as any vice blacksmith ever saw and teeth sharp as steel.'

'Pshaw!' quietly replied Vibert, 'you can use neither unless you get me in arm's reach; and you know if you stir so much as a hair's breadth, I'll put a pistol ball through your body.'

The escaped convict stood like a statue, half naked, foaming with rage, but afraid to move a step. They eyed each other for an instant, one ready to leap on the other, the other ready to fire the revolver.

Then Vibert said, in a jeering tone: 'I thought you were going to eat me up.—Have you abandoned that idea? It is a pity; I want to die an original death.

'It must be confessed that you are a bold fellow to dare come in here,' exclaimed Langlade, becoming calmer, and looking in every direction to see if he could not discover some object which would serve him as a good weapon.

'None use! Folks think you much more terrible than you really are. Come now, come, don't be moving about in that way, or I shall be obliged to break one of your legs in order to keep you quiet. What do you want? What are you looking for? Your slippers, eh. Your feet are cold. Here they are. O, I am a good natured fellow, I didn't want you to catch cold.'

Vibert, holding the revolver so as to check any movement of Langlade, picked up with his left hand a pair of shoes which lay at the foot of the bed, and threw them to the escaped convict.

'Thank you,' said Langlade, whose wonted assurance had now completely returned. 'A fellow is more solid on his feet when he has his shoes on.'

'To be sure he is, therefore I gave you yours. Would you like to have your pantaloons, waistcoat, and frock-coat? Don't stand on ceremony with me. I have them within reach.'

'If you will be good enough to give them to me, I shall be very glad to receive them,' replied Langlade, astounded by so much kindness.

Vibert gave him the desired pantaloons, waistcoat, and frockcoat, taking, however, the same precautions he used when he gave him the shoes. While Langlade rapidly dressed himself, Vibert asked: 'If I am not indiscreet, Will you tell me what you intend doing when you are dressed?'

'Really I don't know yet. I have been thinking over the matter, but I cannot come to any decision. I believe I'd leap on you and give you a taste of my strength and teeth but for that confounded revolver, which is a little in my way.'

'Would you like to have the revlver too?'

'I should say I would; but there is no chance of that—'

'Do you think not? That's not so certain. What would you do with it were I to give it to you?'

'Do with it? I'd blow your brains out in a jiffy.'

'Really.'

'Just as certain as you are standing there!'

'At the first shot?'

'At the very first shot, for I would aim at the temple.'

'Very well then, old fellow. Be sure you aim with a steady hand. Here is your revolver.'

Vibert, as he spoak, quitted his seat, went to Langlade, gave him the revolver, turned around and quietly went back to the bed, he sat on it, folded his arms, and said, 'Well, fire!'

The escaped convict was confounded.—He exclaimed, 'I'll be hanged if you belong to the secret police!'

'You thankless dog! I behave my best to you, I treat you like a son, and you are so ungrateful as to refuse to give me my titles!'

'Do you mean to tell me you really are a detective?'

'I am nothing else. What in the world do you think I am? You take me for a peer, eh? I'm not such a fool; time hangs too heavily on their hands. I am a detective. What do you call these things I am drawing from my pocket. Look at them Aren't they handcuffs? They are the only professional objects I brought with me when I came to see you. I left even my sword-cane at home.'

'You are a bold fellow!'

'My dear Langlade, this is the second time you have used that expression. I confess to you I hate repetition.'

'And do you really think I am going to let you handcuff me?'

'You are going to do one of two things: you are going either to kill me or to let me handcuff you. Between you and me, which you choose is a matter of perfect indifference to me,—but choose you shall.'

'Don't you prize your life?'

'If I prized my life, should I have come here to wake you up this morning? Do you prize life?'

'Why, yes; just now I must say I do. I am loved.'

'You are loved! really? Lucky dog!'

'Am I not?' exclaimed Langlade, straightening himself up with a self-satisfied air.

Vibert took out his green eye glasses and eyed the escaped convict from head to foot, then said: 'The truth is, your father and mother did not play the churl with you when they introduced you to life. They gave you good measure. You fill a large space on earth. I can understand how it is women should adore you—they have such wretched taste!'

Then changing his tone suddenly, and turning his back to Langlade, he said: 'It is rather cold here. You forgot to light your fire this morning. Let us be moving. They are waiting for us.

'Where?'

'At jail. I believe you'll be better off there than anywhere else. In the first place, you will get there in time to be examined to-morrow. And rest assured, as you are an old hand, you will be treated with all proper attention. You will not be mixed up with the small fry. You shall have a cell to yourself.'

'Are you making a butt of me?' bawled Langlade.

'Don't scream so loud, man! You will wake up all your neighbors. Recollect it is only six o'clock in the morning.'

'The report of the revolver when I blow out your brains will wake them up still more effectually.'

'Hush! hush! hush! hush! You do nothing but nonsence: execution is not your part!'

Vibert, as he made this remark, fell back and lay stretched at length on Langlade's bed. The escaped convict exasperated be yond all bounds, sprang towards the bed and placed the muzzle of the revolver on Vibert's temple. The detective looked steadily at Langlade. They remained in their respective positions for a minute. Then the escaped convict lowered his eyes, let his revolver fall on the bed, and drew back, exclaiming: 'A thousand thunders! I dare not kill him, after all!'

'Well, after all,' said Vibert, rising from the bed, and adroitly slipping the revolver into his pocket as he rose, 'you will not kill me. I must still live and suffer.'

'Are you unhappy?' asked Langlade, coming up to him.

'Ay, most wretched. So wretched I would gladly change places with you and make you the detective, could I be the escaped convict carried back to the hulks. But I did not come here to confess my griefs to you. Let us be going.'

'Go, if you please. I will not kill you, but here I stay.'

'That is impossible, my dear Langlade. I have pledged my word of honor to bring you to the jail. Now don't put on any airs. You are a good fellow; so am I. Let us come to an understanding at once. Your mistress is a tall, red haired girl, named Stephanie Cornu, and nick-named 'Soleil Couchant.' Isn't she?'

'How in the world did you find that out?'

'My dear boy, we know everything. It is our trade. But if you want to know the full particulars I will tell you, for I can refuse you nothing. It was Soleil Couchant herself who told us where you were to sleep to-night.'

'It is a lie!' bawled Langlade.

'It is every word true. Were it not, I would not amuse myself by giving you useless pain. I respect a man's affections, and hold it cowardice to tell a man his mistress betrays him when she is true. It would be less cruel to plunge a dagger in his heart.

'Ah! indeed it is,' said the escaped convict, while two big tears rolled down his cheeks. Then he fell back on his chair, murmuring to himself: 'That is the reason I have not seen her these two days gone. O, the vile woman! And yet I madly loved her. She was the only thing on earth I did love. He turned towards Vibert, his face bathed in tears, and, stretching out his arms at full length, said: 'I surrender! Here, handcuff me.'

'What sort of a fellow do you take me to be? Do you think I am a man to take advantage of your weakness? Never! When you are calmer we'll talk over matters.'

The giant sat in a corner and sobbed like a child.

Vibert walked up and down the room for a moment or two, then he went up to Langlade, and laying his hand on the convict's shoulder, said, 'Come with me, I will carry you to Soleil Couchant.'

Langlade sprang to his feet and said, 'Do you know where she is?'

'To be sure I do. She was arrested yesterday, and is now in jail. She became frightened; she saw herself mixed up in bad business, imprisoned for the rest of her life, and she gave you up, in order to win the favor of the prison authorities.'

'The vile creature! Do you offer to carry me to her?'

'Right away.'

'But I will kill her if I get near her.'

'That is none of my business. All I have to do is arrest you, and you will be arrested the moment you enter the jail's portal. So, if you have a fancy for killing Soleil Couchant, I do not care a snap of my fingers. One woman more or less in the world is not a matter of much moment.'

'I'm ready; let us be off.'

'Agreed.'

They went down stairs together. Langlade seemed unconscious of everything.—Plunged in his own thoughts, his head drooped upon his breast, he followed Vibert mechanically, just as a dog follows his master. Soleil Couchant had betrayed him! What cared he for aught else? Nevertheless, when they reached the door, the cool morning air for a moment recalled him to himself. He raised his head, looked around, and said to Vibert, 'Where is your carriage?'

'My carriage? I don't keep a carriage.'

'But the carriage with your men?'

'I have no men with me.'

'You don't mean to say you came all alone to arrest me!'

'Why, great heavens, man! how often do you requrire to be told the same thing? Do you think I ought to be accompanied by a squadron of cavalry? My dear boy, I am accustomed to do my business alone. Are you vexed because you don't see at your door three or four detectives, with frock coats buttoned up to their chins, and looking like undertakers? I never go on the street with such fellows. I have too much self respect for that. But if their absence vexes you, I can order them to be sent around.'

'No; it is use'ess'

'Don't use any ceremony with me, my dear fellow. If you desire a first class funeral, say the word; it shall be yours

'Because you promised me I should see her, and I have not seen her yet.'

'She is there, behind that door. They are only waiting for you to be calm to show her in.'

'But she will not enter here. I shall only see her behind that grating. That is not what you promised me.'

'I made you no promise whatever on the subject. I dare you to tell me I promised you should see her at your side.'

'We did not speak of that but—'

'You ought to have spoken of it. You ought to have expressed all your conditions. I could not possibly divine your wishes. I have faithfully kept every one of the promises I made to you. I have had even your handcuffs taken off. If you had not had free use of your hands, you would not have been able to damage the cell, and treat me as cowardly as you have done.'

'Cowardly!'

'Yes, cowardly! I am small, you are tall. I am weak, you are strong. I entered here alone and unarmed, to prevent a sanguinary struggle in which you would most certainly have been vanquished, and you leaped on me like a wild beast. Isn't that cowardly?'

'Will they bring Soleil Couchant here?' a keen Langlade, already a great deal calmer than he had been. 'May I see her without being separated from her by this grating?'

'No. You will see her and talk to her through these iron bars. She made this request.'

'Ah! these iron bars are provided at her request! Why in that!'

'I dare say it is because she is afraid to be near you. Does that astonish you?'

'If she is afraid, it is because she feels guilty.'

'Clear enough; but that's no reason why she should desire to be murdered.'

'But suppose I should promise not to kill her?'

'You cannot make such a promise, and be sure of keeping it. You are too violent. You have not sufficient self-command. A word or gesture is enough to throw you into a frenzy. You even strike those who don't say a word to you, who do nothing to you.'

'Pardon me.'

'O, I forgive you; but it is more than probable that the Superintendent will not forgive you for having disturbed the quiet which reigns here, committed deeds of violence, menaced the agents, called out the guard—'

'What can he do?'

'He can refuse to allow you to see Soleil Couchant, even behind that iron grating.'

'See here,' said Langlade, trying to take Vibert's hand, 'if you persuade the Superintendent to let me see her, I promise to put everything here back in its place, to present excuses to the agents, and to be as calm as I have been furious.'

'Well, I will use my influence with the Superintendent; but, I warn you, the utmost he will grant now will be to allow you to see her behind that grating.'

'That is all I ask! I no longer feel like killing her. My anger has spent itself.'

Vibert quitted the cell. The agents were at the door, and expressed their astonishment at seeing him in such good condition. He said to them he is quiet now. Let him see Soleil Couchant, as if nothing had taken place. The evening he will be sent to another jail, and you will be rid of him.'

While Vibert was speaking, a strange noise was heard in the cell. Vibert returned and summoned the other agents.—Langlade was lying on the floor insensible. The younger agent went for the surgeon, who came in time only to see the escaped convict breathe his last. The emotions of the day had been too much for the giant. His arrest, Soleil Couchant's betrayal, his frenzy at discovering the iron bars and at the sight of Vibert, his fear the Superintendent might refuse to allow him so much as to see Soleil Couchant again, had brought on a fit of apoplexy. It proved fatal before any remedy could be administered.

Fearful Famine in Bengal.

News from Calcutta on the 22nd, from Madras to the 28th, and from Hong Kong to the 13th of June is received. The news from the famine districts in Bengal continues to be very distressing, and was beginning to make itself felt in the streets of Calcutta. The Hurkuru states that—"Crowds of sufferers from Cuttack, and from Monghyr, Kishnaghur, and other parts of the Nudda division, where the failure of the crops has deprived them of food, are finding their way into the metropolis, in the hope of obtaining assistance and sustenance, and our streets now present very distressing pictures of suffering humanity.—Fathers and Mothers in a dreadful state of debility are selling their emaciated offspring to passers-by for 3s to 4s each, or are seen searching for a few grains of food among the offal cast out at our doors.—The rind and stones of mangoes are eagerly caught up and sucked, in the vain hope of sustaining life a little longer thereby, and such refuse as a dog would reject is eagerly devoured. Crime has of course increased in consequence of this influx of men driven to desperation by hunger, and there is a melancholy crop of thefts and burglaries.

Remarkable Death and Dream.—On last Friday morning one of the most remarkable and melancholy dispensations of Divine Providence was manifested in this neighborhood which it has ever been our duty to record. Mr. W. T. Sick, who was a farmer near this town, while out quite early in the morning attending to the feeding of some stock during a severe storm, was stricken by lightning, near his stable, and instantly killed. His clothing was stripped from his body in threads, his hat cut in minute pieces, the very soles of his boots torn to atoms. He was not missed by his wife and family until breakfast was prepared, when a little boy was sent out to ask him to his meal. The child saw him but did not recognize his father, so terrible had been the work of the angry element, but breathlessly told his mother that some stranger was dead near the stable.—An examination, however, proved the unfortunate father had been a victim of lightning, and his family are left alone—alone, indeed. He was a gentleman respected and beloved by all his fellow-citizens. A remarkable story is told of his dream a night or two before, in which he related that it appeared he had died, and was summoned before the judgment bar of God, and although he had pleaded hard against the decree, he had been ordered to stand aside.—Evening (Iowa) Courier.

Popery.—Reverend Dr. Hodge, in a recent speech, said that the Pope has today more power in New York, where his beck controls the municipal elections, than he has in Rome.

"Her Christian Majesty."—It is estimated that Queen Victoria has 40,000,000 Mohammedan and 150,000,000 heathen subjects.

Sheriff's Sale of Lands—James Hall.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1866.

OUR VOLUNTEERS.

This is a word that has become almost a household one. Every newspaper, every dispatch contains something about them; and almost every house has one in it. They are fathers, brothers, friends, and therefore dear to us. But more than this, they are our temporal defense in the time of invasion, and as such, independent of our relationship, are dear to us. Not a citizen but felt a sense of security during the late Fenian trouble, when he thought of our brave volunteers.—And very many who all along rather looked on the volunteer movement with indifference, when troubles arose, earnestly enquired at the telegraph office for the latest news, and as eagerly "where were our volunteers?"—The fact is the volunteers are a part and parcel of ourselves, and we are part of them. Considerable discussion has arisen out of the movement. Every little village and many towns have had their little troubles. Some about the conduct of the volunteers, others about the conduct of their officers, and some few about appointments, among which we have to be numbered; but in no place do we find a newspaper trying to make political capital ont of these thing, but here—only here. In vain will this be denied. A thousand denials would not cause one man to believe to the contrary. It is much to be regretted that there should be any such attempt, but much is often effected by foul means, and we suppose our contemporary will try any means to accomplish his purpose, if possible.

With the conduct of the volunteers we do not intend to meddle. In our opinion they did what they could, and all that was required of them for the time being, and we have no doubt but that they will be ready to act their part again.

The subject of their pay has also been a subject of consideration, and even in this matter there has been misrepresentation.—The volunteers are not satisfied with the system, nor are all the people, but there is certainly a very wide difference between the discussion of the system, and the force.—The system by which volunteers are called out, drilled, provided for and paid may be very bad; may be injurious to the cherishing and fostering the volunteer principle; and yet the force may be as brave as ever faced an enemy, and as loyal as ever patriots were. This we think prevails to some extent here. The men are brave, loyal and true; but they are not in every case properly treated. Complaints reach us of lack of energy at the heart of the system. The chief man is unfit for his position, does not understand it, and cares more for his toddy than for the volunteers. Now if this be true, it is time some change should be made, so as to remove such men, and not allow them to remain to the danger of the whole force.—For should danger arise, as is likely at present, and the volunteers be called out without preparation, provisions, clothing and ammunition, as has been done heretofore, will not the men be sacrificed by these set of incapables. The wonder is that volunteers do not search into the matter and get it rectified. Get this fountain cleansed.

But the pay. We are not of those who think that the volunteers have been too well paid. Nor do we know any one who does think so. A man who can make a dollar a day at home, deserves a dollar a day when on duty, and if he could earn more at home he deserves more for foregoing it. But the question arises, can the country afford to pay so much? and we unhesitatingly answer no, it can not afford to pay it in money. Then must the volunteers sacrifice health, money and life for a trifle, while others under equal obligations to the state do not and will not? We say it is not fair to ask volunteers to sacrifice more than other citizens. Those who will not volunteer should be forced to pay those who do, else all should be forced to perform military service. But we think there could be a way devised of paying volunteers proper remuneration without burdening the country with heavy taxes. We have hundreds of thousands of acres of wild lands, not paying the country one cent, the giving away of one million of acres of which would never be felt by the country, nor would it cost the country one cent of taxes to give it away. Might not our volunteers, then, get a daily allowance for present necessities in money, and be paid for any extra services, in grants of lands. Some one may say the yearly taxes of such land would be a burden instead of a benefit. It might be in some cases, but this could easily be remedied by making all lands granted for volunteer service tax free to volunteers and their families for a number of years, or until settled, allowing a reasonable number of years for opening up those lands for settlement. By a system like this, not only volunteers but their families would be benefited; for if father, brother or son should be cut off, the land would afford a home and a living for those who depended on him, and in time might become valuable. Wild land might appear of little value to some, but we may remark that some of the finest farms in Cavan, Monaghan, Smith and Otonabee were once not considered worth settling, upon and yet within 10 years afterwards, parties who settled on the same farms were living in affluence. This scheme would encourage volunteering, as the prospect of obtaining a good farm for a man's self or his offspring would be an incentive better than any yet offered, for no matter how strongly beats the patriotic throb, the cry of a hungry little one will make the heart beat stronger. This scheme should be urged upon the government, urged upon the country, urged upon our representatives, until it be adopted, or some better scheme advanced. Our volunteers require pay, and this we hold to be an easy way of paying them, and at the same time a way in which the volunteers, as a whole, would willingly acquiesce. At all events it is practicable, and can do no harm to agitate the scheme.

Lands Sold for Taxes.—Land-owners will do well to examine the title deeds of their lands before the 18th September. The Registration Act of 1865 contains a clause in the following terms:—"All deeds for lands sold for taxes or under process of law, before the passing of this Act, shall be registered within one year after the passing of this Act, otherwise the parties respectively claiming under any such sales shall not be deemed to have preserved their priority as against a purchaser in good faith who may have acquired priority of registration."—This Act was assented to on September 18th, 1865—and therefore the time for registration under it expires next month.

The Ottawa Citizen says:—A very brisk demand for sawed lumber continues from the United States markets, and it is hurried out wherever an available craft can be found, notwithstanding the duty imposed since the abolition of the reciprocity treaty. There have also been very considerable purchases of square white pine timber by American buyers, over two million feet in rafts, which were taken to the States via Sorel, Chambly and Lake Champlain, at remunerating prices to owners, say 15 to 16 cents per square foot. A heavy demand still continues.

A Glasgow paper is responsible for the following item:—A rumor is circulated in various quarters that Viscount Monck is about to retire from the Governor Generalship of Canada; and that Lord Naas, the present Irish Secretary, is to be elevated to the post. It is also added, that should this arrangement take place, Mr. Gregory, the Adullamite Member for Galway, will be offered the Irish Secretaryship.

The little ship "Red, White and Blue," which sailed from New York on the 9th July, with two men and a dog on board, passed Hastings on her way to London on the 15th inst. All on board were well. The names of the men on board are Capt. Wm. Hudson and his mate, Fitch. Hastings is a small port in the English Channel.

Burglary.—We notice by the Port Hope papers, that the residence of Mr. R. S. Howell, was entered on Thursday night last and a cash box containing $100 stolen. A fine black coat was also taken, but the coat and empty cash box were found on a vacant lot. No clue has as yet been obtained of the guilty parties.

Mexican Affairs.—President Johnston has refused to admit that a certain port is blockaded, which the Mexican Emperor declares under blockade. It is expected that some complication may arise out of this, unless Maximillian allows President Johnson his own way.

Parliament has been prorogued, and Col. Haultain has again returned home. The Governor General intimated in the closing address that the past is in all probability the last session until the confederate parliament assembles.

Mission Intelligence.—At the last synod of the Canada Presbyterian Church, the Rev. N. McKinnon, of Wardsville, was chosen by the synod to go as a missionary to the New Hebrides. His congregation refuses to let him go.

An engine attached to an Express train on the Hudson River road exploded while standing at the Catskill Station, on the morning of the 20th. The engineer and fireman were severly injured, the latter is not expected to survive.

The Globe says four failures have occurred in Montreal, arising from a financial pressure, brought on by the stoppage of discounts, in anticipation of the changes to be made by the Government bank scheme.

Murder.—A dreadful murder has been committed in the neighborhood of Guelf.—A man named May murdered his wife, a sickly delicate woman, by inflicting several cuts and stabs; he is in jail for it.

Fire.—A fire took place at the South end of the Town on Monday night last, consuming those old buildings known as Day's Brewery. It is supposed that it was the work of an incendiary.

A great convention is being held in Philadelphia, of delegates from North and South, with a view of complete re-organization, on moderate principles. We doubt whether it will prove successful.

Sixteen cases and seven deaths from Cholera, were reported in New York, August 18, and fifteen cases and seven deaths in Brooklyn.

The total losses at the Jersey city fire are set down at $1,690,000. There were three lives lost.

$120,000 has been sent from New York City in aid of the Portland sufferers.

The following volunteer infantry companies have been gazetted, in this and neighbouring Counties, with their respective Captains, Lieutenants and Ensigns:—

Norwood, Peterboro'—Captain, Robert Wigmore; Lieutenant, P. M. Grover, Ensign, W. H. Stevenson.

Hastings, Peterboro'-Captain, Henry Fowlds; Lieutenant, Henry H. Humphries; Ensign, Robert Hulson.

Springville, Peterboro'—Captain, John Douglass; Lieutenant, Allen Cathcart; Ensign, William McManus.

Coldsprings, Northumberland—Captain, Charles Gifford; Lieutenant, James A. Farlay; Ensign, Gideon Page.

Grafton, Northumberland—Captain, Robert Rogers; Lieutenant, R. W. Standly; Ensign, Angus H. Macdonald.

Cartwright, Durham—Captain, James Fluke; Lieutenant, Samuel Braden; Ensign, Thomas Gibson.

Newcastle, Durham—Captain, G. A. Jacobs; Lieutenant, John Robson; Ensign, R. J. Wilkinson.

Omemee, Victoria—Captain, W. H. Gothingham; Lieutenant, John James English; Ensign, Thomas Stephenson.

Hard Up for a Patient.

The editor of the Review must be getting hard up for something to keep up life. In his last issue he refers to a few remarks that we placed into the hands of the printer, just as he was making up the form, and in consequence of this were not proof-read. Having nothing else to write about—of course little to do—he must be abusing some one. As for ourselves, we admire his abuse as much as we would his praise. But we get a piece of information of which we have hitherto been ignorant, and that is that the Review employs his correspondents to write communications abusing his opponents.—This we infer from the charge he brings against us. We can assure all whom it may concern that we don't solicit slanderous correspondence of any kind. We some times permit communications to appear, but on no account have we ever solicited one. The Review judges us by his own conduct. We repudiate such a charge. In future we will be able to tell when the Review is hard up, and has to call in aid.

"He that lives in a glass house should not throw stones."

Our contemporary brought us to task for a piece of syntax, which we never proof-read, and in consequence contained a word which under other circumstances would not have appeared. But for the benefit of our noble editor, who wishes to keep us right in our prose, we would inform him that Graham & Stratton keep always on hand several copies of Lennie, one of which can be procured for eight or nine cents, and from which he can yet receive some useful instruction. If he will not patronize G. & S., Mr. Menzies or Mr. Poter can supply him.

False syntax, indeed. "On the Chairman's left was his worship Mayor Scott, Jas. Edward-, J. P., and Dr. Kincaid." (See last Review—report of dinner to Captain Mc. Naughton.) Oh, Doctor, Doctor! Were you tipsy after the dinner? Did the toddy fly to your head? or were you asleep after your revel, while penning the above illigant sintince? And yet forsooth the Dr. has become a teacher. Doctor, dear, be aisey: you are an ex-superintendent. Surely, asthore, you have been sick. Well, take a dose of R. R. R., it gives relief in ten minutes.

From the Review of last week:—"But the discussions which have taken place, tending to elucidate the subject, and the large majorities with which both schemes were carried, as modified by the collected wisdom of the House, gives ample assurance that these measures were in themselves necessary, &c."

Och, murdher Doctor—discussions .... and majorities .... gives! Arrah Linnie, where are ye? The mortyal powers, the Doctor was tipsey when he began to meddle with prose.

Do, Doctor, do get a Lennie, and a little common sense to boot, for I have another piece yet for you, and from the last Review, too. I didn't go any farther back than last week, Doctor.

Here is another beautiful sentence from the Doctor's pen—"It will also be generally conceded that in justice the gentlemen who successively occupy the position of Mayor, the Council should adopt some uniform rule, &c." (See Review of last week, too—under 'Mayor's salary.') Now will Doctor Murray(?) of the Review, parse the above illigant morsel from his own pin. Do, Doctor, do tell us what the gentlemen who successively occupy the position of Mayor, are to do; as the sentence stands it is nonsense, Doctor Murray(?) indeed it is.

But Doctor Murray, (shades of Murray forgive us for thus profaning your venerable name.) we are not done yet. Here is another piece from the last Review, of course from the pen of the Doctor—"The sum thus offered will not be salary for Mayor, it will be payment of a legal gentleman for services rendered, &c." Now, Doctor, in the above, of should be to; else it will appear that the Mayor is about to pay for some professional services. Lower down, the Doctor has converted Mr. Chambers into two or more, as he speaks of the Mayor's opponents expecting a salary. Now, Mr. Chambers is only one man, to all appearance, when we meet him; perhaps the Doctor's eyes are all awry.—Does he mean that all who opposed the present Mayor expected salaries? If he does, it is false, for neither Mr. Chambers nor his friends expected any such thing. Mr. Chambers only expected a salary; but, Doctor, he is but one.

Now, Doctor, your two columns last week afford a proof of your ignorance of language, as the whole two first columns prove your ignorance of the elements of grammar. We find the Doctor saying that "during the recent session several acts have been passed, which effect great changes in existing municipal, commercial and monetary laws." Now, existing laws are those now in force, and hence the acts just become law are not yet law. Well done Doctor. Farther on, we read that "one of the incidents of the session which was looked forward to with much interest was the explanation of the causes which led to Mr. Brown's resignation, &c." Now, Doctor, the is definite and points to something definite; but that which was unknown must be indefinite; it should be an explanation. One more—"The town were, &c."

So much for Doctor Poole's ability to criticise. A critic should be above blundering, and not one whose every line remains a standing proof of the violation of almost every rule of grammar; and worse, a proof of a want of common sense.

Doctor, mind your Ps and Qs. Your own prose needs conversion before being brought to a proper tribunal. If you are about to attempt troubling your neighbours we would advise you to get a new pair of brogues, with the bottoms well paved, for your work will be as difficult as the entrance into paradise. The road before you will be rough; for Doctor, dear, it will take another wash to make you perfect. Your prose sometimes requires tonics.

A Note of Warning.—The Hamilton Spectator says we have been permitted to make the following extract from a letter received in this city from a Canadian living in Indiana. He says:—

"Speaker Colfax, in his speech here the other day, said that it was the intention of the Government to let the Fenians have their own way next time. They (the Fenians) are more active than ever, and it is fully believed here that this winter will see Canada in their possession. You seem to think in Canada that the trouble is over; far from that, the real danger is now. Fenianism is now become part of the Yankee politics of the day; Democrats and Republicans are loud in their praise of the organization.—Mr. Rymal's speech was a big mistake—our position here was bad before, but it is now worse. The fact is, the Yankees love us, and any trouble the Fenians can give us they would rejoice over it. I have to be very careful what I say and do in regard to politics."

Complimentary Supper to Captain McNaughton of the Fire Company.

On Wednesday evening, 15th instant, the members of Protection Fire Company, as intimated last week, entertained Capt. McNaughton at a splendid festival in the Firemen's Hall. The Hall was most tastefully decorated with red, white and blue, flags, transparent lanterns and mottoes.

J. O'Donnel, Esq., Sec. of the Company, presided, and on his right were the guest of the evening—Capt. McNaughton, the chief and assistant Engineers—Capt. Poole and R. Walton, Esq.; on his left, the Mayor, J. Edwards, Esq., Dr. Kincaid, &c. The Vice Chairs were occupied by J. J. Lundy and J. Kincaid, Esqs. The spread, provided by Mr. Detcher of the Metropolitan, was splendid and abundant, affording ample evidence of his ability as a carterer.

100 of the Firemen and their friends sat down, and, nobly as Firemen generally work, there were evident signs of increased energy and enterprise, while demolishing the stores of fat things. Justice and more than justice being done to the edibles, the Chairman, Mr. O'Donnell, in introducing the first toast remarked, that he regretted some one more capable of filling the honorable position of Chairman had not been selected, but trusted that his desire to do the best he could would be accepted as sufficient. His first duty was an easy and pleasant one. The first toast of the evening was one that unanimously, everywhere, was drunk with enthusiasm, and particularly so on British soil. It needed no introduction, needed no eloquence to induce those present to receive it with cheers, the name, the person, the character was dear to every Briton. He would, therefore, merely ask them to fill up a bumper to toast "Our Queen," which was done right willingly and the toast most enthusiastically received.

Sergt. Johnston, of the Rifles, sung, "The National Anthem."

The Chairman then gave the next toast, which like the first required no speech, and hence he would make none, would just announce it—"The Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," all of whom were equally as dear to, and their names as fondly cherished by Canadians as by any British subjects.

Song, "Let us speak of a man as we find him," by Mr. C. Philps.

The next toast, "The Army and Navy of Great Britain, coupling with them the Canadian Volunteers." In reference to this toast, the Chairman remarked, that the Army of Great Britain needed no praise, and that the noble courage and daring of the Navy spoke volumns without words. Both branches of the British service had always been foremost in doing their duty, and well they had done it, and he believed and knew that the Volunteers of Canada were as able and as willing to do their duty when called upon. The Volunteers never have had an opportunity of attesting their valor and loyalty but once, and that lately when called upon to repel the wanton invasion of our soil by lawless Feniane, and right nobly and courageously did the Volunteers then show how boldly they could face a foe. He knew too that, if again called upon they would respond most cordially, and terrible would be the reception the Fenians would receive if they returned. Their coming would be to enter inhospitable graves.

Song by Mr. York—"Red, White and Blue."

There being no representative of either the Army or Navy present, Capt. Poole, of the Rifles responded. He remarked that the Army and Navy of Britain required no praise. They had ever done their duty, and ready were they again to do so when their country demanded it. Of the Volunteers he would say, their desire was to imitate that army that had been the praise of the world; and he would say for the Volunteers that they were ready, for their watchword was—"Ready, Aye Ready;" nor would their actions ever throw a stain on their professions, he believed, in time of invasion the Volunteers would be ready. (Cheers.)

Lieutenant Burnham, of Ashburnham Infantry company, being loudly called for, in rising said he did not expect to be called on to make a speech, and he felt it particularly uncalled for after the speeches of the Chairman and Capt. Poole, but after the manner the toast had been received, he could not refrain from saying a word or two. He (Mr. Burnham) was proud to be a guest of his brother red coats of the Fire Brigade, they were noble fellows, and although their coats were of a little rougher material than a Volunteer's, yet he well knew that under those coats there were hearts both firm and true, just as loyal and just as brave as the hearts of Volunteers. He thanked them for the kind manner the toast had been received, and sat down amidst deafening cheers.

Sergeant Johnston, of the Rifles, being loudly called for, wondered why they should expect a speech from him; commissioned officers should make the speeches. However, he could speak for the rank and file, and non-commissioned officers. He would not praise the Volunteers too much, as some few thought they had got too much praise already. No doubt they all did not do equally well, as some of them did run away. He would say for them notwithstanding this, that the Volunteers did go to fight and would go again most willingly and do what they could to repel invaders. The mass of Canadians were loyal, and when an opportunity offered itself they would exhibit their loyalty effectively.

The Chairman then gave, "The Governor General." In doing so it was worthy of remark that he was one of the ablest and best Governors that ever governed this Province, as his character, words, deeds and the general esteem in which he is held, both at home and here, fully testify. Few of his predecessors, if any, had remained so long among us at such critical and troublesome times, whose conduct was held to be so blameless or their actions so cordially appreciated, and he knew that this toast would be received as all before it had been, with a right good will. "The Governor General" was then received with perfect bursts of cheers.

Song, "For he is a jolly good fellow," also an Irish song by Sergeant Johnston.

The Chair then, in introducing the toast of the evening, remarked, that the meeting to-night was to do honor to a man whom all the Firemen delighted to honor. Mr. McNaughton had been their Captain ever since the formation of the Company, about four years ago, and right wisely and kindly had he presided over their councils and deliberations during that period. His general kind manner and affability had made him the favorite of all, and sincerely did they regret his departure from among them. Captain McNaughton had invariably been the friend of the Firemen both in prosperity and adversity; to him the Company owed its existence, continuance and present prosperity, and while, being the friend of the Firemen, he had also been the friend of the Town. Mr. McNaughton had last time as well as labor, he had to leave his business, once and again for the interest of the Town and Company, to his own disadvantage, and thus show to-night testified that it had not been forgotten, for on no occasion heretofore had he witnessed such a banquet in honor of any guest. He, however, hoped that Capt. McNaughton would pause before taking his intended step, for he (Mr. O'Donnell) could assure him there was as solid prosperity in Peterborough as in any town he knew of, either in the United States or Canada, as the splendid rows of building would testify. If Mr. McNaughton, however, should go, he hoped he would meet with success in his new sphere. The toast was then given—"Captain McNaughton"—and received with tremendous shouts of applause, almost, as one present remarked, raising the roof of the Hall six inches.

Song by the Glee Club—"The Buccaneers' Bride" which was effectively rendered.

Captain McNaughton then responded, remarking that he hardly knew what to say, as the manner in which the toast had been received took all he had to say from him.—Of the "ups and downs" of the Company it would take almost till morning to speak. He was glad, however, to leave it in a state of proficiency, and in bringing it to that state, he had received the incessant and valuable aid of all the men. He did not think that all had been done that might have been for the Company, yet considerable had been done. A few sometimes thought that they were neglected, yet the Council and people had done a good deal for them. He was proud to belong to the Peterboro Fire Company. He was doubly proud to be their Captain, and always would look back with pleasure to the time he spent with Protection Fire Company. He hoped that the same aid and encouragement would be extended to his successor that had been to him, and that the Company would continue to flourish. He again thanked them for the manner in which his health had been toasted.

J. J. Lundy, 1st Vice Chair, proposed the next toast—"The Mayor and Corporation of the Town of Peterboro." Mr. Lundy did not pretend to make a speech. He was too nervous for that work, but his toast was a standard one, and required no remarks. The Firemen were intimately related to the Town, they were public servants, and depended on the liberality of the Council for sustenance. He was glad to see the Mayor and several Councilors present, as their presence relieved him from speech-making. Mayor Scott would make one that would be acceptable, and satisfy for all. He would merely introduce the toast, "The Mayor and Corporation."

Song by Mr. Philp—"The old camp ground."

Mayor Scott on rising said, that the Mayor and Corporation labored under great indisposition, being at present suffering from a severe cold, in the person of himself, and he felt sure that ample medical certificates could be obtained to relieve the Mayor and Corporation from a speech. As Mayor, and on behalf of the Corporation, he was pleased to be present as their guest. The Firemen were an honor to the Town, and certainly this meeting was an honor to the Firemen, and he thought they were entitled to an extreme degree of credit from the Council, on whose behalf he thanked them sincerely.

Councillors Doherty, Millar, Wrighton and Hamilton returned thanks for the manner in which the toast had been drunk.

Song by Mr. Winch, "The boy from Limerick."

Mr. Lundy then proposed, "Our Guests." In introducing which, he paid a well-merited tribute to a number of young men, who resided in New York, but some of whom were present. These right loyal young men had not only presented the Volunteers with a gold medal, but one of them, Mr. E. C. Lane, had presented a number of beautiful Chinese lanterns to the Fire Company. He considered them worthy friends and guests of the Firemen, and did, therefore, most gladly propose "Our Guests."

Song by Mr. Mitchell, and responses by Messrs. Glover, Lane, Hopkins, Knap and others.

"Canada our Home" was next given.

Song by Glee Club—"The Maple Leaf."

J. Edwards, Esq., being loudly called for, in rising remarked that almost invariably had he been called upon to respond to this toast, and why, he did not understand, unless it was because he was a very old settler.—He saw what few present had seen—the unbroken forest of Canada. He had spent a short time in New York, and well he remembered how those who were along with him had been taunted with being British, and well, also, did he remember the joy of his father on seeing the British Flag again, on Canadian soil. Canada was the freest country on the Globe. Here we enjoyed all that we could enjoy in the way of liberty. In reference to the banquet, he had not before witnessed anything like it; it was splendid, really an honor to the Firemen and their guest, Captain McNaughton, who fully deserved this and more for his services in connection with the Company. He would also take the opportunity to say a word about the Volunteers. They would soon have something to do, and he hoped they would keep cool, obey orders and keep their powder dry.

The next toast was "Ashburnham," to which Messrs. Calcutt, Burnham and Stratton responded in behalf of the Corporation and Village.

Mr. J. Kincaid then gave "The Mercantile Interests," to which Messrs. Millar, R. Walton, D. McNaughton and L. Glover responded.

"The Bar" was then given by Mr. Calcutt, and responded to by Mayor Scott and J. Burnham, Esq.

Mr. P. Hamilton gave "The Medical Profession," responded to by Drs. Poole and Kincaid.

Mr. Roche gave "The Manufacturing Interests."

Song by Mr. Knapp—"He is quite a disgrace to our School," very humorously rendered, after which Messrs. Calcutt, Doherty and Hamilton responded in behalf of the manufacturing interests.

Mr. J. Lundy then gave "The Press." To which Dr. Poole and Mr. Stratton spoke a few words, returning thanks for the manner in which the toast had been introduced and received.

Capt. McNaughton then gave the second important toast of the evening, "The Ladies," although it was admitted by all that it should have been first on the list.—The bachelors were all slow of speech, of stammering tongues, not because their hearts were not moved at the word, but because they were too full, we suppose. Mr. D. Haggart, however, would not allow the toast to be so poorly responded to, but would on behalf of the Ladies thank them for the manner in which "The Ladies" had been received, which he did in very nice and appropriate terms.

Mr. Edwards regretted that young men could so far forget themselves as to be so slow to respond to this toast. How heartily should they do it, and how readily. He (Mr. E.) regretted he could not sing, but, that others might learn it he would repeat a song which he had learned in his youth, and which, through his kindness, we give below.

When Adam at first was created,
And Lord of the universe crown'd,
His happiness was not completed
Until that an help-mate was found.
He had all things by nature provided,
Which give each content to our lives,
He had fame and horses, for hunting,
Which many love more than their wives.

He had a garden, as planted by nature,
Man cannot outvie in this life;
But yet the all-wise great Creator
Still saw that he wanted a wife.
For a man without a wife is a beggar,
Suppose the whole globe he possessed;
But the man that has got a good wife, Sir,
With more than this world he is blest.

When Adam was laid in his slumbers
He then lost a rib from his side,
And when he awoke he with wonder
Beheld his most beautiful bride;
With rapture he gazed upon her,
His happiness now was complete,
And praised the all-wise great Creator,
Who thus had bestowed him a wife.

She was not taken out of his head, Sir,
To reign or triumph over man;
Nor was she taken out of his feet, Sir,
By man to be trodden upon;
But she was taken out of his side, Sir,
His equal and partner to be,
And as they united together,
The man was the top of the tree.

There were numerous other toasts and speeches, among which was one for the health of Mrs. McNaughton and family, and on whose behalf Mr. McNaughton returned thanks.

During the intervals the Glee Club added much to the pleasures of the evening by their presence and song; and after spending one of the pleasantest nights that has been spent in Peterboro for many years the company dispersed pleased with each other and with everybody, regretting only that the occasion of the meeting was the removal of their Captain from among them; but all earnestly hoping that Mr. McNaughton might be as useful and as successful in Lindsay, whither he is about to remove, as he has been in Peterboro, in which wish we sincerely join.

It was urged, during the meeting, that some tangible expression of the appreciation of Mr. McNaughton's services should be presented to him before his departure, and we trust that the idea will not be lost sight of.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening last. Present—His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Toole, Wilson, Wrighton, Stevenson, Doherty, Ewing, Millar, Ormond, Hamilton, Chamberlen and Burnham.

The minutes of the last meeting were read over, amended and confirmed.

A report from the Committee on Finance was read and handed in, which was as follows:—

Your Committee on Finance and Assessment beg to recommend the following accounts to be paid:—

Alex. Morrow, night watch	$12 00
Adam Dobbin, carting	5 25
R. Romaine, printing	58 09

A report from the Special Committee, appointed on the 11th July last, in relation to the revision of the By-laws of the Town was submitted, and on the question of its adoption, it was declared lost.

A communication was handed in and read by the Clerk, from Sidney Smith, asking the Council to allow Mr. Covert to remove earth from Hunter and certain other streets east of Water street, for the purpose of grading the intended connection of the Port Hope Railway with the Chemong Lake Railway. The request was complied with, and the Councillors of the East Ward appointed as a Special Committee to see that the work was properly performed on the streets named in the Communication.

On motion the Council went into Committee of the whole on the motion moved by Mr. Millar, at the last meeting of the Council, on the subject of the Mayor's salary, with Mr. Burnham in the chair.

Mr. Millar moved, seconded by Mr. Cox,—That the blank be filled with four hundred dollars.

Mr. Hamilton moved, seconded by Mr. Chamberlen, in amendment,—That the fees of the Police Court be given to the Mayor for the present year, together with the $120 recommended by the Committee for extra services, and that there be no salary.

The amendment was put and lost.

On motion the Committee rose and reported progress, the Council resumed, and on the question of the adoption of the report, it was declared carried on a division.

A By-law for levying and collecting the rates was read a first time.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

SMITH COUNCIL.

Smith, 13th August, 1866.

The Council met. All the members present

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

A resolution was passed directing the Collector to pay all monies collected by him as a tax on dogs to the Treasurer.

The Reeve was directed to inform the Hon. Billa Flint that the Council had granted the sum of ten dollars, as an equivalent to the same amount offered by him, to purchase prize books, to be distributed amongst the children attending the Common Schools of the Township.

The following By-laws received their several readings and were passed:—

A By-law to provide for the levying and collecting the rate of six and one-half mills on the dollar, for monies to be raised under By-laws of the Council of the County, and one mill on the dollar for Municipal purposes.

A By-law to provide for the levying and collecting the following sums on the several School Sections, therein mentioned, viz.:—on No. 1 $120, No. 2 $170, No. 3 $235, No. 4 $100, No. 5 $175, No. 6 $180, No. 7 $180, No. 8 $140, No. 9 $220 and No. 10 $120.

The Clerk was instructed not to enter the taxes levied previous to 1863 on the N. W. quarter of lot No. 20 in the 9th Concession on the Collectors Roll for the present year, as the patent was only issued for the same on the 18th September, 1865.

London, August 15, noon—It is announced to-day that the plans for the Confederation of the British Provinces of North America have been definitely arranged by the Government.—The statement is also made that the terms for a loan from the Government for the building of an Inter-Colonial Railroad from Halifax, Nova Scotia, to a point of connection with the Canadian Grand Trunk R. R. have been settled.

MONAGHAN TOWNSHIP COUNCIL.

Monaghan, August 7, 1866.

The Council met at 10 o'clock. Present—Messrs. Collins, Robson, Dundas and Goodfellow.

The minutes of two previous meetings were read and confirmed.

On the motion of Mr. Dundas, Mr. Robson took the chair.

Communications.

From Robt. Donaldson, Esq., P. L. L. C. Company, on behalf of said Company, that the Council would be pleased to take such steps as might be considered necessary to have the allowance of road between Park Lots from one to seven inclusive in Township, Lot number sixteen of the 12th Concession, as well as Park lots from one to six inclusive in Township, lot number fifteen of said Concession, at present enclosed and in the occupation of Mr. James Trotter Heathorn, of Peterboro; Mrs. Letitia Ware, of North Monaghan; John McGowan, of same place; as it is necessary not only for the company but also for the interest and convenience of the public generally, that the said allowance for road should at once be open for public use.

The Clerk was directed to inform Mr. Donaldson that in consequence of his non-compliance with the Consolidated Statutes of U. C., Chap. 54, sections 333 and 334, the Council was unable to comply with his wishes; but on his doing so, would, at next meeting, pass a By-law opening said allowance of road for public traffic, as it is their expressed determination to open all such road allowances when demanded.

From A. T. Williams, Esq., Supt. of Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Co., requesting information from the Reeve respecting a culvert on the Millbrook branch, in the Township of North Monaghan.

From the Hon Billa Flint, offering the sum of $10 to each Municipality in the County, which advanced the like sum for Prize Books for their respective Townships.

From the County Clerk and Treasurer, showing that the sum of $1064.15 was divided by the County Council of Peterborough to be levied within this Municipality for present year, such gross amount being made of the following items, viz.:—

Breech Loading Arms—Official Report.

(From the London Shooting Gazette)

The final report of the war-Office committee on Mr. Snider's system for breech loading arms has been published. It bears date 21st June, and gives the results of the various experiments that have been made. Five men were provided with twenty rounds of ammunition, which they placed in their belts as for service. They fired from the shoulder at 200 yards range, first with the muzzle-loading Enfield, and then with converted weapon. The mean result was that in the first case 10 minutes 12 seconds was occupied in the firing, against 5 minutes 28 seconds in the second. The mean deviation was very slightly in favour of the old weapon.—Another experiment was made with a detachment of marines, who were set to rapid file firing. Them men succeeded in making ten shots in less then 3 minutes and three-quarters, and obtaining a figure of accuracy in favor of the new weapon as opposed to the muzzles loader in the ratio of three to two. Two of the converted rifles were afterwards exposed to the weather so as to become seriously rusted. The effect was to spoil the breech-loosing apparatus for the time, but it was quite possible to fire the rifle as a muzzle loader. The new cartridges gave great satisfaction Their metel castings prevents the escape of gas which is common to breech-loading arrangements, and which makes the Prussian needle gun useful only from the hip; while at the same time it prevents damp from entering into and destroying the powder. Ube committee have fired 6,8.8 rounds from the six converted Enfields, and over 2,000 from other rifles. In all these experiments there were only three mis-fires, which were occasioned apparently by want of fulminate in the cap. Before they close their report they suggest the necessity for investigating the requirements of a small bore breech loader of 0.45 calibre or thereabouts, with which additional work may be done at long ranges, and they also say that if the present gauge be continued, it will be well that the weight, quality of iron, thickness of barrel, and twist of rifling should be first of all examined.

The School Question.

Mr. Cauchon, in a letter from Ottawa, to the Journal de Quebec, is constrained to admit that the demand for a new separate school bill in Upper Canada, rests on a very slender foundation. He says;—

"At the time when the promise made to the Protestants of Lower Canada to amend the law so as to permit them to organise their schools in the way they desired, and to give them their just part of the public appropriation—there was then no prospect of a deputy superintendent—the Catholics of Upper Canada were told: "you will retain your separate schools as they are at present." The Catholics admit themselves, that if this arrangement were strictly adhered to, they would have nothing to ask. The evil is not yet without a remedy: some slight modifications in the Lower Canada bill would put matters right. In that case, the Upper Canada bill would leave us reason to rest upon."

According to this account, the Upper Canada bill was based on an alteration of the arrangement made when the promise of an amended law for Lower Canada and a guarantee to the minority in each Province were given; this alteration consisting of a proposal to appoint a Protestant deputy superintendent of education. If that provision were struck out, Mr. Cauchon admits, the grounds on which the pretension of the Upper Canada bishops rested would have been cut away. We are glad to find this frank admission made by so eminent a Catholic journalist and public man as Mr. Cauchon.—Ledger.

COLLISION.—On Saturday morning last the Steamer Corinthian, while on her way across the lake, from Charlotte to the north shore, came in collision with the Schooner Wanderer, from Toronto, bound for Oswego. The knight heads, bow sprit, jib boom, tore boom, and split forsails of the vessel were carried away, while the rail and several stanchions were broken in the collision. The damage done the Corinthian was considerable; though not of a serious nature, as it must have undoubtedly have been but for the watchfulness of the officers and crew. The upper part of her side was broken in three different places, but did not interfere with the regularity of her trips. The carpenters are at work repairing the damage. It would appear that the schooner was without lights.—Guide.

LONDON, August 17—Noon.—The final negotiations for the establishment of peace between Prussia and Austria, and between Austria and Italy are in progress, and peace is regarded as certain.

Jules Dudonte, Chancellor of the French Consulate, was murdered in his bed by a Chinese servant, at Honolulu.

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

DENTISTRY.—Mr. O'DONNELL'S office will be closed till Wednesday, Aug. 29th, at 12 o'clock, noon.

HEALTH & STRENGTH.—To prevent or conquer disease is one of the grandest attainments ever aimed at by man; and Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers will as sure cure coughs, colds, tickling in the throat and pulmonary complaints, as war and pestilence will destroy. Severe colds, if not attended to, sooner or later lead to incurable consumption, and the strength of the strongest often fails if neglected. The readiest and best means known for the cure of these complaints is "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers," which have been thoroughly tried for the last twenty years, and have never been known to fail. Singers and public speakers will also derive great benefit from the use of them. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25cts. per box.

CANADIAN INDEBTEDNESS.—The present indebtedness of Canada is between 50 and 60 million dollars, a nice round little sum certainly but she does not owe this without having something to show for it; there is the Welland Canal, the Grand Trunk Railway extending over 700 miles, and last, though not least, is the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," which for the cure of pleurisy, pains in the back and side, sprains, bruises, sudden colds, frost-bites, &c., has no equal. Sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cts. per bottle.

HIDE BOUND HORSES.

A horse is said to be hide-bound when his skin will not slip under the pressure of the head, but sticks as if it was glued, which condition is always dependent on a deranged state of the stomach and digestive organs—by correcting which, and giving to them a healthy tone and condition, the disease or complaint will disappear. Experience has proved that the means best adopted to this end is "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine." It has been used in numerous cases with complete success, generally effecting a cure in a few days. It is the best condition medicine known, and may be given with perfect safety at all times, and does not require that the horse be kept from work.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurl & Co. is on each package.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, as corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

Poetry.

KITTY NEIL.

DENIS FLORENCE M'CARTHY.

Ah, sweet Kitty Neil rise up from your wheel;
Your neat little foot will be tired with spinning:
Come, trip down with me to the sycamore tree,
Half the parish is there and the dance is beginning.

The sun is gone down, but the full harvest moon
Shines sweetly and cool on the dew-whitened valley;
While all the air rings with the soft, loving things,
Each little bird sings in the green shaded alley.

With a blush and a smile, Kitty rose 'tho white
Her eye in the glass, as she bound her hair, glancing,
'Tis so hard to refuse when a young lover sues,
So she couldn't but choose to go off to the dancing.

And now on the green the glad group are seen,
Each gay-hearted lad with the lass of his choosing;
And Pat, without fail, leads out sweet Kitty Neil—
Somehow, when he asked, she ne'er thought of refusing.

Now Felix Magee puts his pipes on his knee,
And with flourish so free, sets each couple in motion,
With a cheer and a bound the lads patter the ground—
And the maids move round just like swans on the ocean.

Cheeks bright as the rose—feet light as the doe's,
Now coyly retiring, now boldly advancing;
Search the world all round, from the sky to the ground—
No such sight will be found as an Irish lass dancing.

Sweet Kate, who could view your eyes of deep blue,
Beaming humidly through their dark lashes so mildly,
Your fair turned arm, heaving breast, rounded form—
Nor feel his heart warm and his pulses throb wildly.

Poor Pat feels his heart, as he gazes, depart,
Subdued by the smart of such painful but sweet love;
The sight leaves his eyes as he cries, with a sigh,
"Dance light, for my heart it lies under your feet, love!"

Varieties.

Maxims for Young Men.

1. The world estimates men by their success in life, and by general consent, success is evidence of superority.

2. Never, under any circumstances, assume a responsibitity you can avoid consistently with your duty to yourself and others.

3. Base all your actions upon a principle of right; preserve your integrity of character, and in doing this never reckon the cost by any means.

4. Remember that self interest is more likely to warp your judgment than all other circumstances combined; therefore look well to your duty when your interest is concerned.

5. Never make money at the expense of your reputation.

6. Be neither lavish nor niggardly; of the two the latter. A mean man is universaly despised, but public favor is a stepping stone to preferment; therefore, the generous feeling should be cultivated.

7. Say but little—thing much and do all you can.

8. Let your expenses be such as to leave a balance in your pocket.

9. Keep clear of the law; for even if you gain your case, you are generally a loser at the end.

10. Avoid borrowing and lending—they are bad habits.

11. Wine drinking and cigars lead to a bad end; they impair the mind and pocket, and lead to a waste of time.

12. Never relate your misfortune, and grieve over what you cannot prevent.

WHICH HALF?

Here is an English story of the times—a bank and panic incident that must not now be lost:—

In the midst of the late excitement, and at the moment when everybody thought all the banks were 'going to the dogs' together, Mr. Jones rushed into the bank of which he was a stock-holder, and thrusting the certificate into the face of the transfer clerk, he said in great haste:—

'Here, please transfer half that to James Smith!'

The clerk looked at it, and then asked him—

'Which half, Mr. Jones?'

'I don't care which half,' replied Jones, puzzled at the inquiry.

'You had better go to the courts; I can't make the transfer without a legal decision. If you really wish to transfer your other half to Mr. Smith, we can't do it here.'

Jones was confounded. He knew that the banks were all in a muddle, but this was too deep for him. He took his certificate from the hand of the smiling clerk, and on looking at it, lo! it was his marriage certificate! Being a printed form, on fine paper, and put away carefully, it was the first thing that Mr. Jones laid hands on when to his secretary for his bank stock script. He went home rejoicing that there had been no transfer made to Mr. Smith, and taking the right papers this time, hastened down town in time to get all straight.

Fanny Fern seems to be thoroughly posted on the man question. She understands what exactly actuates the horrid creatures. She unexed herself long ago, and, of course, can be relied upon when she speaks of the sterner sex. The following is Fanny's last:—

"Shew but a strip of white stocking above your boot, or a bit of embroidered skirt, or balmoral, and you may lead a man by the nose. I have positively seen men standing at the corners eagerly watching, bobbing their heads this way and that, to catch a sight of the gaiter boot as they alighted from the various omnibuses. Not all young men either—but grey headed old codgers, who had grandpa written all over them."

THINGS I LIKE TO SEE.—A working man reading the newspapers; a real lady who can carry a parcel; a father at a place of amusement with his children; a young man with a clear eye, and a frank, virtuous, wholesome face; a shop girl nicely dressed and without sham ornamentation; a man of business going home at night with a bouquet for his wife; a shop-keeper civil to and patient with a poor woman, who, with a baby across her arm, ventures to buy a one cent article; a dress-maker who is scientific enough to perfect "a fit," and yet leave your breathing apparatus in a Christian-working condition, a shop that is not an emporium, a milliner who don't come from Paris; a Jolly domestic who likes "the family;" a bride with her pet house; a young father with his first boy.—Fanny Fern.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DUNAR BARNS & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "cowboy" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; has as some may, just read the following:

" • • • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y.°

" • • • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

" • • • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEIMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo.°

" • • • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y.°

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

P. H. DRAKE & CO., New York City.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 14, 1865.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. REELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the priests U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

W. E. HAGAN, Troy, N. Y., Chemist.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, o. a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Duggists.

Heimstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

C. HEIMSTREET, Chemist.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER—for Indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c., where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity makes it a cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bottle. Ask for "Lyon's" Pure Extract. Take no other.

APPEAL TO THE VOLUNTEERS.

BY ANGUS MACKINNON.

Ye guardians of our native home, ye free-born Volunteers,
Stand forth! a traitor 's at our gates, a treatherous foe appears.
Unfold the flag of Liberty—stand firm beneath its dome,
And shout—for Right and Freedom, Victoria and our Home.
Oh, when was free-born Briton yet bound in a tyrant's chain,
The name and thought of Slavery he ever did disdain;
And shall a vile and traitorous band, arch-traitors to our Queen,
Presume to stain with infamy our yet untarnished name?
No! our name shall yet go forth to earth's remotest bounds,
Unwithered by a coward's breath, unscathed by Treason,s hounds.
And generation now unborn will yet extol the pride
That would not let their fathers quake berore a traitor's eye.
March on, true-hearted Volunteers! march on to Victory!
Your "Eastern Princess" smiles benign your loyal hearts to see.
And when you drive the subtle foe back to the dens of vice,
Return to open arms of love, with kindred friends rejoice.
Canadians! oh, remember the future of our land,
When West'rn wilds will own our sway and bloom beneath our hand;
From east to west in unity each willing heart be tied—
Canada's dazzling glory shall bedim her neighbor's eye.
Peace to the ashes of the slain! who freely gave their lives,
A ransom for their country's sake, a willing sacrifice;
Their memories shall never go in oblivion darkness down
Into their graves; and let us hope they've gained immortal crowns.
Ye pillars of the Christian Church, your influence send abroad,
Let prayers for Queen Victoria beseige the Throne of God;
That she whose name is dear to us—whose rule we love to own—
May long and prosp'rous reign in peace o'er Canada our Home.

Literature.

Dr. Leask, in the Rainbow, for September last, notices a recent publication in England, the manuscript of which was written five years ago, in which Napoleon III is set forth as most seriously scheming the entire conquest of Europe and of the world. The following extract is given as having been one of the utterance of the great adventurer before he came into power:—

NAPOLEON'S THOUGHTS AND PLANS.

But soft. Where is my map, the map of all the world? I conquer one republic, and by that same cry—Liberty—I'll conquer all the governments on earth, at least upon this continent of ours.

Where is the land wherein our principles have not unheeded worked, and are not working. The old monarchic governments are doting; everywhere the peoples, suffering under priestcraft, writhe for liberty.—These governments have allied themselves with priests, they form concordats; but having used the priests, I'll reign supreme without them. Force and success shall sanctify my rule; and as the man of people, I'll strive for universal rule. What country is not weak while I am strong? Prussia has her Poles, her subdivided councils; Austria her Hungarians; Turkey her Greeks, her Egypt; Italy, ah, Italy! imperial Italy, she has her Pope, and all his cardinals, and all the lazy, earth-consuming tribes, which find their haunts mid cells and monasteries.

Is there not here an empire worth my rule? Imperium in imperio, is there now mid all these old priest-ridden monarchies. But I will gather to myself, mid all those elements of empire and of sway which shall at last o'er all predominate.

Who knows what may be at some future time? If revolution rises in one place—the very soil we tread on is volcanic—'twill in another; and, of all places chief, in Italy. Ah, then I will protect my friend the Pope: I'll send him troops to hold his capital—but only for himself. But being there at Rome, the seat of empire, there I'll stay. 'Tis easy to find reason when one has power, and if none appear self-evident, why, then, I will create them. Liberty first, non-intervention second, confederacy last, shall be my watch-word and my principles. Having the power, I will but intervene where hitches may occur in carrying out, and only then on colorable pretexts. Evermore still keeping up the cry—non-intervention, liberty of the peoples. Thus I'll form a chain around all else till ready to my hand there shall be formed a vast confederacy, whose links shall be each one a long oppressed nationality, and to them all I'll come their noble, grand deliverer!

'Tis but to lift the finger from the spot and revolution will begin to sound, and then that venerable man the Pope, must be protected still; and so I'll linger on and gain a stealthy growth while other projects ripen to my hand.

But, nought too soon; no—that would peril all. The Emperor, mine uncle, went to say, "wait till the pear is ripe;" and kings shall ripe and ripe, and rot and rot before the rising up of revolution. But when the harvest comes, I'll rule the winds and ride upon the whirlwind, gathering all beneath my potent, earth-compelling rule.

What matters it that I profess to serve the Pope, and cause my officers to seem to serve him too, while all men feel our spreading principles? Their presence is sufficient taking time to pull down all the Papal power and rule. And now, meanwhile, I deal with Austria.

She also holds a stake in Italy by priestcraft and by force; but Piedmont is her natural enemy, and in due time, all other things conspiring, I'll stir up Piedmont—war for an idea; uphold the threatened rights of Northern Italy, and make a vow to free all Italy from the Alps to the Adriatic. All, all Italy, seeking nothing for my self but to be deemed the friend of freedom.

Now Austria is but dull and all effete; her soldiers mere machines; while mine are taught all self-reliance, marching close or loose, fighting in rank or rushing loosely on, and we will beat them, and having done so, then I'll round off France, seize Nice and Savoy, amid clouds of reports, and using universal suffrage. A very easy thing indeed to do, when abstract power is once acquired; beside, that is the source from whence I rose; so all things work consistent as a whole, and to end—my self-aggrandizement.

But all this while it must not be forgot there's England and there's Russia to be met. What would they say to my Italian views? and they are friendly to each other too, and both powerful!

Where can I find some ground of contention to cause a separation and win Russia to my side?

There's the far East, where my great uncle strove to raise an empire! And in Jerusalem—French, English, Russian, Greek, are met, having their holy places. That's the chief spot where opes the door of hope, and there I'll strive for power, and see if Russia cannot be provoked, by my gaining the supremacy over the holy places, to break into a war with Turkey.

Turkey is as a dying man; some must ere long divide his spoil; and Russia has for years been looking towards Constantinople, and will only too readily be moved to quarrel and rush in.

I'll plan it so; for England, I can see, will then come forward, fearing the equilibrium may be disturbed, and this will bring her first to aid the Turk, and then I will come last; and aiding to put down Russia, so aiding Turkey, I will make peace mid all when Russia is in peril; so winning honor, winning Russia too, as far as England is concerned; beside the gain that will accrue from weakening Russia: so that course is fixed.

By peace I'll win my way, by war when absolutely needed, but still more by peace. Suddenly farmed; interrupting all calculations of allies; putting all things into confusion, mystery, uncertainty; all of which, by acting thus when having power, I'll hold the key.

A good idea! to be repeated, too, repeatedly!

This making peace leaves him who makes it at his chosen time still master of the situation. But mind this: still must there be an overwhelming force to give me power even to make peace; so to create that peace, and then to use it.

Nothing like strong battalions, numerous ships, a well provided commissariat; arsenals formed and filled; harbors repaired; new formed; railroads abundant and concentrated; factories of arms widely distributed, the better to escape notice; sailors and soldiers trained and dismissed, but ready for recall; all points of detail thoroughly dwelt on and carried through.—While others sleep, and sleep for long they shall, I'm wide awake, and they shall only rise to see me take the lead.

And now, the better to beguile the time, when all these things are put in ample train, there shall be feasts and balls and festivals, huntings and travels, hospitalities. Friends will I make of other potentates—personal friends as far as possible, and so the less my views will be suspected.

I will not show too bright nor yet too humble, but only as befits a rising man—a man who waits on others in some sort, and rather seeks to please than to govern.

Ah! 'twill be long, eleven years at least, before my greater hopes can draw ahead; but patience and work on. A time will come when all things shall be ripe. Russia allied with me, and England too—oh, how I'll laugh at each within my sleeve! Austria humbled; Spain gained by flatteries and show of power; Sardinia won, perhaps all Italy; Egypt seduced in secret to my views; Hungary ready to burst out in flames; Poland all ripe for insurrection; Algeria and Tunisia gained to me; the slaves of Russia ripening for revolt,—still all shall slumber and shall smoulder on, while to the East I turn my further views, proposing there to raise an empire and restore the Jews, and take at least half Turkey to myself.

For this end embassaries must prepare a cause of interference. The Jesuits will be useful; our Christians must be protected and encouraged, their local quarrels sown to and promoted, kept smouldering, so that at some given time some outbreak may occur to bring down all the fury of the Turk, and then I come as their deliverer.

Thus I'll deliver all, putting them first in tribulation, that I may seem as their deliverer. And then, I'll cause the Jews to be restored. But this, like all my plans, must be most secret; for no one time the Jews shall hail me as Savior—their Messiah!

I said things must be secret—that's my plan. There's nothing spoils a grand conception so much as telling to another; it brings in confusion—spoils the unity; and it is better far to make some petty errors in performance, than by admitting and seeking to dovetail others' views to disturb the regular lines of thought. The mastery of a secret in itself a source of power. Men dread him whom they cannot fathom. And when I have gained power mystery shall aid it. Therefore I'll give no sign one moment sooner than I well can help of what I am about. I'll do the deeds; and facts accomplished can always be borne out, if not justified, where there is power; and if none can arraign me, and I am before them with facts, why then a little extra gaiety, excitement, wonders for nine days, will fill men's minds, and time will cover all.

I'll make things pleasant; that is what men like. All shall be gilded, softened by applause, a speech, profession, compliment; 'twill cost me nothing, and it pleases them, and novelty will still distract the changeful crowd. Well, then, I'll manage above all to be allied with England. She has respect and weight throughout the world; her character will give me weight, and I will use it as long and as far as ever it can be used; and clearly it can be so for some few years, while I am gathering strength. Amid professions of the utmost liberality, I'll gag the press and turn it to my use; and while I will allow no speech against me, I will permit and encourage all that can favor my views, and in due time I'll take a step in policy which never yet was used.

I note that novelties are stunning—causing sensation—are apt to rouse direct immediate counteraction; therefore I'll do what men can scarce expect, and with a seeming openess; I, and not yet I, but writers in my pay (so can I easily deny them,) will put forth future plans beforehand.

Here, well discerned, a pamphleteering system answers my view in two ways. For first, I will abate the edge of novelty, and then I'll gather what men think and say, and through that knowledge I will gain power to amend, and then get forth and act, and men shall surely feel—Why, this is nothing new—we knew it all before!

And so especially I'll win my way, times out of number!

Another plan I have too on my mind.—When actual deeds shall speak to England and alarm her fears, I'll make commercial treaties with her merchants, and she shall think self-interest alone will tie my hands, for well she loveth gain. And with commercial views, old Babylon shall raise, and commerce shall commerce her, olden course upon the great Euphrates; thus I'll creep towards India. Meanwhile for Russia I will lay my bait; she shall go halves at first within the earth; the East I'll proffer to her eager arms, so shall she stand my friend; but once the West is mine, then soon the civilized West shall conquer all the uncivilized East.

And as for English!—ah! last of all the time was come to crush that little isle.

When all the world is nearly in my hands, I'll bring it all to bear against Great Britain. She is all scattered—I concentrated. Everywhere her commerce shall be attacked, her colonies invaded, her seaports stormed. Electric wires shall flash my orders at a given moment, rise in all climes, and crush Great Britain. She shall go down, and I will reign supreme throughout the world. Builder and architect of my own fortune! Happier than Napoleon's son, and greater; greater than he himself. I will transcend his glory. Never name shall be like my name. The image of all glory shall be my image. I, that great reality, like unto God, my power universal—But soft—I dream—I am but captive now!

Well, well, all's one for that. I'll let time shape; and there—an end. Now to my studies!

Thus he sat him down. He knew not it is writ:

"This matter is by a decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones; to the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men!"

The Decoy Which Makes Young Men Drunkards.

Go with us to a public house, where a number of young men are assembled. A few among them may be young and timid, they approach the counter, and wine, rum and brandy are called for. One or two may stand back and say, "No, gentlemen, we do not drink any; please excuse us." Immediately the rest turn round and begin to taunt their friends who do refuse to drink, saying they are afraid of getting "tight," of the "old man," and some may whisper audibly, "Well, they are mean fellows—they are afraid they have to spend a cent!" Here you see two very sensitive nerves are touched, courage and cleverness. Their bosoms swell with pride, and rather than bear these flings of their companions, they step up to the counter, and soon join in the revelry. The ice is now broken, the great drama performed. Others follow in natural order, until the individual who refuses to drink at first reels along the public street without shame. Such is the manner in which thousands of our young men are led away by a false ambition, and it seems thousands more will follow in their path unless they learn the meaning of courage.

"Tom—come, now tell us the biggest lie you ever told in all your life, and you shall have a glass of stout?" "A lie! I never told one in all my life." "Draw that stout."

Aunt Betty tells a story about one of her near neighbors, when she lived in the country, who was "meaner than parsley." "Why," she says, "whenever he happened to get hold of a half a dollar he would give it such a squeeze, that the poor eagle would squeel out.

A young ensign of a regiment, residing in a room which was very small, was visited by one of his fashionable friends, who, on taking his leave, said: "Well, Charles, how much longer do you mean to stop in this nut shell?" To which he replied: "Until I become a kernel."

If ever you meet with an accident at table, endeavor to be composed. A gentleman carving a tough goose had the misfortune to send it entirely out of the dish into the lap of a young lady who sat next to him, on which he looked her full in the face and said, with the utmost coolness, "Madam, I will thank you for that goose!"

The Tongue: Its Use and Abuse.

Last week the Music Hall, Nelson Street, Newcastle, was crowded to hear a lecture by the Rev. Peter McKenzie, of Gateshead, the subject of the address being "The Tongue: it use and abuse." Dr. Needham presided. The Rev. Lecturer was received with loud and prolonged cheering. After a few preliminary observations, he proceeded to say that the human body was "fearfully and wonderfully" adopted to its purpose, the eyes for seeing, the ear for hearing, and the tongue for speaking, so that deprived of any of our senses, we should be placed in a very pitiable condition indeed. Speech might be said to be the pump that brought up the water out of the great lake of thought.—When the Lord endowed man with speech at first the angels might look on with astonishment. It was something startling, something unique, something they had never heard before. Angels had heard the birds sing, the dogs bark, the sheep make a noise, but they had neverheard a man speak before. (Hear, hear.) When man spoke eloquence was born. (Hear and applause.) Keener than the daggers's point, sharper than the edge of the sword, louder than the thunder's peal, more impressive than the falls of Niagara, more terrible darkness," soothing as the song of the nightingale—marvellous was the prower of the human tongue. (Hear, hear, and applause.)—That little speaking apparatus, what power there was in it. There were 3,040 different languages on the earth, and if they were to give a little instrument time it would roll about them all and tumble them out to berfection. (Hear, hear.) It could go from fact to faction, from poetry to prose, from long metre to short—(laughter)—and there was no time lost in striking off the steam or in pulling the string.—(Hear, hear.) Having such power and such force in it, it was beyond compare that it should be properly regulated.—(Hear.) The fact of a man having mastered the little number was proof to demonstration that he was perfect. In order to gain that perfection it would require care, caution, and grace. (Hear, hear.) It was said of the English, and he supposed that would include the Scotch—(laughter)—that they were rather meagre in their conversation—that they were not particulary loquacious. (Hear.) They gave out there words as they gave out their hardware, that was for "value received." (Hear, hear, and laughter.) As a rule that was correct, but there were a tremendous lot of exceptions to it (Hear, hear, and much laughter.) There were a great many persons who gave them an ocean of words, without any common sense in it—a bushel of chaff with no grain of sense in it. Good, sound good in such cases. One of the abuses equivocation. Hear, hear.) Young people guard against equivocation—against untruth. The habit blasted the fair blossom of youth and made salvation impossible if they gave way to it. (Hear, hear.) Lies were generally told to cover some fault or mishap. The best way to get up square if they had done wrong was to out with an honest confession. (Hear, hear.) If they told one lie they must patch it with another or it would rain through in the morning. (Hear, hear.) The rev. lecturer impressed upon mothers to be particularly careful what they said to the little ones, and always perform what they promised to them. One evil of the little member, he continued, might be said to be trifling. They had need to make the most of everything when they had opportunities, and not trifle away their time when they met upon weather and the crops and the news of the day. Those subjects were worn threadbare. (Hear, hear.) Swearing was also a tremendous abure of the little member. A man that swore went up to the cannon of Divine law and set fire to the powder. A man that swore exposed his soul to everylasting ruin. Another abuse of the tongue was evil speaking.—"Speak evil of no man" was as clear, as plain, and as positive as the command, "Thou shalt not kill." Evil speaking consisted in dealing with the faults and failings of others. Anther abuse was detractors. By that he meant taking down a peg. Detractors had a sort of catholic hatred to mankind. They were an envious, narrow-minded class. Their feeling might be expressed in the prayer—

"Lord, bless me and my wife,
Our John and his wife;
We four, but no more,
Amen."

(Laughter.) Another evil he had to notice was tale-bearing. The tale-bearer was hell's first man, pernicious letter carrier, the fallen family's newsmonger, hell's gazette. (Hear, hear.)

"Believe not each aspersing word,
As some weak person do,
But still believe the story false
Which ought not to be true."

(Hear, hear, and applause.) Another evil was that of slander. Let them set their hearts against this evil practice. Another evil was that of flattery.

"It is an old maxim of the schools,
That flattery is the food of fools;
But now and then your man of wit
Will condescend to take a bit."

(Laughter.) Flattery was deceitful and dangerous. It was that when flatterers met together the devil went to dinner, as there was no danger of them breaking away. (Laughter.) The flatterer was said to be the beast that bit you when he was smiling. The serpent, it was said licked "his victim all over and then swallowed him." The next time any of them had a dish of flattery let them make their wills, for the next thing they would see would be their boot heels. (Hear, hear, and Laughter.) The next evil was grumbling.—Grumblers were a very numerous society.

If they could muster them and mobilise them they would frighten all the Fenians into fits, and if any were spread and came out again they would be affected by St. Vitus' dance all their lives. (Laughter.) They were generally a nervous class.—They saw storms in the future, lions in the way, and they always saw double. (Hear, hear.) There were to things they should never grumble about. The first, was "Never grumble about what you cannot help;" and the second, "Never grumble about what you can help" (Hear, hear, and laughter.) In order to guard these unruly members let them think before they spoke. (Hear, hear.) As God had given them a soul and an intelligent mind and heart, felt them think, and what they thought and felt in their inner man to be right, give expression to. After giving his hearers some excellent advice, the rev. lecture resumed his seat amid loud applause.

Cordial votes of thanks to the rev. lecturer for his able and interresting address and to the Chairman for presiding, were passed, and concluded the proceedings.

A Startling Denouement.

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald writes as follows:

We have had, within a few days, a crime evolved from "polite circles" that has set "society" to investigating the status of its members. During the past winter and this summer a tall fine looking young man, probably thirty years of age, appeared hear and was found to be on the staff of Admiral Farragut, and detailed to the Bureau of Navigation in the Navy Department. He went to parties, balls, receptions, ect., and Mr. William Ringold Cooper, as he called himself, was soon a great favorite with the ladies, many of whom, of course, adored him. In his visits he became acquainted with the niece of a prominent Government official. She was handsome, talented and wealthy—or at least an heiress. This was just what William Ringold wanted, and he laid seige to her heart, which, after a brief three months, capitulated. On Wednesday morning they were married, and accompanied by a bridal party, took the train for Philadelphia, amid the congratulations of a host of friends.—There was, however, a skeleton at this feast—indeed two of them—in the shape of Chief Wood's detectives, of the Treasury. Some man had personated Paymaster A. R. Allen of the Navy, and by elaborate and correctly executed vouchers, had obtained a draft of $50,000 from the Treasury. The Treasury would the money, and the detectives would the thief. The rest of the story is as brief as the married life. The detectives followed the bridal party to the cars and arrested Cooper in the train—and such a scene! "Oh, it could not be him—he was such a nice man," jabbered the ladies of the party.—"It was an insult and an outrage to arrest him—it was a terrible mistake," said the gentlemen. But it was no mistake, for the unhappy bridegroom handed forth nearly all of the money, and went as meekly as a lamb into the hands of the officers, who put him in jail here. The unhappy bride became prostrated with mortification and shame, and returned with her friends to her family here, saddened but wise in the knowledge that the course of true love don't run smooth even after the knot is tied. As for "good society," it swears high oaths all over town that it never knew the man who even yesterday was flattered and fawned upon! Sweet are the uses of adversity in Washington.

Romantic and Tragic Love Affair.

Some two years ago Henry Fazel, a young German, obtained a situation as porter in the grocery store of Henry Rush.—For a time Fazel was attentive to business, and Mr. Bush promoted him to the position of book keeper, and took him into his family and treated him as a son.

The grocer was the father of a handsome unsophisticated daughter named Minna, at that time not quite sixteen years old. Fazel took advantage of his position and the opportunities afforded him to win the affections of the young girl. He was the first man who had talked of love to Minna, and we are told that the early whisperings of affection are irresistible to young ladies of her age.

As soon as Mr. Bush discovered the intimacy existing between his daughter and Fazel, he expressed his decided disapprobation, and discharged the book-keeper.—Fazel had been too much occupied with thoughts of Minna to pay proper attention to his books, and many errors were discovered.

On being discharged and forbidden the house, Fazel lingered about the neighborhood, and finally obtained a situation as bar-tender in a saloon next door to Bush's grocery. He now had secret meetings with Minna.

On Friday the lovers met somewhere in the city, and passed the greater part of the day together. Before this they had spoken of taking poison and dying together, and at the meeting Minna asked him if he had done what he intended. He replied that he had not, but would do so at night. She assured him that if he took poison that night she would do the same, and they would both die at the same time. She was as good as her word. At three o'clock on Saturday Morning Minna awoke her sister, and told her she had taken arsenic. A physician was sent for, but she was past relief, and died in a short time.

About daylight Fazel was found in Bush's garden, insensible and gasping for breath. He had swallowed a large dose of laudanum, Dr. Bates was sent for and succeeded in saving his life, and he is now locked up in the calaboose on a charge of murder. It is expected to prove that he induced the young girl to commit suicide, and if the necessary evidence can be obtained, he will obtriate his guilt in the penitentiary.—St. Louis Democrat.

The following shows how foolish people get sold sometimes in answering advertisements offering to send 'valuable information for twenty five cents.' An honest farmer saw an advertised receipt to prevent wells and cisterns from freezing.

He sent his money and received this as an answer. 'Take in your well or cistern on cold nights and keep it by the fire.'

The Fenian Brotherhood.

MOVEMENTS IN NEW YORK AND BOSTON.

The New York Herald of Friday gives the following news about the Fenians in that city:—

"A number of gentlemen presented themselves at the Stephens headquarters, Chatham street, yesterday afternoon, as a deputation from General Sweeny, and requested an interview with James Stephens, who happened to be in at the time. The presence of opponents caused no little excitement among the officers who have recently arrived from Ireland, and all sorts of speculations were indulged in as to the object of their mission. It was soon, however, learned that they had been directed by General Sweeny to wait on the C. O. I. R. for the purpose of obtaining the names of the circles which had ceded from John O'Mahony at the time of the split, and joined with Colonel Roberts, so that he, the General, might use his influence with them to secure their reunion under the guidance of James Stephens for the liberation of Ireland on Irish soil.

"A good deal of loud talk was indulged in during the presence of the deputation, which resulted in Mr. Stephens refusing to have anything whatever to do with General Sweeny or President Roberts. If any faith is to be placed in the avowed object of the deputation, it would appear that General Sweeny has no control over the books and papers of Roberts' headquarters, and has consequently no power of obtaining the names of officers of circles, with whom it was supposed he was constantly in communication.

"Just at this time, when preparations are so actively progressing for a grand movement on Canada, it is difficult to understand what object General Sweeny had in approaching James Stephens: for certain it is that he could never have decided on giving up his darling object of invasion, and positively await a course of events in order to place himself at the head of an army in Ireland. There is something on the tapis at present which can only be understood by further developments.

A Boston correspondent of the Herald writes as follows on the 21st;—

"A number of delegates, representing a large body of New England Irishmen, Fenians and others, in obedience to a call assembled in secret council in Mercantile hall in this city last evening, to the number of about one hundred and fifty—nearly all of them military men—for the annexation of Canada and the provinces to the United States.

"It is a significant fact that Colonel A. P. Sinnott, a native of New Brunswick and a prominent agitator of annexation some twenty years ago in that place, besides being a well-known and influential Fenian, was elected president, and Major McNamara, late of the United States army, also a Fenian, military director of the 'Annexation League.'

"The following advertisement which is supposed to emanate from the authorities of this new body, is significant of a 'fighting crisis';—

"'To the officers of the United States army.—

"'Officers of adventure and spirit can hear of something to their advantage by calling at office No. 4, 31 Exchange street None may call but officers with an honorable discharge.'

"'We called at the place named above, and there found, as we supposed we should, Col. Sinnott and Major McNamara, the president and military director of the league—the premises above are occupied by them as a law office. We found them rather reticent in regard to the affairs of the organization, Colonel Sinnott saying in reply to the question 'Have you any connection with Mr. Roberts?' 'Decidedly not; that when he issued a proclamation it would be in his native country (New Brunswick) as a rebel, and that when the struggle began he would not be found drinking Congress water at St. Albans, or measuring tape in the 'Bowery.' He said, further, that all attempts heretofore to revolutionize Ireland had been disgraced by the miserable mendicancy and money-gathering spirit of the leaders.

"The annexation league desire and will receive no public contributions of money from any source outside itself, whatever, having peculiar resources within themselves to supply this important element.

"A number of military gentlemen were present during our interview. Colonel Sinnott and Major McNamara deny that the course of Andrew Johnson was in any way detrimental to the success of the late frontier attack, but ascribe it to the civil and military incompetency of the leaders. Both of these gentlemen are leading New England Fenians, and were prominent spirits in the late campaign against Canada."

A Man Turned to Stone.—In exhuming the bodies interred in the Potter's field of the new graveyard a short time ago, one of the coffins broke, and revealed to the astonished gaze of the gravediggers the remains of a Federal soldier perfectly petrified, and looking as natural as life. What was further remarkable, he had not been buried upwards of nine months. A new coffin was procured, and this remarkable image of nature's workmanship recommitted to its mother earth in the soldiers burying-ground. Several prominent gentlemen of our city visited the spot at the time, and can testify that the body had turned into solid stone, with all the features as natural as life.—The ground where he was buried is low, and damp most of the year.—Mobile Advertiser.

Heavy Robbery in New York.—An adroit and successful robbery was recently committed at the Marine Bank, in this city. The property stolen consisted of one hundred and seven thousand dollars in gold, gold certificates and government bonds, and one hundred and eighty thousand dollars in railway securities. The latter cannot be negotiated by the thieves. The numbers of the bonds and securities are printed in our advertising columns. A reward of ten thousand dollars has been offered for their recovery, or a proportionate reward for any part of the "available securities."—Post.

A Priest Swindled.—Two Mexican priests, who arrived in this city about the first of the present month, were induced by a stranger to back him in a game of Monte, whereby one of them lost $300. Their room was, meanwhile, broken open, and $1 600 belonging to the other priest were stolen. The swindler has been arrested.

Noted Thief Arrested.—One of the most skilful hotel thieves in the United States, named Billy Jackson, was arrested on Saturday night and arraigned the morning on a charge of stealing $26,000 in money and jewellery at one of the Long Beach hotels a few weeks ago.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

London, Sunday 26th.—British politics present nothing of sufficient interest to telegraph.

Liverpool, Sunday 26.—No steamships have arrived from America since the Cuba.

Berlin, Sunday 26.—The King of Prussia has received a deputation from the Chamber of Deputies who presented the address voted by that body. The King made a speech in reply, in which he professed to feel great joy at the favourable attitude of the Legislative body. He said, however, that if another conflict arose with the Deputies on the questions of the budget and the army, or other subjects which are vital to the interests of the State, he would act precisely as he did before. The King added that he thought another conflict was impossible.

London, Aug. 27.—The cholera statistics of London show a decrease in the deaths.

The official provincial correspondent praises the moderation of Napoleon, and credits him with a desire to not disturb friendly relations or interfere in German-Holstein, and asserts that the hopes of a different character emanate from the influence of opposite parties in France. The article adds that Prussia will take steps for the incorporation of the conquered North German States without delay.

The London Times editorially says that Napoleon has disappointed the lovers of mischief, and has proved staunch to his principles. Other London journals express satisfaction with his decision.

The Prussian Government intended to announce to Parliament, on the 15th, the annexation of the conquered States, but was prevented by the influence of illustrious persons at Court.

The mission of Gen. Manteuffel to Hamburg was attended with complete success.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says that the Empress of Mexico is endeavouring to obtain a release from the obligation of paying what is due to France out of the proceeds of the Mexican customs, and should the effort prove ineffectual, she will announce as her ultimatum, for her husband's abdication of the Mexican throne.

The Moniteur contains intelligence from Tiflis that part of Russian-Daghestan has risen in insurrection. Reinforcements of Russian troops had been sent to the various places where risings took place.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 26.—The United States Embassy met with a hearty reception on the route to Moscow, where they were received with distinguished honours, and entertained at a grand banquet. At Novgorod the Embassy also were the recipients of similar attention and honoured with a grand dinner.

The Russian Government has repealed the edict of martial law in the South-western Provinces of the Empire.

Leipsic, Aug. 27.—A large and influential meeting has been held in this city, which declared in favour of a union of the Kingdom of Saxony with Prussia.

Birmingham, Eng. Aug. 27.—The Reform display in this city to-day was grand, and passed off without a riot or disturbance of any kind, which had been to some extent apprehended. Many thousands of people were present. The platform adopted by the immense assemblage is in favour of residential manhood suffrage. John Bright delivered an address this evening in support of the platform.

THE CHOLERA IN ENGLAND.

Cholera of a malignant type has made its appearance in the neighbourhood of Guildford, and seven persons are said to have died of it. The first attacked was a man named Sutcliff, residing at Bell Fields, Stoke, who was seized on Friday, the 20th inst., but happily recovered, although now suffering from low fever. In the course of Thursday and Friday last three children died of cholera at Malthouse, Stoke, where there is little or no drainage, and which is about a mile and a half from Guildford. The case of a travelling hawker is also reported from Ripley, about six miles from Guildford—the man, aged 52, being attacked on the 23rd inst., and dying on the 27th. He was buried the same night.—The guardians of the Guildford Union appear to be fully alive to the urgency of the case. They met on Saturday, under the presidency of the Hon. F. Scott, the chairman, and decided on the adoption of necessary measures consequent upon the recent order in Council.

The governors of Guy's Hospital have laid out a ward especially for cholera patients. There are at present 640 patients within the building.

At the Southwark Police Court on Saturday Mr. Burcham stated that he had received many letters from persons complaining of the numerous disgusting nuisances that existed in the district of the court, and they referred more particularly to the bone-boiling houses in Friar Street. Most of these statements he could endorse from his own observation, and he was astonished that at a time when the cholera was so much dreaded in the metropolis, and the weather so hot, no attempt was made to put down these nuisances.

Four more deaths are reported by the Liverpool workhouse authorities up to Saturday afternoon, and five more cases from the town have been admitted. Up to Saturday the total number of deaths had been 46. The dispensaries at the north end of the town are kept open day and night, relays of surgeons being engaged.

We learn from Llanelly that in the course of Wednesday and Thursday there were seven deaths. Other cases occurred on Thursday and Friday, and on Friday night three patients died in the workhouse, where a ward is reserved for poor persons attacked, and there appeared to be no diminution in the number of cases, though nothing like an official return is issued.

Sebastopol Harbour.—The works for freeing the port of Sabastopol of the vessels which were sunk during the Crimean war continue. All the smaller ships, and the upper portion of the larger ones, have been long raised, and the work now consists in removing the lower part of some ten or twelve lines which have become embedded in the sands. The Twelve Apostles, whose preaching was once loud and sonorous, has been rescued piecemeal from the waves, but will never float again as a vessel of the state, as the Russian Government leaves to contractor Tchatnikow all that he fishes from below, on the condition, that the bay shall be clear in five years, two of which have expired.

San Francisco, Aug. 26.—The British ship Fairlight, Capt. Bush, from Hong Kong, bound to San Francisco, was wrecked near Island Po Chung Han on June 12th. 143 Chinese passengers, and one European, were drowned. The ship broke up six hours after striking, and nothing was saved. The Government had chartered a steamer to send after the wrecked crew.

The Dundas Murder.—For some days past Dr. McMahon, coroner, and the authorities of Dundas have been busily engaged in investigating the murder of the old man James Chambers, which took place on Wednesday afternoon. The deliberations of the coroner's inquest have not yet been brought to a close, and as yet nothing has come out in evidence to criminate any one, further than of a circumstantial nature, which reflects very suspiciously on Kennedy, whose arrest we have already referred to. We are informed that two witnesses are prepared to testify that prior to the attempts which Kennedy made to drown himself previous to his arrest, he was heard to say, "I've murdered one man and I may as well myself," and his wife, with whom he never lived on the best terms, says that before the murder was discovered, she observed the accused coming from the direction of the house where the tragedy occurred, muttering "Poor Jimmy Chambers." From a conversation which our reporter had with Kennedy, on Saturday evening, he would infer that from the appearance of the man he would not commit the bloody deed while in his sober senses. It is stated, however, that he was laboring under the influence of liquor on the afternoon of the murder; also, that when in that condition he has no control over his passion, in fact is a perfect maniac. The canal is being dragged with a view to the finding of any weapons, garments or other things which would throw any light on the commission of the crime. What renders the murder seventold more strange is the fact that no motive whatever can be addressed for its perpetration. It could not have been for money, as it was well known that the deceased was supported by the corporation for years. Neither could it have been through malice, for it would be impossible for human mind to harbor hatred against a poor helpless blind man 80 years of age, who had been pronounced by the doctor as only able to live a few more days.—Spectator.

The Orange Pic-Nic.—The Pic-Nic of the loyal Orangemen on Friday last was most successful. There was a large crowd of well dressed ladies and gentlemen and any quantity of fads and lasses who enjoyed themselves immensely on the green sward and under the shade of the beautiful trees which ornament the lovely spot. All sorts of games were indulged in, sack races, foot ball, foot races, swings, also dancing on the green. One thing struck us as peculiarly gratifying; that so many of our Roman Catholic Citizens should join with their fellow countrymen of the Orange persuasion in the gay festivities of the hour.—Some leading brethren from Port Hope were there, including our friend David Marshall who did not regret his Peterboro blood and thunder speech, but thought it more becoming to labuob with the President of the St. Patrick's society. By the war, we believe Mr. Marshall was misrepresented by the Review, and did not say the naughty things reported of him.—Cobourg sun.

Penny ss. Cent.—The practice of refusing to take pennies at our Post-Office for more than one cent is, we believe, illegal. On reference to Chapter 15, Sec. 9, of the Consolidated Statutes of Canada, it will be found—we quote the words of the Statute that "the copper coins of the United Kingdom shall, while lawfully current therein, pass current and be a legal tender in this Province to the amount of twenty cents or one shilling currency, and no more, in any one payment at the following rates, that is to say: the copper penny for two cents, and the half penny for one cent, and any other subdivisions of the said copper penny for proportionate sums." Now, unless our worthy Postmaster can cite a subsequent statute amending this law, the Present practice at the Post-Office of refusing to receive pennies for more than one cent is clearly illegal and should not be tolerated.—Transcript.

Fire near Port Hope.—On Monday night, the barn belonging to Mr. William Hales, who lives on the Gravel Road, to the north of the town, was consumed by fire. The contents of the barn were also destroyed, together with a hay-stack adjoining. The crops had not yet been gathered in, or Mr. Hales' loss might have been much more serious. As it is, he loses about $600; and we regret to learn, that he had no insurence. The fire is supposed to have been caused by the smoking of a "tramp" who had made the barn his lodging place. —Guide.

Inquest.—An inquest was held by Coroner Maxwell, on Wednesday evening, on the body of a man named Wm. McMullen, a labourer, who suddenly dropped dead that afternoon, near Barrett's Mills. From the evidence adduced, it appears that the unfortunate creature had, for a long time, been leading a very dissipated life, and was under the influence of liquor when his melancholy career was so abruptly ended. A verdict in accordance with these facts was accordingly rendered.—Guide.

Give Out.—The Irish Canadian, the Canadian organ of the Hibernian or Fenian Brotherhood, has stopped publication. Cause, want of readers, brain, money and credit.

Mr. Robert Johnston, lumber merchant, of Ottawa, was drowned at Three Rivers on Friday last.

Mutiny on the "Danube."—The disturbances (or, more correctly, perhaps, the mutiny) on board the American ship Danube, now lying outward bound at Kingsroad, were renewed yesterday. On Sunday the crew went to their work, and there was no fault to be found with them, but yesterday, after dinner, they refused to obey the orders of the mate. The captain called the ringleader—the same man who was so refractory on the former occasion—aft, and the man told the captain plainly that he did not intend work. Some words ensued, and at length the man became so insolent that the captain, with a view to maintain his authority and to enforce obedience, drew his revolver at him. The crew were then called aft, and they not only refused to work, but declined to go to sea at all, remarking that they were not going to be "driven" as they had been. The captain retorted that they had not been used to "smart" ones, and ordered them upon bread and water. He then left the ship and came to Bristol, where he made an application to the sitting magistrate, but the only satisfaction he could get was a suggestion to put his crew ashore, and ship another lot of men. This course the ramrod intends to pursue. As a proof of the deliberate character of the outbreak, it should be stated that, whilst in the captain's presence, the men remarked that it was better for them to do what they intended to do while in port than after they had set sail. —Bristol paper.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 27.—A notorious character, named Aaron Ward, being closely pursued by the police yesterday, entered a barn a short distance from the city and blew out his brains.

Lord Monck, before settling down at Spencer Wood for the remainder of the season, will proceed to the Saguenay on a fishing excursion.

EUROPEAN.

Peace negotiations are progressing, if not ratified by this. France does not intend pressing her demand for extension of frontier. The Italian army is being reduced. Venetia has been ceded to Italy, and to all appearance matters are being quieted for a time—only for a time, we fear. It is rumored that the Pope is about to cede Rome to Napoleon, and thus create new difficulties in Italy.—Prussia annexes the Provinces gained by her victories, and thus takes the rank of a great power in Europe. Austria intends issuing bonds to the amount of 140 millions of florins, to meet the expense of the war. Spain is beginning to fear for Cuba, and there are strong reasons to believe that France will not do much for Maximillian at present. A rebellion has broken out in Russia, and troops have been sent to quell it. Cholera is doing its work of destruction in England, especially in those places where filth, a crowded population, or bad water exists, and some fears are expressed that its ravages may extend. Very little is heard of Fenianism in Ireland just now. At Limerick, however, lately 10,000 rounds of amunition were found in a cell under the city. The great excitement is chiefly in America, and we trust that even there it will soon die out.—The great cable still continues to supply us with the latest news from London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Italy, Madrid and Russia, reaching us in a few hours, thus in fact bringing the two continents nearer than were France and England a few years ago.

Drunkenness in High Places.

Our readers are aware, no doubt, ere this of the grave charges brought against the Minister of Militia, concerning his unfitness to attend to the duties of his office by reason of his drunkenness, not only by times, but almost continually. We have waited to see what excuse government organs would be able to make for this gross violation of the rules of decency and disregard of the responsibilities of his position. No excuse, however, has been offered, no palliating circumstances set forth. They threaten the Globe with exposure, they abuse George Brown, and say it is shameful thus to expose the faults and failings of one with whom he formerly associated as a minister of the crown. There is no denial of the facts, no attempt to conceal. We suppose that they were too public during the last session, and too shameful to even the party to which the Minister of Militia belongs to admit of excuse.

Is it not a disgrace to the Province to have such a man occupying one of the highest offices in our country, an office that requires the time, wisdom and energy of a sober man, especially at the present time? Is it not a disgrace to Ministers to be associated with a man who cannot keep sober even in the House of Assembly? And will not the independent electors of the constituency he represents take shame, and in future return a man who can keep sober at least during the sitting of Parliament?

It is a generally received opinion here that the failure to sack the whole Fenian rabble at Fort Erie, is due to the fact that Colonel Peacock and others were carousing at Chippewa, when they should have been leading the men forward to the aid of the Queen's Own &c. And it is not to be wondered at if the Colonel and his suite did get too tipsy to attend to their business when such an example is set by the Minister of Militia. One thing is certain, that one thousand reports to the contrary will not exonerate Peacock from being the cause of the failure at Limeridge, coupled with the unfitness of the Minister of Militia. Whoever was the cause of past failures, it behoves those in authority to do all in their power to prevent failure here after, so that valuable lives may not be sacrificed at the shrine of the incapacity of any one, though he be the Prime Minister. No time should be lost in getting up memorials from all Upper Canada, to the Governor General, for on him, as commander-in-chief, lies the responsibility of the future, so that such changes may be made in the Militia department as will remove those who are unfit for their position from any cause. We talked and made little of the Americans for returning Andy Johnson, because he disgraced his position and country by drunkenness; but Andy Johnson had the good sense to reform his ways, and become a sober man. This is more than we can expect in our case, as it is well known that the habit is of many years standing, but we trust that the people, next election, will have the good sense to allow such a man to stay at home, where he can hide himself and not reveal his weakness, to use a mild term. We turn away disgusted when we see the sot of the street kreeled over to the sun, but how much more disgusting is it too see the highest officers of our Province groping for the light at noonday—men who desire darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil. One thing is certain, this has been long enough borne with, and we trust the expose of the Globe will either cause a reformation, or arouse the people to elect such men to stay at home, where they can give full vent to their appetites. The Globe deserves great credit for so boldly exposing and denouncing this gross abuse of position, this disregard of character and of responsibility with which are ignored by unfitness for the duties of office.

HIGH-HANDED PROCEEDINGS.

Our government has been acting with a very high hand in Montreal, in interfering with the common course of law and justice, by ordering that a prisoner be given up to a French Detective contrary to the orders of Judge Drummond, who considered the prisoner innocent in the eyes of our law. This is certainly a high handed piece of work, and must tend to lessen respect for law throughout the Province. Certainly this is justice and law with a vengeance, an innocent man given over to his pursuer without enquiry. Can any country boast of such freedom, such injustice? What may we expect next? We imagined that all men were considered innocent in the eyes of the law, until proved guilty, and that no power could step in and frustrate the ends of the highest tribunals in the land; it may be according to the custom of Despots, surely not according to British sense of justice. We may consider the Habeas Corpus Act suspended, and the liberty of the subject in danger so long as such things are tolerated.

THE PRESS ASSOCIATION.

The members of the Press, like other folk, require a little pleasure now and then, and also a little consultation. For these purposes the Association has been formed and these have been the leading objects of previous meetings. Possessing, in common with others, a desire to get away a day or two from dull care, and to see, and form acquaintances with the members of the fourth estate, we proceeded, on Tuesday last, to Port Hope and took the Grand Trunk for Montreal to join with others in the meeting of the Association. Thanks to the enterprise of the present century and the energy of Young Canada, we were enabled to proceed with the swiftness of the wind, at any rate as swiftly as the iron horse could proceed. On our way we fell in with several of our order, who were directing their course to the same place as ourselves.—Their acquaintance, and good nature to all of kindred spirits as themselves aided materially in making the time appear short and the hours pass off pleasantly until our arrival in the commercial centre of Canada, where the yells of cab drivers from every nation under Heaven, we would almost suppose, had the spasmodic effect of fully arousing any one who, half asleep, dared to leave the car unprotected. All of the Press on the train proceeded to the St. Lawrence Hall, where it was understood arrangements had been made for their accommodation, but lo, to the great annoyance of many, all available apartments had been already taken up, and hence a retrograde movement must be made in search of some other camping ground. Our lot was to proceed in company with a brother to the Montreal House, where, with difficulty, we obtained a resting place for the night, and most attentively and obligingly were we cared for.

One trouble seldom proceeds alone, it is said, and so it was in our case, next morning was gloriously wet, neither sun nor star appearing to afford a ray of hope that we might have a pleasant day, or a sight of the city. What a horrible thing it is to be in a distant city of a wet day. One feels and looks miserable, and truly, so does even the city. We had a beautiful view, however, of the St. Lawrence as it hurried its waters to the mighty ocean, while we listened attentively to the enquiries of a lady, concerning the direction of the cardinal points, which she earnestly desired to learn. Not one of her sex present was able to inform her, which much increased her desire to solve the (to her) difficulty; but when she found herself denied the information, bitterly did she reprove those near her because they could not steer her right, without a compass or pole star, in, to many present, a trackless sea.

The Association assembled at about 11 o'clock and proceeded to business. Nearly one hundred members were present and took part in the business. After the meeting was over, some might be seen in pursuit of business, many took a drive round the mountain, or a parade through the city; everyone bent on seeing as much as possible.

To the great gratification of many of those who never had a sight of royalty, even in the person of a Viceroy, it was announced that Baron Monck would reach the city that evening, on his way to Quebec, and accordingly, at the rumoured hour, the wharf was crowded with soldiers and civilians, the first as a guard of honor, the second as a guard of lookers-on. Here the civil authorities of Montreal presented a complimentary address to his Excellency, to which he made an impromptu reply. Only those who stood very near could hear a word of either. His Excellency is certainly a fine looking gentleman—does not dress so gayly as numerous fops do—his countenance neither betokening over much self will nor yet any indication of being capable of being used as the tool of a party. Immediately after the address, the boat left the wharf, conveying at the same time many of the Press gang along with his Excellency to Quebec. Some, however, and not a few, took the cars, about 10 o'clock, and both parties arrived at the ancient capital almost at the same time.

The situation of Quebec is one of the finest possible, along the sides and summit of a high, rocky cape rising to the height of 350 feet above the river. The mighty St. Lawrence rolling past it on one side, and the St. Charles entering the St. Lawrence on the other side. The cape too is one of the grandest in America, and the citadel that crowns its summit is certainly impregnable, and unquestionably is the Gibralter of this continent. The city, especially the lower part thereof, is exceedingly filthy, the stench meeting you in every direction. The streets and many of the houses have been formed without taste, and must be very inconvenient. To an Upper Canadian there can be no more disagreeable place; and, but for its historical association in connexion with British rule in Canada, its fortifications and its position at the entrance to our provinces, this city would sink into insignificance. There can be neither pride nor progress in the citizens. Passing to the Upper Town our ideas of the Quebeckers were not hightened by seeing a dead horse lying in the middle of the street, but after reaching the hotel and partaking of an excellent breakfast, which it required hours to complete, we must confess that our spirits were more cheerful, and our bodies better prepared to proceed to see the sights.

The Citadel, the Plains of Abraham, the Falls of Montmorenci and the Cathedrals were the great places of attraction; the first three places monopolized the attention of almost all.

In our rounds through the citadel we were honored with the presence of a tall, calculating Yankee, who seemed particularly anxious to know all about the strength of the fort—its guns, arsenals, provisions, &c. But our visibility was intensified when our guide was interrogated—"How long would the stores stand provided the whole United States army was sitting around the city besieging it?" To which the brave rifleman answered—"Until relieved by the British army." This stunned Jonathan, and we heard no more questions.

After visiting the falls, the Beauport Asylum, some war vessels and other things new to citizens of the backwoods, the party assembled at the hotel again, for dinner, and to arrange for the journey to the Saguenay. Only about 15 were found disposed to go further, and these remained for that purpose, the others took the evening train homewards bound. The journey home was very pleasant. Editors and printers appeared to be jolly dogs indeed, song and merry chat being the general order on the way. The number, however, was made less at every station, each town and village attracting its own wanderer.

A remarkable feature of the season, in the number of travellers you see—every train is crowded, every cab taken up, the streets thronged later for the case, and when night comes every hotel full. But for the kindness of hotel-keepers many of the members of the Press would have had to look for quarters at very late hours. For quietness and an obliging host, we can recommend Brodie's Hotel, Port Hope, to travellers who desire to remain over night in the City of Bricks.—Our thanks are also due to Mr. Williams, Superintendent of the P. H. L. & B. Railway, for a free ride over the road to the Association and return.

The trip was delightful, the associations pleasant, and many of the acquaintances formed not to be forgotten, and as the Association intends having annual excursions, we trust that they will continue to be pleasant and attractive, and that they will serve to unite the members in harmony and good will. The next excursion is to be to Lake Huron and Saginaw.

Requiring Care.

There is an unfortunate creature, known as Mother Mahony, who goes about the street's while she can walk, but is oftener found lying drunk at some corner, or on the side walk, and certainly, if ever any object required care, she does. She is never sober, lives on whiskey and bread, and lies down wherever night or complete drunkenness overtakes her. But perhaps this is not the worst feature in her case. She is exceedingly foul-mouthed, and when annoyed uses the most polluting language. Her oaths and abusive words draw crowds of children round her, it is to be feared that they will receive no good from hearing her. The authorities, for the sake of the children of the Town, should see to her. It is commonly reported that certain parties have her money and supply her with whiskey for it, or the interest thereof. We do not vouch for this report, but if it is true they should be compelled to keep her off the streets, so that her filthy language and oaths may not pollute the youth of the place. Another reason why she should be seen to, is, she will be found dead, ere long, from drunkenness or exposure. We trust that something will be done for her safe keeping; it is a pitiable sight to see an old woman of upwards of 70 years of age lying drunk at the corners of the streets, or perhaps rolled by some official into a yard, and left there for hogs or something else to prey on. She is an old inhabitant of Douro, perhaps that municipality will do something for her, or aid in doing something. It is hard to throw the whole burden of such creatures on the Town.

Harvest.

The greater part of the wheat harvest, in this county is settled and in the barns, and although there has been considerable wet weather, yet the farmers tell us the wheat has been well saved; none of the fall wheat received any injury; the spring wheat also, at least all that was in any way early ripe, is very free from growing. The other grains, peas, &c., may have suffered a little, but not to anyamount. Barns are fuller this year than they have been for many years, and the farmers are expecting a good yield. We hope their expectations will be realized.

Volunteers.

It was rumored that the Rifle Company was to go to the front in a few days, but the call has been remanded, and, in consequence, the Peterboro Rifles will stay at home a few days longer. The reason that the company was asked to go, was, it is said, because of some disagreement about preferments among the officers of Port Hope and Bowmanville Co's; some of the captains refusing to serve under those who had been preferred. During the trouble the Peterboro Rifles were asked would they go, when they answered 'ready.' The difficulty has been removed, and, hence, the Peterboro Rifle Company will stay at home a while longer.

Correction.

In copying from an exchange, the officers of the new company now organized at Springville, we inadvertently used John Douglass for John Dundass, Esq. Mr. Dundass is Captain of the Company. We understand that the clothing for the company has been received. The Monaghan Council has granted $125 towards erecting a drill-shed, and C. A. Weller, Esq., has given a site for it at Springville.

Book Notices.

Frank Leslie.—This excellent magazine, for September, has been received. It contains the Fashion plates of the season, and a large quantity of popular reading matter.

Godey, for September, has also been received, and is an excellent number. Both may be obtained at Graham & Stratton's.

Cholera.

New Orleans, August 25.—There were fifteen deaths from cholera.

Cincinatti, August 25.—The number of deaths from cholera reported yesterday was twenty-six.

The Mexican government requires five hundred thousand pistoles monthly for its indispensable expenses, and for some time past it has not been in the receipt of more than two-fifths of that sum from the customs. The financial condition of the Mexican government is reduced to the lowest ebb.

It is said that the Hon. J. G. Currie has resigned his position as member for the Niagara Division giving as his reason that having opposed Confederation he could not consent to sit as a member in the Legislative Council of the British American Confederacy and that his retaining his position in the meantime might have the effect of depriving the Division of representative in that body.

Choked Off.

The Editor of the Review has received some little benefit from our advice of last week. The medicine acted immediately; the symptoms are not as severe as formerly. There is some hope of recovery, although it cannot be expected to be speedy. Where the disease takes so deep a seat, and the mind becomes so malignantly affected, it requires time to rally, but the symptoms are favorable.

The Editor admits some typographical and other errors. This is more than we expected, but it is good to see the lunatic returning to his right mind. We hope that time and proper treatment will ensure a perfect cure.

As our friend delights in French phrases we will select a petit morceau from the very latest edition of the Review; one of the other errors:—

"We have received some choice music from Messrs. W. S. Mackie & Son, Rochester, who keeps on hand, &c."

Give the rule, Doctor.

"In Wisconsin the crops are said to be well nigh ruined, and have suffered severely in Minnesota and other States."

An indicative need for an infinitive mood.

"We are sure if representations were made in the proper quarter, that every effort possible would be made to meet the reasonable requests of our citizens, and hope, now that our railway warfare is over, both the Town and the Railway Authorities will be found desirous to advance their mutual interests."

Will the Editor read this above and see what he thinks of its eloquence at distance.

Also the following beautiful clippings:—

"To what baseness is there none will not descend in order to secure place and power."

"From the Americans, it is evident, we have but scant justice to expect, and must be prepared with our own strong arms to provide for our defence."

And from the Americans must be prepared, &c. What a noble idea of the Doctor?

"Thus, should our Province be invaded by lawless and wicked men, we have done our utmost to provide for our defence and every day will find us better prepared to meet them in a proper manner."

We have done our utmost to provide..... and every day will find us better prepared. We would like to know what meaning utmost will assume in the above elegant sentence. As it stands it makes the Dr. say every day will find us doing more than we can do.—How sensible of the Dr.

"From Mexico, we have a proclamation declaring a blockade of two ports on the Rio Grande, in the hands of the rebels."

Here is another beautiful sentence. That is to say: we have a proclamation in the hands of the rebels. Now Dr. is that one of the other errors?

"Since the Pope continues to pay the public debt of the province he has lost, which Victor Emmanuel declined to assume on taking possession of that territory."

So, Dr., Victor Emmanuel declined to assume the provinces when he took possession of them. That, Dr., is the grammatical construction.

But we will follow the blundering of the Dr. no farther, just now. We have often smiled at his presumption to criticise, while every article of his own is full of the most glaring errors, both of syntax and common sense. We were all along willing to make allowance for haste in writing newspaper articles, and declined to say a word although more than once attacked. But the Doctor being brought to his right mind, and satisfied to let us rest in peace, we have no desire to be over annoying to him. The Doctor will now see that he is not so clever as he is presumptious, and that, were it not for this very presumption, he would be very far back in the race for literary distinction.

We have been personal in this matter because the attack was personal, and a gross violation of the general conduct of journalists. In future he will find that his own conduct and writing will require all his time and attention. But should he become insane again, a few Examiner pills will have a soothing effect; they are powerful dissolvents of chronic presumption, or inherent pedantry; they have been tried on Dr. Poole with effect.

A Captain Absquatulated.—The Kingston "British Whig" says:—A Sorrington gentleman, one Mr. Hugh Spring, a captain of Volunteers on recent duty, a man well to do, holding a good county appointment, besides others in his own township, well liked and respected by the community, has absquatulated for parts unknown, a victim to the tender passion. A fair lady, the wife of one of his neighbours, is the partner of his flight, leaving a small family behind her.—What adds to the atrocity of the act is, that he has gone away with $1300, money drawn by him to pay his Company, besides having borrowed from Lieut. Col. Paton $400 in advance of the money's receipt. A most point arises—will the Government be the loser of this money or will the Volunteer's suffer? They served their country and earned their pay, yet the Government paid their Captain the money and the men signed the Pay List. Many of the men have taken out attachments against his property as an absconding debtor.

At Niagara Falls, on Sunday, the horses attached to a carriage, containing a party of three gentlemen, jumped from the roadway down an embankment twelve feet high into the river, just above the bridge leading to Gant Island. It required the utmost exertion of the driver and party, none of whom were injured, to save the team from being swept over the Falls.

Military Movements.—In the place of a Volunteer camp near Prescott, the military authorities have in contemplation the formation of a Flying Column in that vicinity, to consist of a Regiment of the Line, a troop of Cavalry, 4 guns, and three battalions of Volunteers.

William Mullen, while in a state of intoxication on Wednesday last, fell down dead in the street at Port Hope.

The following has been handed us for publication, which we most gladly do, hoping that it will prove a word of warning to Mr. Brown or any other who may dare to violate the law by working on the Sabbath:—

Jimmy Brown, of Park lot No. 4, in the 12th concession of North Monaghan, was caught by a heavy shower on last Sunday afternoon, when drawing in grain from the field, for which we wish to elicit for him the sympathy of the public; but at the same time beg to inform him that not only has he violated the Decalogue, but also "an Act to prevent the profanation of the Lord's Day in Upper Canada," thereby rendering himself liable to a fine of $40, together with the costs and charges attending the proceedings and conviction.

It is very rarely indeed that such scenes are enacted in this Township—we hope in Canada. Once only can we call to recollection, during a period of fourteen years, when a tavern keeper, of Peterborough, feeling the least incident to non-employment, as the town was then under sharp surveillance by license inspectors, accompanied by his attendant came out to make hay.

It was very properly noticed in the public papers at the time, and up to the present we have not heard of its repetition.

Should this warning not suffice, Mr. Brown and any others guilty of like proceedings may expect the full penalty of the law cited above.—Com.

MONAGHAN TOWNSHIP COUNCIL.

Monaghan, August 25, 1866.

The Council met at 1 o'clock.

Present—The Reeve and Messrs. Collins, Dundass and Goodfellow.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The petition of Widow Glyn praying for assistance was left before the Council.

A By-law levying seven mills in the dollar for County and one mill in the dollar for Township purposes received its final reading.

A By-law levying the amount received by the School Trustees also received its final readings.

Prior to the passing of a By-law to open up the road allowance asked for by the petition of Robert Donaldson, Esq., named in minutes of last meeting, Mr. Heathers was allowed permission to address the Council. The purport of his remarks was, that the road allowance now claimed was centered as a portion of the Cemetery ground.

On the motion of Mr. Dundass, seconded by Mr. Goodfellow, the sum of $126 was granted to aid in the erecting of a drill shed, at Springville, for the use of the Volunteer Company now formed there. The sum named to be expended under the superintendance of the mover, seconder and the Reeve.

Mr. Robert Romaine's account, amounting to $5.79, was received and an order given on the Treasurer for the amount.

Council adjourned to the 5th day of October at 2 o'clock.

Since writing the above we have been informed by Councillor Dundass that he waited upon C. A. Weller, Esq., informing him that he knew of no suitable place on which the drill shed could be raised except on a portion of his land at Springville; when he at once and with such kindness as very much enhanced the gift, said that he would give whatever quantity of land that was required for the purpose free of cost.—Ohm.

The Pope and the Emperor Napoleon.

The Temps has the following extraordinary story :—

It our information from Rome is correct, the Pope is on the eve of taking, in anticipation of the term fixed by the Convention of September 15, a determination not unnatural, in originality and which, if realized, will certainly provoke long controversies and complications of more than one kind. After having announced his intention to the Catholic world in a solemn encyclical, His Holiness will write, report says, a letter to the Emperor Napoleon, in which he will offer to hand over to him, under the title of a vicariate the States of the Church.

This transfer would comprehend, be it observed, the provinces which Italy has annexed to herself in virtue of Royal decrees, which the Holy See has never recognized, and which the French Government at first disavowed. The motives invoked by Pius IX. to justify this step are said to be the following :—In presence of the dangers incurred by the temporal power, the Holy Father cannot abandon the domain of St. Peter to the covetousness of the revolution; and the Papacy not being itself able to defend the possessions insured to it by the two founders of the Carlovingin dynasty, can only place them in the hands of the heir of the donor, the successor of Pepin-le-Bref, the Catholic Prince par excellence, his most Christian Majesty the Sovereign of France The donor would thus resume, under a provisional title and while waiting for days less troubled by impiety, the guardianship of the consecrated provinces; and just as the Pope is the spiritual vicar of Christ, the Emperor Napoleon III. would become the temporal vicar of the Pope. Our readers will readily believe that we give this news under all reserve.

The Intercolonial Railway.

(From the Times' City Article, Aug. 15.)

It is understood that an arrangement has been come to between the British Government and the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick Commissioners, with the concurrence of the Canadian Government and Legislature, on the details of the Confederation of British North America, and of the Imperial guarantee of the sum required by the Intercolonial Railway.

The primary guarantee is to be given by the Provincial Legislatures in the following proportions :—Five-twelfths by Canada, three and a half twelfths by New Brunswick, and the same proportion by Nova Scotia. Certain securities are to be hypothecated in return for the supplementary Imperial guarantee, which is calculated to enable the colonies to borrow at about 4 per cent. The nature of the country to be traversed is not such as to render the Intercolonial Railway, which will now be commenced immediately, a very tedious affair. It is calculated to bring Quebec within 18 hours of Halifax.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27th.—A train of eight car loads of petroleum on the Erie Railroad was collided with yesterday near Narrowsburg, Jersey. Several cars were smashed, and the petroleum caught fire, and exploded, burning the whole train.

Three dwelling, a waggon shop, a carpenter shop, a hide house, and 50,000 ft of lumber caught fire from the burning oil, and were entirely destroyed.

A Mr. Williams, while while endeavouring to rescue his two children from one of the burning houses, dropped one, and while attempting to rescue it all three were fatally burned. The two children died, and he is not expected to recover.

Mrs. Williams, the wife of the unfortunate man, jumped from the second story window, and immediately gave birth to a child. She is not expected to live.

The conductor of the train was very badly burned.

Loss of property by fire about $80,000.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—A prize fight occurred at Morris Grove, near Jamaica, Long Island, thday, between Teddy McAuleff and Billy Kelly, for $600. Fifty-five rounds were fought. Lasting one hour and a half. Both parties were severely punished. The affair ended in a fight between the seconds, and the main fight was declared a draw by the referees.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Nelson Little, employed by the Hoboken Ferry Company, was killed in a quarrel with two interant Italian musicians this morning. The Italians were arrested.

DETROIT, Aug. 28.—Taylor, the negro who committed the murder near Lansing last week, was taken from the gaol at Macon, last night, by a mob, and hung on a tree.

FORT MONROE, August 25.—The impression gains ground that Jeff. Davis will be released on a conditional parole on the ground of his continued ill health.

THE "RED, WHITE AND BLUE."—The Atlantic Cable reports the safe arrival of the miniature ship Red, White and Blue on the other side of the ocean, after a passage of thirty seven days. This wonderful passage of the smallest craft that ever crossed the ocean will renew interest in her and her peculiarities. She is built of galvinized sheet iron, with numerous air compartments and indiarubber valves in the bottom, for freeing her of any water that may be shipped She is 2.38-100ths tons burden, and is commanded by John M. Hudson, of the United States Navy, who is accompanied by Captain F. E. Fitch, late of the clipper ship Margaret, and a dog The vessel is furnished with three masts and sixteen sails, in area 65 yards of canvas, her greatest length being 23 feet, by a width of 5½ feet. She is furnished with full equipments, charts compass barometer, and meteorological apparatus, and was stored with 60 days provisions, including 250 gallons of water, 50 cans of desiccated roast beef 30 packages of coffee, 200 pounds of bread, and liquors, preserves, cigars, solids and luxuries in profusion, besides which were 1,700 lbs. of ballast on board The fact that such a pocket edition of a ship has successfully withstood the perils of a voyage which tries the largest and staunchest vessels afloat, will make her a centre of attraction in foreign ports and at the Paris Exposition where she is to be exhibited next year.

THE NEW GUNPOWDER PLOT.—The London Times of August 9 has the following account of the discovery of gunpowder in the House of Parliament—the first news of which was received by the cable, but was discredited by some of the city papers :—" At three o'clock on Monday morning a somewhat startling discovery was made by the police on duty at the Houses of Parliament. A brown paper parcel was found, and what is called a slow match attached to it. On examination the parcel was found to contain five pounds of fine gunpowder, done up in nine smaller parcels. A piece of string was tied several times round the parcel and round the match, and it is supposed that the whole was thrown over the wall with the fuse lighted. The string had been itself used as a fuse, and was burnt to the point at the edge of the parcel. The exact spot at which the powder was thrown is about fifteen paces from the Little Abingdon side of the Victoria Tower. At this spot the wall is nine feet high, and it is supposed that the person who committed this foolish and mischivous trick must have stood upon the steps of a public house at the entrance end of the wall. The powder, even if it had exploded, could not have done any harm to the Houses of parliament beyond breaking a few windows."

General Cialdini was on the bell tower of a monastery in the confines in the neighbourhood of Burgoforte, Bohemia, when most unexpectedly a cannonade was opened against him. Having some suspicion that all was not fair, he ordered a minute search of the convent to be made, and in a cellar was discovered a parish priest, who, it appeared, had a subterraneous telegraphic apparatus with which he kept the enemy informed of all that was going on. Being a spy, he was, without any ceremony whatever, killed on the spot by the soldiers.

THE RIGHT OF SEARCH.—Probably no question is less understood between nations than the right of search, there is no general law laid down, and consequently they have to be governed by precedent which happened long ago; this is not the case with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Ancient history does not have to be traced to find out whom it has relieved from the portuous pains of rheumatism, sudden colds, sore throat, burns, &c. Sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cts per bottle.

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough :—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

May 10, 1866. 32

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

HIDE BOUND HORSES.

A horse is said to be hide-bound when his skin will not slip under the pressure of the head, but sticks as if it was glued, which condition is always dependent on a deranged state of the stomach and digestive organs—by correcting which, and giving to them a healthy tone and condition, the disease or complaint will disappear. Experience has proved that the means best adopted to this end is "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine." It has been used in numerous cases with complete success, generall effecting a cure in a few days. It is the best condition medicine known, and may be given with perfect safety at all times, and does not require that the horse be kept from work.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It clears the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, as corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wister's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

A STORY OF POISONING.

(From the London Daily Telegraph.)

A strange and startling story is that which has recently been disclosed by the suicide of a medical man at Brighton; and although its full details may never be ascertained, enough is known for us to class it amongst the most remarkable crimes calendars of the 19th century. When William Palmer, of Rugley, was on his trial for his life, one of the physicians who came forward to defend him was Alfred Wm. Warder. Dr. Warder was a man of some eminence in his profession, and he was especially remarkable for his researches in toxicology and medical jurisprudence. It might surely have been thought that any one who could so well understand the significance of every link in the chain of evidence drawn around Palmer with such fatal sharpness would have been withheld, if not by any higher cause, yet by prudence and fear, from imitating his crimes. To Warder, however, the case seems not to have been a warning, but simply a study. We obtain from charging him with the offence of which he has not been declared guilty by a recognized tribunal; but there is only too much reason to fear that more deaths than one were compassed by his means, although he never stood in any court of justice, except as a witness whose testimony was heard with interest and respect. With the earlier part of his career we are altogether unacquainted; but of late years he is understood to have been in tolerably easy circumstances, nor is it clear that he had any motive to tempt him to crime. In 1863, however, his wife died, under circumstances that are said to have been suspicious; and in the following year he married a young lady whose acquaintance he appears to have formed whilst residing in Paris. Amongst the friends of his second wife, was a Miss Barnwell, a lady belonging to a respectable family in Penzance.—In 1865, only about eight months after her marriage, the second Mrs. Warder expired; and the widower, who had children by his first wife, lost no time in paying his addresses to Miss Barnwell. For reasons of his own he avoided any direct communication with her family; and even when she had accepted him, he desired that their union should be kept secret, at any rate for a time. To this, however, she refused to consent; and, although her friends were naturally not much pleased with a husband who had treated them so cavalierly, the marriage, it is said, was not unhappy.—From a worldly point of view it was sensible and prudent. Dr Warder was only forty-six; his wife was in her thirty-seventh year. The gentleman had sufficient private means to enable him to relinquish his practice; the lady had a substantial marriage portion; nor was there any obvious disparity of taste or temperament between them. A quiet, sensible match, it presented nothing to challenge suspicion or enquiry. To be sure the second Mrs. Warder has not long been dead; but the widower might naturally be anxious to secure another guardian for his children, and his acquaintance with Miss Barnwell was of no recent date or hasty growth. In all her letters after the wedding, she spoke most warmly of his tenderness and affection; and about a couple of months ago, when her sister visited them in London, she appeared to be perfectly happy. She was not over well, it is true, but her health had always been delicate, she grew better during her sister's stay; and they talked cheerfully together of a contemplated visit to Italy, where Dr. Warder's children were residing. As her health, however, did not long continue to improve, and as the state of Italy itself became more disturbed from week to week, the idea was abandoned; and the couple proceeded to Brighton, where Dr. Warder having been already introduced to his wife's sister Julia, would see her sister Jane and her brother Richard, who himself was a surgeon at Brighton, who took apartments in Bedford Square, where Mrs. Warder became seriously ill. Her health fluctuated strangely till the 1st of July when she died.

Suspicious at once arose; her brother declared that he looked upon Warder as a murderer; and Dr. Taffe, who was called in to certify the reason of her death, refused to do so, on the ground that he could see no evidence of any natural cause for it.—An inquest was held on the Wednesday following the Sunday on which she died, and it was adjourned until Friday, the 13th.—Meanwhile suspicions became stronger; the former career of Dr. Warder was made known, and the probility of his guilt was fully canvassed. He felt that the coils were gathering around him, and that he was fairly at bay. As a cool, calm man, he saw but one way of expiation. It was just possible that he was innocent, and he was driven to desperation by the fearful charge which he foresaw would be brought against him; but there is an overwhelming balance of probability in favor of the theory that he was guilty, and was only anxious to escape the ignominy of public execution. Whatever his motive, he soon made up his mind to die, nor does he seem to have ever faltered in his purpose. Quite calmly and collectedly did he set his affairs in order; he wrote to the sister of his first wife, acquainting her with the disposition of his property; and then, on Monday evening, July 9th, having just returned from London, he went to his landlady in Bedford Square, and asking for her account, he left money as a compensation for the trouble to which she had been put. Stealthily quitting the house a little before midnight, he proceeded, carrying only a black bag with him to the Bedford Hotel, where he engaged a bed. At two o'clock on the following afternoon, as he had not risen, the chambermaid was sent to call him. She tapped at his door which was unlocked, and receiving no answer, she entered the room where she found him lying on his bed, his eyes wide open, and with a glistening appearance that made it difficult to believe he was not still alive; he was cold and dead. He had lifted himself during the night with prussic acid.—The inquest on his own body could have no other result than a verdict of felo de se; and the inquiry into the death of his wife resulted in a verdict, that she "died from the effects of aconite, administered wilfully and of malice aforethought by her late husband." Buried in unconsecrated ground, Warder has carried his awful secret with him to the grave; whether he was a triple murderer, or guilty only of the death of his last wife, we shall never know. He has passed beyond the reach of human justice, and we are left to wonder that with so many terrible warnings before his eyes—with the fate of Palmer, of Pritchard, of Dove, and others still fresh in his memory—he could venture on a crime so foul. It is idle, when motives of the murdered murderer; but in the catalogue of homicides he will be long remembered as one who, thought he never stood in the felon's dock, was driven by the unseen powers that avenge the innocent to commit self-slaughter, and to seek in a phial of poison his only escape from the hangman's hand.

The Portland Argus feelingly observes? 'It is a melancholy fact the assistant editor perished in the recent great fire.—He had long been connected with the Argus and was rather a sharp fellow. His name was Sheers.'

SHERIFF'S SALE OF LANDS.

PIANO-FORTES.

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in TUNE than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong Iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old harp form of 'stringing' by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfeld,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Barili,
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry.	Charles Fradel.

Mr. SIGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 13, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supercede the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr. S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus aproximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument then has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, and to bathe the face and forehead, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume sick-chamber, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a passenger quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by Dumas Barnes & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

"Jem' so?"—"Exactly?"—Sober Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "seedy" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

For persons want any better authority? but as some may, just read the following:

" " " " I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" " " " I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me.

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

" " " " I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. " " " The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, fm. Leeds, Me."

" " " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 154 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred testimonials of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base IMITATORS try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1866.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. SEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harndee's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1866.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

LIFE'S ANSWER.

I know not if the dark, or bright,
Shall be my lot;
If that wherein my hopes delight
Be best or not.

It may be mine to drag, for years,
Toil's heavy chain;
Or, day and night, my meat be tears
On bed of pain.

Dear faces may surround my hearth
With smiles and glee;
Or I may dwell alone, and mirth
Be strange to me.

My bark is wafted to the strand
By breath divine;
And on the helm there rests a hand
Other than mine.

One, who has known in storms to sail,
I have on board;
Above the ravings of the gale
I hear my Lord.

He holds me when the billows smite,
I shall not fall;
If sharp, 'tis short; if long, 'tis light,—
He tempers all.

Safe to the land—safe to the land—
The end is this;
And then, with HIM, go hand in hand
Far into bliss.

'A BRIEF NARRATIVE OF FACTS.'

If any of our readers wish to read an interesting book, we commend to their notice the "Brief Narrative of Facts relative to the New Orphan Houses (for 1,150 Children) on Ashley Down, Bristol, and other objects of the Scriptural Knowledge Institution for Home and Abroad," just published by Mr. George Muller. It is, as all who read it will admit, a very extraordinary book, especially as showing how a single person, whose mind is animated with great ideas and characterised by purity, simplicity, and unselfishness, can influence not only the circle of friends in which he lives, but can make his power for good felt at the extreme ends of the earth. George Muller received the first shilling for the establishment of an orphanage on the 7th December in 1835, and on the 11th April, 1836, he opened the house in which he had hired, No. 6, Wilson Street, for the reception of orphans. Since then he has, as most of our readers are aware, built three large orphan houses on Ashley Down, and is now building a fourth house, which is to be followed by a fifth. There are in the institution at the present time 1,150 orphans, and when the two new houses are finished there will be accommodation in the five houses for 2,000 children. And all this has been done, and is being done, without the public having been asked for a single farthing. Without having personally applied to any one, Mr. Muller has received for the orphans nearly a quarter of a million of money, and this vast sum has been contributed for the most part by persons to whom Mr. Muller must necessarily be an entire stranger. Such a fact may well arrest attention. How is it that so many people in all parts of the world have resolved to help on the work in which Mr. Muller is engaged? How is it that the letter-box in Mr. Muller's private dwelling-house in Paul Street has become the receptacle into which all sorts of people drop large and small sums of money and all manner of articles, anonymously? There can be no suspicion of self-glorification in these cases, for Mr. Muller never discloses the names of those who aid him, and consequently those who give must give from a higher motive than those who subscribe to a good work ostentatiously. In the "Brief Narrative of Facts" there are some strange *things recorded in connection with the anon*ymous donors who supply the means which sustain the institution, as the extracts which we give below will show. The "Narrative" is intensely interesting, whether we regard the articles or the sums of money contributed during the year, the places from which these contributions come, the reasons given by the donors for help. Contributions flow in from all parts of the world, and with the "Narrative" before us, we may question whether there is at any time a foreign mail coming to this country which does not contain some donation for the orphans at Ashley Down. We cannot turn over the pages of the "Narrative" without being struck with the variety of sources from which Mr. Muller derives his supplies. During the year the donations have come from all parts of Great Britain, from the East Indies, from Australia, from Natal, from Demerara, from New Zealand, from the United States, from Gibralter, from Smyrna, in Asia, from the Cape of Good Hope, and many other out-of-the-way places. The donations vary in amount from a few coppers to a thousand pounds, and many people send articles which are to be sold for the benefit of the institution. A donor at Glasgow sends an Albert guard and a quantity of jewellery; "Mary" sends a gold chain, a silver bracelet, and two silver studs; another donor sends photographic albums; "A Servant of the Lord Jesus" sends two artificial teeth set in gold, and "M. R." sends two sets of artificial teeth. Another person contributes several plated articles and a table cover; another a quantity of silver plate; another sends fans, spectacles, a telescope, a brooch, and a card case; another sends a pair of silk stockings. An anonymous donor leaves at Mr. Muller's house two diamond rings, two gold bracelets, and a quantity of other gold jewellery. Nearly a thousand pounds was realized for articles of this kind during the year. A curious part of the "Narrative" is that which gives the reasons or motives which lead the donors to contribute, and the manner in which they seek to aid the institution. A Devonshire contributor sends £11 9s, with a letter stating that he has resolved to give a tenth of his income, and has committed this resolution to writing "lest he may be tempted to give less than resolved upon." An Oxfordshire donor sends £7 10s instead of insuring a crop of 310 acres against hail. A person at Coventry forwards £4 instead of insuring the doser's life. A Wiltshire shoemaker gives a penny "on every pair of boots above two shillings." From Leicestershire there comes £1, as a thankoffering to the Lord "for mercifully preserving our dear little Rhoda from instant death by a threshing machine." A gentleman in London sends £30 as a thank offering for his wife having been brought "out of the perils of childbirth." A "Poor Working Man" at Hereford sends 5s as an acknowledgement of his fat pig having been kept free from disease. A man in Monmouthshire contributes £1 "as a thankoffering for a severe loss of income." A ship owner sends large sums instead of insuring his vessels; another person sends the first fruits of a sewing machine. Several farmers send contributions instead of insuring their cattle from the rinderpest. Some cultivate potatoes and onions for the orphans; and one Scotch gentlemen cultivates ferns, which he sells and sends the produce to Mr. Muller. Others dedicate a brood of chickens, an apple or pear tree, for the benefit of the orphans. A manufacturer gives the vinegar used in the institution, another firm gives the barm for baking, another gives salt, and another the blacking which is used. One donation of 2s was accompanied by the following letter:—"Sir,—On reading of the great work you have undertaken, and the various motives which induced people to send their contributions towards maintaining the poor little orphans under your care, I made a vow that every night one who is dearer to me than life (and who has of late indulged in the intoxicating cup) came home sober, I would put by three-pence. Although the vow has been made some time, and strictly kept, the whole does not amount to more than two shillings. Pray for him." "T. H." sends £1,000 as a tribute to the memory of a departed sister. An errand-boy at Weston-super-Mare sends 3s 3d, and somebody at Clevedon realised £40 by the sale of articles on a Christmas tree, and sends the proceeds to Mr. Muller.

One case is mentioned in which Mr. Muller prayed that a particular donor, a gentleman engaged in a large business in London, might be influenced to give further help, and this donor a few days afterwards sent £100, accompanied by a letter, in which he said, "I believe it is through the Lord's actings on me that I inclose you a cheque," &c. Another remarkable case is mentioned. On the 4th September last Mr. Muller was staying at Ilfracombe, after his illnes, and was accosted on the Capstone by two strangers, one of whom said he wished to give some money for the orphans. The stranger then continued:—"I live in the neighbourhood of M. I am a business man, and what would be called a hard-working business man. Some time since one of your reports fell into my hands, but —I honestly confess it—I could not believe that you did obtain your funds simply in answer to prayer; I questioned the truth of it. However, the thing came up into my mind again and again. While I was thus considering whether God was really with you, and whether you really obtained, simply by faith and in answer to prayer, these large sums of money, I heard of a certain property to be sold, which I thought I should like to buy if it were disposed of reasonably. I looked it over, and had it valued by a competent business man, who told me that it was worth so much. I then said to myself, in a kind of sceptical way, I will now see whether God is with Mr. Muller or not. If I get this property for so much (fixing a low price on it), I will give Mr. Muller one hundred pounds. I then instructed a person to bid for me at the auction, where this property was sold, at a place at a distance; but so great was my curiosity to see whether God really would appear for you in this matter, that by the next train I set off to the place where the auction was, that I might obtain as early as possible the information how the matter would end; and I found, to my great surprize, that I had actually obtained this valuable property at the exact low price which I had fixed. I was astonished. But I began now to reflect more on the principles on which you act, and I wondered that, as a Christian, I or any one else could call in question what you say about answers to prayer; and the more I consider the matter, and the more I read your Report, the more I see how right and proper it is to come to God for all we need and to trust in Him for everything. The conveyance having been made, and all being now settled about the sale, I felt it right to fulfil my promise; so my friend, whom you saw just now with me, and I set out on a tour into Devonshire, and then, on our way home, called, the day before yesterday, Saturday, at your house; but found you were from home. We stopped yesterday, Sunday, in Bristol, and having there learnt your address, we came on here to Ilfracombe to-day, for I wished to know you personally." The stranger afterwards gave Mr. Muller a donation of £100, and Mr. Muller having remarked to him that he had had an application from his neighbourhood for a form of legacy, by a solicitor for a client of his, whose name was not mentioned, learnt that this same stranger was the individual who wished to leave him a legacy of £1,000 for the orphans.

Perhaps the most interesting part of the "Narrative" is that which embraces Mr. Muller's remarks, and discloses his habits of thought and daily life. Here is a passage under January 1;—"The Lord began the New Year with blessings, as His manner is; and, with regard to pecuniary supplies, He was pleased to send in bountifully. Early in the morning, I found in the letter box at my house £40, of which £33 was intended by the kind donor for the support of three orphans for one year, 10s for so me toys for the youngest orphans, £1 10s for the School, Bible, Missionary and Tract Fund, £2 10s for Mr. C., and £2 10s for myself. There was likewise put into the letter-box by a Christian servant of Clifton 10s, and by other three servants of Clifton £1, and £1, and 3s. Immediately afterwards I received 15s and 12s; and a little later £3, put anonymously into the letter-box at my house. In the course of the day came in 78 other donations for the support of the orphans."

Under "April 3" we find the following:—"This day commenced with the receipt of only £26. A large sum to many, but a small sum to us, as our outgoings, on an average, are more than double that sum daily, for the various objects of the institution. However, I thanked the Lord for this and asked Him for more; and my hope was in Him, that he would send us more. Accordingly about 11 o'clock I received £10, and had thus £36. I thanked God for this further donation, and asked for more; about 2 o'clock £14 more came in and I had thus £50 in all. After having thanked the Lord again for this, I received about 3 o'clock £20 more, which increased the sum to £70. I further thanked the Lord, and asked for fresh supplies, when shortly after I received £6, and had thus £76 in all. Yet again I thanked the Lord, and asked for more, when shortly after another £5 was left at my house from H. B., of Clifton, and I had thus £81. I still again thanked the Lord for this £5, and about seven o'clock in the evening I received about £16 more, and had thus altogether about £97. Between seven and eight o'clock, after having still once more thanked the Lord for the last amount, I said to my dear wife, in connection with the Lord's goodness to us during the day, in sending means, that He even now, this evening, could send us yet more than we had had all the day; and about eight o'clok arrived a pen-box, well packed, secured and sealed. When I had opened it, I found that it contained an anonymous donation, from Clifton, of £100 in bank notes, with the words, '£100 for the New Orphan House. Matthew vi., 3.' Thus the day, which began with £26, ended with about £200." There are people, no doubt, who, like the gentleman who followed Mr. Muller to Ilfracombe, doubt the efficacy of prayer, but these passages show how thoroughly Mr. Muller himself relies on his means, and he may well point to those noble houses on Ashley Down as the proof of its efficiency. Mere words will not feed and clothe 1,150 orphans; and Mr. Muller is a poor man, and yet never asks anybody for help. His institutions and his "Brief Narrative of Facts" relating thereto constitute the best practical sermon on Faith that could be preached, and as such it is to be expected that they will attract the attention of all sorts of people, whether they adopt Mr. Muller's views in part, altogether, or not at all. There can be no mistake, however, as to the truly Christian character of the work, or as to its extent. There it is before us, a living reality, and a more noble and philanthropic work it was never the lot of any man to be engaged in.

THE OLD MAN'S STORY.

A THRILLING SKETCH.

I shall never forget the commencement of the temperance reformation. I was a child at the time, of some ten years of age. Our home had every comfort, and my kind parents idolized me, their child. Wine was very often on the table, and both my father and mother gave it to me in the bottom of the morning glass.

On Sunday, at church; a startling announcement was made to our people. I knew nothing of its purport, but there was much whispering among the men. The pastor said that on the next evening would be a meeting, and an address upon the evils of intemperance in the use of alcoholic drinks. He expressed himself ignorant of the object of the meeting, and could not say what course it would be best to pursue in the matter.

The subject of the meeting came up at our table after the service, and I questioned my father about it with all the curious eagerness of a child. The whispers and words which had been dropped in my hearing clothed the whole affair with great mystery to me, and I was all eagerness to learned the strange thing. My father merely said it was some scheme to unite the church and state.

The night came, the groups of people gathered on the tavern steps, and I heard the jest and the laugh, and saw drunken men come reeling out of the bar-room.

I urged my father to let me go, but he at first refused. Finally, thinking it would be an innocent gratification of my curiousity, he put on his hat, and we walked across the green to the church. I well remember how the people appeared as they come in, seeming to wonder what kind of an exhibition was to come off.

In the corner was the tavern-keeper, and around him a number of his friends.—*For an hour the people of the place contin*ued to come in, till there was a fair house-full. All were curiously watching the door, and apparently wondering what would appear next. The pastor stole in and took his seat behind a pillar under the gallery, as if doubtful of the propriety of being in the church at all.

Two men finally came in and went forward to the altar and took their seats. All eyes were fixed upon them and a general stillness prevailed throughout the house.

The men were unlike in appearance, one being short, thick-set in his build, and the other tall and well formed. The younger had the manner and dress of a clergyman, a full, round face, and a quiet, good-natured look as he leisurely looked around over the audience.

But my childish interest was all in the old man. His broad deep chest and unusual height looked giant like as he strode slowly up the side. His hair was white, his brow deep, seamed with furrows, and, around his handsome mouth, lines of calm and touching sadness. His eyes were black and restless, and kindled as the tavern-keeper uttered a low jest aloud. His lips were compressed, and a crimson flush went and came over his pale cheek. One arm was off above the elbow, and there was a wide scar over his right eye.

The younger finally rose and stated the object of the meeting, and asked if there was a clergyman present to open it with prayer. Our pastor kept his seat, and the speaker himself made a short address, at the conclusion calling on any one to make remarks. The pastor arose, under the gallery, and attacked the position of the speaker, using the arguments which I have often heard used since, and concluded by denouncing those engaged in the new movement as meddlesome fanatics who wished to break up the time-honored usages of good society, and injure the business of respectable people. At the conclusion of his remarks, the tavern-keeper and his friends got up a cheer, and the current of feeling was evidently against the strangers and their plan.

While the pastor was speaking, the old man had fixed his dark eyes upon him and leaned forward to catch every word.

As the pastor took his seat, the old man arose, his tall form towering in its symmetry, and his chest swelling as he inhaled his breath through his thin dilated nostrils. To me, at that time, there was something awe-inspiring and grand in the appearance of the old man, as he stood, with his full eye upon the audience, his teeth shut hard, and a silence like that of death throughout the church.

He beat his gaze upon the tavern-keeper, and that peculiar eye lingered and kindled for a moment. The scar grew red upon his forehead, and beneath his heavy brows his eyes glistened and glowed like a serpent's. The tavern-keeper quailed before that searching glance, and I felt a relief when the old man withdrew his gaze. For a moment more he seemed lost in thought, and then in low and tremulous tonee commenced.

There was a depth in that voice, a thrilling sweetness and pathos which riveted every heart in the church before the first period had been rounded. My father's attention had become fixed upon the eye of the speaker with an interest I had never before seen him exhibit. I can but briefly remember the substance of what the old man said, though the scene is as vivid before me as any that I ever witnessed.

'My friends! I am a stranger in your village, and I trust I may call you friends. A new star has risen, and there is a hope in the dark night which hangs like a pall of gloom over our country.'

With a thrilling depth of voice, the speaker continued, 'O! God, thou who lookest with compassion upon the most erring of earth's frail children, I thank thee that a brazen serpent has been lifted up upon which the drunkards can look and be healed—that a beacon has burst out upon the darkness that surrounded him, which shall guide back to honour and heaven the bruised and weary wanderer.'

It is strange what power there is in some voices. The speaker's voice was low and measured, but a tear trembled in every tone, and before I knew why, a tear dropped on my hand. The old man brushed one from his own eye, and continued;

'Men and Christians, you have just heard that I am a vagrant and a fanatic.—I am not. Ah, God, knows my own heart; I came here just to do good. Here me and be just.

'I am an old man standing alone at the end of life's journey. There is a deep sorrow in my heart and tears in my eyes. I have journeyed over a beaconless ocean, and all life's bright hopes have been wrecked. I am without friends, home or kindred on earth, and look with longing to the rest of the night of death. Without friends, kindred or home! I was not once so!'

No one could withstand the touching pathos of the old man. I noticed a tear trembling on the lid of my father's eye, and I no more felt ashamed of my own.

'No, my friends, it was felt so once.—Away over the dark waves which have wrecked my hoper, there is the blessed light of happiness and home. I reach again convulsively for the shrines of the household idols that once were mine! now mine no more!'

The old man seemed looking away through vacancy upon some bright vision, his lips apart and his fingers extended. I involuntarily turned in the direction where it was pointed, dreading to see some shadow invoked by its magic moving.

'I once had a mother. With her old heart, crushed with sorrows, she went down to the grave. I once had a wife—a fair, angel-hearted creature as ever smiled in an earthly home. Her eye was as mild as a summer sky, and her heart as faithful and true as ever guarded and cherished a husband's love. Her blue eye grew dim as the floods of sorrow washed away its brightness, and the living heart I wrung till every fibre was broken. I once had a noble, a brave and beautiful boy; but he was driven out from the ruins of his home, and my old heart yearns to know if he yet lives. I once had a babe, a sweet, tender blossom; but these hands destroyed it, and it lives with one who loveth children.

'Do not be startled, my friends—I am not a murderer in the common acceptation of the term. Yet there is a light in my evening sky. A spirit mother rejoices over the return of her prodigal son. The wife smiles upon him who again turns back to virtue and honor. The Angel child visits me at nightfall, and I feel the hallowing touch of a tiny palm upon my feverish cheek. My brave boy, if he yet lives, would forgive the sorrowing old man for the treatment which drove him into the world, and the blow that maimed him for life. God forgive me for the ruin which I have brought upon me and mine.'

He again wiped a tear from his eye.—My father watched him with a strange intensity, and a countenance pale and excited by some strong emotion.

'I was once a fanatic, and madly followed the malign light which led me to ruin. I was a fanatic when I sacrificed my wife, children, happiness and home to the accursed demon of the bowl. I once adored the gentle being whom I injured so deeply.

'I was a drunkard. From respects bility and affluence, I plunged into degradation and poverty. I left her alone amid the wreck of her home of idols, and rioted at the tavern. She never complained, yet she and the children went hungry for bread.

'One New Year's night, I returned late to the hut where charity had given us a roof. She was yet up, and shivering over the coals. I demanded food, but she burst into tears and told me there was none. I fiercely ordered her to get some. She turned her eyes sadly upon me, the tears falling fast over her pale cheeks.

'At this moment the child in the cradle awoke and sent up a famished wail, starting the despairing mother like a serpent's sting.

'We have no food, James—have had none for two days. I have nothing for the babe. My once kind husband, must we starve?

'That sad, pleading face, and those streaming eyes, and the feeble wail of the child, maddened me, and I—yes, I—struck her a fierce blow in the face, and she fell forward upon the hearth. The furies of hell boiled in my bosom, and with deep intensity I felt that I had committed a wrong. I had never struck Mary before, but now some terrible impulse bore me on, and I did in my drunken state, and clenched both hands in her hair.

'God of mercy, James!' exclaimed my wife as she looked up in my fiendish countenance, 'you will not kill us; you will not harm Willie,' and she sprang to the cradle and grasped him in her embrace. I caught her again by the hair and dragged her to the door, and, as I lifted the latch, the wind burst in with a cloud of snow. With a yell of a fiend, I still dragged her on, and hurled her out in the darkness and the storm. With a wild ha! ha! I closed the door and turned the button, her pleading moans mingling with the blast and the sharp cry of her babe. But my work was not complete. I turned to the little bed where lay my elder son, and I snatched him from his slumbers, and, against his half-awakened struggles, opened the door and threw him out. In an agony of fear he called me by a name I was no longer able to bear, and locked his little fingers in my side-pocket. I could not wrench that frenzied grasp away, and with the coolness of a devil, as I was, shut the door upon the arm, and with my knife severed the wrist!'

The speaker ceased a moment and buried his face in his hands, as if to shut out some fearful dream, and his deep chest heaved like a storm-swept sea. My father had arisen from his seat, and was leaning forward, his countenance bloodless, and the large drops standing out on his brow.—Chills crept back to my young heart, and I wished I was at home. The old man looked up, and I have never since seen such mental agony depicted on a human face as there was on his.

'It was morning when I awoke, and the storm had ceased, but the cold was intense. I first secured a drink of water, and then I looked in the accustomed place for Mary. As I missed her, for the first time a shadowy sense of some horrible nightmare began to draw upon my wandering mind. I thought I had dreamed a fearful dream, but involuntarily opened the outside door with a shuddering dread. As the door opened the snow burst in, followed by a ball of something across the threshold, scattering the cold snow and striking the floor with a sharp, hard sound. My blood shot like red hot arrows through my veins, and I rubbed my eyes to shut out the sight. It was—it—O God, how terrible!—it was my own injured Mary and her babe frozen to ice! The ever true mother had bowed herself over the child to shield it, and had wrapped all her own clothes around it, leaving her own person stark and bare to the storm. She had placed her own hair over the face of the child, and the sleet had frozen to the white cheek. The frost was white in his its half-open eye and upon its tiny finger. I know not what became of my brave boy.

Again the old man bowed his head and wept, and all that were in the house wept with him. My father sobbed like a child. In tones of low and heart-broken pathos, the old man concluded:

'I was arrested, and for long months I raved in delirium. I awoke and was sentenced to prison for ten years; but no tortures could have been endured equal to those within my bosom. Oh, God, no! I am not a fanatic. I wish to injure no one. But while I live, let me strive to warn others not to enter the path which has been so dark and fearful a one to me. I would see my angel wife and children beyond the vale of tears.'

The old man sat down, but a spell as deep and strange as that wrought by some wizard's breath rested upon the audience. Hearts could have been heard in their beating, and tears to fall. The old man then asked the people to sign the pledge. My father leaped from his seat and snatched it eagerly. I had followed him, and as he hesitated a moment with the pen in the ink, a tear fell upon the old man's paper.

'Sign it—sign it, young man. Angels would sign it. I would write my name there ten thousand times if it would bring back my loved and lost one.'

My father wrote 'Mortimer Hudson.'

The old man looked, wiped his tearful eyes, and looked again, his countenance alternately flushed with red and a deathlike paleness.

'It is—no it cannon be, yet how strange,' muttered the old man. 'Pardon me, sir,' but that in the name of my own brave boy.'

My father trembled, and held up his left arm from which the hand had been severed.

They looked for a moment in each other's eyes, both reeled and gasped—

'My own injured boy!'

'My father!'

They fell upon each other's necks till it seemed that their souls would grow and mingle into one. There was a weeping in that church, and I turned bewildered upon the streaming faces around me.

'Let me thank God for this great blessing, which was gladdened my guilt burdened soul,' exclaimed the old man, and kneeling down, poured out in one of the most melting prayers I ever heard. The spell was then broken, and all eagerly signed the pledge, slowly going to their home, as loth to leave the spot.

That old man is dead, but the lesson he taught his grandchild on the knee, as his evening sun went down without a cloud, will never be forgotten His fanaticism has lost none of its fire in my manhood's heart.

THE CABLE—MORALLY.

In a late issue we had something to say about the Cable "Commercially;" now we must have a word or two about it "Morally." What! Can the Cable be in any way considered as a moral agent? We think it can. Not that the mere fact that we can send a message from England to Canada in the twinkling of an eye will make men better, or elevate the moral tone of society. The Cable will not be a moral agent in that sense,—it will not cause a love of morality, but it will restrain men from violating its precepts. To come right to the point, it increases the machinery by means of which criminals can be brought to justice. To commit a crime in France or England and escape to America, or vice versa, will hereafter be almost an impossibility. Not a few crimes have in days gone by been committed on both sides of the Atlantic, which would never have taken place but for the belief of the perpetrator or perpetrators that, by taking the fast-sailing steamers, they would be in a foreign land b fore tidings of their guilt could overtake them. Many a time have the Cunard vessels carried over criminals to America safely, no word of their crime being h ard until all traces of them had disappeared. This was a favourite mode of escape for Bank defaulters, Railway embezzlers, and wealthy criminals generally.—The lower orders of the genus rascal were generally forced to take passage in cheaper, and consequently slower vessels, and of late years were frequently arrested before they could land from the vessels in which they had sailed. This was the case with Muller, who committed the famous railway murder in London. But the completion of the Atlantic Cable cuts off all chance of any of them escaping. One hour after they set sail, the particulars of their crime and a description of their appearance may be in America, and when the vessel arrives, the criminal is sure to be nabbed. In fact, for that matter, officers of justice might board the vessel at Halifax or Father Point, and sail with their victim into port. In decreasing the chance of escape—in making crime more certain of punishment, there can be no doubt that the Cable will prevent many a crime from being committed, and prove, to no inconsiderable extent, a terror to evil doers.—Exchange.

Audacious Robbery in Brooklyn.

A most audacious robbery was committed at the jewelry store of Mr. W. M. K. Tice, corner of Fulton and Johnson streets, last evening, which, for boldness, surpasses anything of the kind that has ever taken place in this city. It appears that about eight o'clock, shortly before the time of closing, a light waggon drawn by a sprightly horse, drove up Fulleton street, and, turning the corner of Johnson street, halted immediately in front of one of the large windows, through which all that is doing within can be seen from without. The cases containing the most valuable articles in the store were on the counter infront of the window. The vehicle containing two men—one rather large and stout, the other tall and slim. The latter jumped out and entered the store. Accosting Mr. Tomas Tice, he started that he desired to purchase a diamone ring, and a box containing the most valuable was placed before him.—After scrutinizing the lot, and being convinced, doubtless, that it was the real article, he took a handkerchief from his pocket, and holding it at two corners, with both hands, put it to his face, as if to wipe off the perspiration. Suddenly he clapped the handkerchief over the box, and taking it up, ran out of the store. Before the astonished attendants knew what to do, or which way to turn, the fellow had jumped into the back part of the vehicle, and the heavy man—(his confederate)—having the lines in one hand, and a whip in the other, urged the horse onward. They proceeded down John street at a rapid rate, and crossing into Tillery, drove to park avenue at full speed. Reaching the corner of Vanderbilt avenue, they jumped out and at their meeting a man and a boy, they took their hats from their heads, and threw their own (straw) hats into the street. They then ran toward Flushing avenue, and that was the last seen of them. The police being informed, promptly pursued the thieves, but without success. They found the horse and waggon, however, and took them in charge. A diamond cluster ring was picked up in the body of the waggon. Roundsman Rings, of the Forty-first Police Precinct, found another cluster ring in Johnson street, opposite Mr. Tice's store, and a clerk found still another. The box stolen contained 24 diamond cluster rings, in all valued at $7,000. The operation in the store was so sudden that not one of the clerks can give an intelligible description of the appearance of the thieves, or the style or colour of the clothes in which they were dressed. They are, doubtless, adepts at the business, and had fully matured their plans before putting them into execution.—N. Y. World.

Capture of a Liverpool Murderer in America.

About three or four years ago a most brutal murder was committed in Richmond-row, Liverpool, and notwithstanding all the endeavors of the Liverpool police to apprehend the murderer, he managed to elude their vigilance until within the last few weeks, when he was captured in America. The facts relative to the murder are these:—A tin-plate worker, named Reed, together with his wife and son, resided in Richmond-row a street leading off Scotlandroad, Liverpool. They carried on the manufacture of tin utensils, and apparently earned a comfortable living, though there were frequent bickerings in the family, consequent on Reed's irregularities. One night, about 11 o'clock, in the autumn of 1862, Reed went home, and finding his wife was at a neighbor's house, went for her. In the course of a few minutes she returned, and as far as can at present be known, nothing more was heard of her until some neighbors, a few hours afterwards, found her lying in a dying state, with a deep and fatal wound in her left breast. From what few signs she made before she died, it seemed that her husband was the murderer, and this suspicion was strengthened by the finding of a knife, belonging to him, covered with blood, down a cellar-grating close to the cellar. A few days ago the detective officials at Liverpool received intelligence that Reed had been arrested at New York. No time was lost in sending for him, and on the 1st inst., Detective Marsden, of Liverpool police force, sailed for New York in the Etna, to bring the prisoner to England.

Not long ago the Pope was asked by an eminent English ecclesiastic what he thought of the aspect of affairs. His Holiness replied prophetically. For the Papacy things looked very bad, but they would be worse before the end of the year. With 1867, however, better days would dawn, and the year would see the Papal power fully restored.—Towards the close of it, His Holiness added, he should cry with Simeon "Lord, lettest thou thy servant depart in peace," and rest from all his sorrows and his trials. We shall see.

Details of the Escape of the Fenian Prisoners.

[From the "Ottawa Citizen."]

Cornwall, September 3rd.

The Fenian prisoners, Murphy and five of his companions, broke gaol and made their escape some time before daylight this morning. They raised a plank of the floor in one of the passages, and dug their way out beneath the gaol wall. The process must have been going on at night, no doubt, for some time. This hole as now seen, is a nicely rounded one, about four feet in depth on each side and four feet in length under the wall. They are supposed to have taken advantage of a severe thunderstorm which lasted for a couple of hours after midnight. The beat of one of the sentries was within a few feet of the spot where they broke ground in coming out, but it is thought that the sentry must have been in his box taking shelter from the rain, a circumstance which was doubtless anticipated. This escape is felt here to be a humiliating matter.

The gaol has been condemned for its insecurity by the Inspectors, yet the feeling can't be restrained, that there has been a great laxity of diligence on the part of the gaol officers.

The Fenian prisoners remaining are: C. Kelly and Hartnell; they gave the alarm about five a. m. They say they knew nothing of the gaol breaking and escape of their fellow prisoners until they missed them in awaking.

There will be an early investigation into the subject.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

They made their escape by taking up a board from the floor and breaking up the wall They then dug a hole towards the surface, inclining it outwards. When they got near the surface, they left it so, waiting for a favorable night to make their exit.—Saturday night being dark and very stormy, they opened their hole and made their escape. They got across the river at Hogansburg, where they slept at Boncker's Hotel, breakfasted there Sunday morning, and described the manner in which they had effected their escape. They said they had the hole ready about a month waiting for a suitable night—Saturday suiting them they commenced about 8.30 p. m., this way;—When the sentry in making his beat turned to go to the further end of it, which was at some distance from the hole, one of them would start run through the hall in the public (Registry, &c.,) office building.—About fifteen feet from thence the hall leads into Pit street. The others would listen for the returning sentry, and when he turned to go back another would start, and so they all escaped but three, who kept making some noise, dancing, singing, &c., to allay suspicion. These did not incline to leave.

They say they met several persons on their way to the river, where they broke open a boat house, took the boat and a coat that was lying in it, and reaching Hogansburg about three in the morning.—Murphy changed a hundred dollar bill in that place. Some of them were armed with revolvers and also appeared in the morning with a good outfit, though they left Cornwall poorly clad. Murphy left directions for returning the boat and coat to the owner. They left Hogansburg about noon on Sunday, going towards the railway.—The three who remained behind are Keys, Kelly and Hartnell.

More Artillery for Canada.

The London Times of the 23rd says:—"In addition to the 12 batteries of Royal Artillery announced in the Times of Tuesday as being ordered by the War Department for immediate transportation to Canada, the authorities of the Royal Arsenal at Woolwich have received instructions to prepare for dispatch to the same destination, a large number of 20 pounder, 12-pounder, and 9 pounder guns, together with 40,000 rounds of prepared cartridges, ammunition, shot and shell, to be shipped at the earliest possible date, and for which tonnage has been engaged by the Admiralty."

The Times of the date stated says: "General Peel and Lord Longford, Secretaries of State for the War Department, attended by Lieut.-Col. Milward, Asst.-Director of Ordnance, yesterday made their first official inspection of the departments of Woolwich Arsenal. Having paid a visit of ceremony at the Royal Artillery Barracks, to Major-Gen. E. C. Warde, C. B., commanding the district, they went down to the Arsenal, at 2 o'clock, and entered the office of the Ordnance Select Committee, where they were joined by Col. Boxer and Col. Clark, Superintendents of the Royal Laboratory and the Carriage Departments. They proceeded thence to an inspection of the new machinery room fitted up for the manufacture of the wrought iron gun carriages recently introduced. The departments throughout the arsenal are now engaged in preparing for shipment 12 complete batteries of field guns of the Royal Artillery, and their equipment, for transport to Canada. The General having informed himself of their readiness for shipment by the end of the present month, then examined some of the new gun carriages and slides intended for the 'Zealous' and 'Bellerophon.'"

A morning contemporary says:—

"Some doubt has arisen as to whether these twelve batteries were intended to be horsed and manned before being despatched to Canada. If we understand the matter rightly they will not be, as they are Armstrong guns and equipments for the use of the volunteer Field Batteries throughout the Province who are now armed with smooth bore 6 and 12 pdrs. of the 1812 but new and far more formidable arms now are at last on the way. They are also over and above the three batteries which sailed on Saturday for Quebec, manned and ready for service the moment they land. It will therefore de seen that the reinforcement in artillery is remarkably large, and altogether may be taken at 130 to 150 guns of the best and latest pattern. The Imperial Government is at last working with commendable energy to place the country in a proper state of defence."

DISFRANCHISED.—The Guelph Mercury says that while the Bill for the distribution of seats before the House the lately incorporated village of Orangeville was left out of the list altogether. In the absence, through sickness, of D. Parker, Mr. Stirton called the attention of the Attorney General West to the omission, and urged its being annexed to the Central Riding of the County, or to the new Riding of Cardwell.—But strange to say, the Attorney General being "hichow-do," the Bill was pushed through without any notice being taken of Orangeville, and so far as the next Parliamentary election is concerned it is disfranchished. No redress can now be had till the first session of the new Parliament.

The Attorney General West is a great man in the eyes of some, while in the eyes of all sensible folks he is a great humbug. He is made more of than his conduct deserves. But for the old fogyism of Kingston, which is as musty as the ideas of the Hon. Mr. M'Donald would be left at home to the care of friends.—Recorder.

JOLLY DOG MINSTRELS.

THEIR BILL NOT PAID.

To the Public, the Jolly Dogs, and all whom it may concern.

A Club got up in Town and consisting of

The above items were set down from his own words.

BILL UNPAID

Printing account,.....$24 80

Of this account, MASTER FRED. BURNHAM says HE will pay only $8.00, but he has not done it yet, although his account shows him $16.67 on hand.

Now, Jolly Dogs they must be (?) Young Gentlemen (?) who will not pay their accounts. Young Gentlemen (?) who refuse, with $16.67 on hand, (apparently by their own admission, taking their own figures,) to pay their printing account, unless they get an acquittal by paying $8.00 instead of $24.80.

Gentlemen(?) Honest young Gentlemen(?) Honorable young Gentlemen(?) Clever young Gentlemen(?) who will not pay their printing bill

TO THE PUBLIC.

Don't trust those Jolly Dogs; those fine young Gentlemen of Jolly Dogs, although the "gender" might be changed to advantage without diminishing their worth or being a stain on their honor, for of this they possess but little as far as this account is concerned, and yet they are the FINE young Gentlemen of Jolly Dogs. Remember their names:—

☞A. T. HEATHFIELD,

Since writing the above, MASTER FRED. BURNHAM has paid $8.00 on the printing account.

A MAN HIS OWN GRANDFATHER.—A European friend of mine related the following story: I married a widow, who had a grown-up daughter. My father visited our house very often, fell in love with my step-daughter, and married her. So my father became my son-in-law, and my step-daughter my mother, because she was my father's wife. Some time afterwards my wife got a son—he was my father's brother-in-law, and my uncle, for he was the brother of my step-mother. My father's wife, i. e. my step-daughter, had also a son, he was of course my brother, and in the meantime my grandchild, for he was the son of my father, and of my daughter. My wife was my grandmother. I was my wife's husband and grandchild at the same time. And as the husband of a person's grandmother is his grandfather, I was my own grandfather.—N. Haven Register.

WHAT WILL THE LADIES DO?—The Pall Mall Gazette, in discussing the woman's rights question, makes the following startling revelation:—But it is growing daily more difficult to become a wife, and if we may believe Dr. Farr, to become a mother also. With regard to the first point it is demonstrably impossible for all our women—nay, for more than two thirds, or even more—to marry, because there are many more women than men, and there are many men who cannot, and many who will not, marry, and, as to the second position, Dr. Farr has announced that there are in England and Wales alone more than one million of childless families, while other authorities affirm that our race is so far less prolific than in former times that in one large town two children to each married couple has come to be the average.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1866.

Mike Murphy and his Fenian Associates Gone.

The intelligence has reached us that Mike Murphy and five of his associates, who were awaiting their trial in Cornwall jail, made their escape on Saturday night last, by excavating under the wall of the jail. He immediately made his way to Yankeedom, whence we hear of the "Head Centre of Canada" on his way to the West.—What a pitiable state of affairs this is. The Cornwall jail has repeatedly been condemned by the Prison Inspectors, as unsafe, and yet in the face of all this, the Government placed 8 of the most blatant Fenian scoundrels that ever disgraced Canada in it instead of sending them to some secure place. There must also have been the most culpable neglect on the part of officials, as well as on the part of the sentinel who, it is said, kept watch. Or to take a different view of it, has the Government desired to be freed from the necessity of employing a hangman to get rid of those rascals, and therefore advised giving them the opportunity of escape? This really appears too like the truth. In Toronto we have a large number of those Fenian murderers who were taken after the Fort Erie raid; the country has been demanding and anxiously awaiting their trial, yet not a word of assurance is given us that they will be brought to trial at all. The blood of our Volunteers is crying to heaven for retribution on their murderers, but not a word about meting it out. Murphy, than whom a greater or more culpable villain never existed, is free. While the whole country is demanding summary vengeance on the traitor, he is allowed to get off. What surety have we that others may not be allowed to escape? Or what is the use of our Volunteers taking prisoners, if they are never to be tried, or to be let off unpunished? Surely the safety of the country, the lives of our citizens, and a wholesome dread among Fenians, demand that those prisoners should be tried and receive the reward of their actions, and that at an early period.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

The President of the United States is making a tour through some of the States. Lately he visited the Falls of Niagara. A Ball was got up in his honor, but he failed to grace it with his presence, because of the fatigue of the day previous. Hence the Ball turned out a flat affair. President Johnson, however, managed to receive several Canadian dignitaries on Sunday morning. He also made a speech of an hour's duration, in which he vindicated the position he had taken, at the same time he berated the Republication party. A remark ble shrewd saying of the President of the United States is reported, viz:—To those who accused him of deserting his party, he would say that party was of little moment when the interest of the country was at stake. Party might go to the devil, or over the Falls. What a remarkable pretty sentence for a President of the great United States. No wonder that the common politican only uses billingsgate.

W. H. Seward also spoke, and spoke blasphemously. Surely wickedness is rampant in high places, and the new world is fast assuming a leading position in the drama. Drunkenness, profanity and blasphemy rule triumphant in the United Sates and Canada. What a picture these countries must present to civilized nations.

The Old Cable.

The old cable has at length been raised. On Sunday morning last, the cable was grappled and successfully raised, a splice made, and on trial it was found in excellent condition. Communications were at once opened with Valentia, and ere long forwarded to America. By Saturday the two lines are expected to be completed, and then we will have double means of communication with Europe. The two lines will have the effect of making the rates less, and in consequence will increase the quantity of work done. We will be then daily receiving the news that lately required months.

Important Arrests and Trial.

On the sixth of January last, Adams's Express, was robbed between New York and Stamford, some of the robbers escaped to Canada at the time, one or two of them were tried and found guilty, one of these turned States evidence, now that the whole have been arrested. They will likely receive comfortable quarters for the remainder of their lives. From the history of those individuals and the escape of some of them to Canada, we can learn what an advantage it is to us to receive the dregs of their country and their runaway burglars, murderers and robbers.

A PLAIN DUTY.

We may be on the eve of troublesome times, the indications are evidently in that direction. In view of such times we, as a community, have a duty to perform to our country, and collaterally, a duty to the local community in which our lot is cast. We wish not to alarm, but it is the height of folly and madness to shut the eyes to the appearance of danger, and neglect to prepare for it. Every candid and intelligent man, who looks at the state of things now existing upon the other side of the lines, must see that there are many things that indicate imminent danger to us. Mark well the utterance of men in high places. We will not stop now to ask what has brought about the condition of things that undoubtedly now exists. What has debauched the body politics, and made it drunken with frenzy, and dead to all the principles of national morality and virtue? We will not ask whether it is the result of Republicanism, although we might naturally come to that conclusion, from the fact that this result has been reached by a gradual descent. Compare the speech of the President of to-day with the Presidents of the past. Compare the speech of the W. H. Seward of to-day with that of W. H. Seward of ten years ago. Mark well his blasphemous utterance but yesterday at Niagara Falls, to wit, "That Heaven and earth might pass away, yet the word of Andrew Johnson would be fulfilled." Now these things pass unrebuked, yea not only unrebuked but applauded by the people; and we, therefore, judge that as are the politicians so are the people at large. The two great parties are each capable of any infamy, involving those within or without, to attain the supremacy of the one over the other. If this be so, does it require a seer to see the danger that we are in. We doubt not, but that we will be willing to perform our duty as Canadians and Britons in the hour of danger, and that every able bodied man will be ready to go to the front and, if need be, lay down his life in order that one spot in North America may be preserved from such a dominion as reigns beyond our border. But at least a portion of our community have a duty to perform at home, and it were well that we set about preparing to do it effectually. Let us suppose that an invasion takes place, that for a time a lodgement is effected and some parti l success obtained—suppositions painfully possible—we go further and think of the time when all our active men are at the front, having left their wives and little ones behind, and then ask ourselves, and let every one of our readers ask himself this question—Is it within the range of probability that we should have any internal, active sympathy with the invader from without. If there be the least danger of this, then those who, from age or other circumstance, may not be called upon to go to the front, should at once see to it, that they organize, so as to be prepared for such an emergency. Let the Mayor take the initiative in this matter by calling a meeting. Such a meeting could get up an organization that would meet the difficulty without any expense to the town. Preparations thus made would give confidence to ourselves and show our volunteers that those who remain at home are ready to do all that they can to protect, if need be, their wives, their little ones and property while they are fighting our battles on the frontier. Verbum Sat.

The Fire.

On Sabbath morning, about 9 o'clock, the Foundry and Machine Shop of Mr. Jas. Hamilton, on George street, was consumed by fire. The cause of the fire seems wrapt in mystery. There had been no casting done for more than a week previous to the fire, and the greatest care was taken from time to time. Even on Sabbath about an hour or two previous to the breaking out of the flames, Mr. Hamilton passed through the building previous to preparations for church, and at that time there was not the least appearance of fire. The fire could not have originated from the Furnace, as a piece of plough beam put in on Saturday night remains there yet unburned. Mr. Hamilton's loss cannot be less than $6,000 and it is to be regretted that he had not a cent of insurance on it. Mr. Hamilton, however, is busy cleaning out and preparing for rebuilding immediately, and he hopes to have all ready in a month or so. In the meantime he is prepared to supply ploughs, plough points, and other articles heretofore supplied at his foundry.

Indian Bazaar.

At Rice Lake Indian Village, there will be a Bazaar of Indian work, on the 19th and 20th inst. A great variety of porcupine quill and bead work, fancy and useful baskets, war clubs, bows arrows, &c., will be offered for sale. Refreshments will also be provided for those who desire them. The object of the bazaar is to raise funds to build a new Church, and those who have a desire to aid so good a work cannot find an easier or more commendable way of doing it, as by attending and purchasing they lend a helping hand, at the same time that they encourage industry and a certain degree of self reliance among the inhabitants of the village. We hope the bazaar will be successful.

Temperance Lecture.

On Friday evening, 7th inst., Mr. McMurray, of the Canadian Temperance Alliance, will deliver a lecture in the Wesleyan Sabbath School Room, commencing at 7.30 p. m. We understand that Mr. McMurray is an eloquent speaker and that an able address may be expected. Let all, who can, attend.

St. John's Church.

The services usually held in St. John's Church, will be held in Victoria Hall, next Sunday; also the Sunday School. The church Bell will ring at usual hours.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Messrs. Graham & Stratton, in another column, announcing a choice selection of Meerchaum Pipes. As they have been appointed sole agents for the sale of Ascher & Co's Pipes, in Peterboro, everything in that line of trade will be warranted genuine.

The Committee of the Protestant Homeleg to thank the following friends for donations during the month of August:—Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Romaine, Mrs. McBurney, Mrs. Patton, Mr. Mercer, Mr. Roche, Mr. W. G. Thompson, Mr. S. White, Mr. Wallis, Mr. Adams, Mr. W. Forster, jr., Capt. Rubidge, Mr. Isaac Robinson, Mr. Erskine.

We learn that next Sabbath evening, in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, the Rev. Mr. Johnson intends to preach a special sermon upon the present position of Canada, in view of the threatened invasion and the duties of those who undertake to defend their country.

A Cricket match will take place on Saturday next between Peterboro s. Norwood, Hastings and Percy, combined. Wickets to be pitched at 10 o'clock, a. m., on Ashburnham ground.

Painful Bereavement.

It becomes our painful duty to announce the decease of Mr. John M. Roger, son of the Rev. J. M. Roger, of this town. Mr. Roger, had just gone to Montreal, to purchase goods with the intent of commencing business in a few days; while at Montreal, he became dangerously ill, so that his Father was telegraphed for in haste, and he proceeded thence immediately. Deceased continued getting worse until Wednesday night, when he expired. Just as we went to press this morning, a telegram was received announcing his death; and that his remains would arrive here on Friday. The greatest sympathy is expressed for the Rev. gentleman, and family, in their melancholy bereavement.

Steamer Ogemah.

We call the attention of the travelling public to the advertisement of the Steamer Ogemah in to-day's issue. She renews her usual trips on the 17th instant, and will continue them regularly, and Captain Wallis will be found as obliging and attentive as ever.

The Friends? (nay the enemies) of the Hon. J. A. McDonald, entertain him to-day, to a grand Drunk in the city of Kingston.—Bacchus has, by act of Parliament, been appointed Tutelary Deity of the city. They will have a drunken time o' it. We wonder that Mayor Bredan didn't proclaim a holiday in honor of the Deity. The Brockville Recorder, says:—

After all, John A. Macdonald appears to be less guilty than many of his friends. At the present moment, when the whole country is crying out against Mr. Macdonald's degrading and enfeebling propensity, some of his constituents, headed by the Mayor of the city, who shows little good sense in the matter, steps forward, pats John A. on the back, and, in reality, exclaims—"Never mind these miserable brawlers; as the song says, a lass is good and a glass is good; life is short, we have only one chance in the world; while we are here let us eat, drink and be merry; Come along John take a horn, and damn your enemies; you may get drunk, you may drown your senses, and go gaping round like an imbecile or an idiot, what matters it; go into the liquor, disgrace yourself before your country and the world, yet we will stand at your back till you get back in the face—till your legs become feeble; till every ray of intelligence dies from your quick eye, and only the mumblings of the fool are heard proceeding from your tongue. Go it John, better go to the devil drunk than please the canting moralists who would deprive you of all sensual pleasure.

Drink, John, the glass pass round,
Woe may be in the bowl,
What though the devil in the end
Will calm the Drunkard's soul.

There's fun in wine, when sparkling fire,
It makes the dull feel gay;
Let Fenians come with fife and drum
We'll drink boys while we may."

And so, in the above spirit, Mr. Breden, the Mayor of Kingston, has sent Mr. Macdonald an invitation to the grand drunk. No friend of Mr. Macdonald would thus throw temptation in the unfortunate gentleman's way at the present moment. It is a disgrace to Kingston.

Sabbath Desecration.

We noticed in last week's Examiner, a case of Sabbath desecration in the township of N. Monaghan, which your correspondent says is a thing of very rare occurrence. In that municipality, two instances only being referred to during a period of fourteen years. Had he lived in the 8th or 10th concession of Douro, during that time, and used his opticals he would have had no difficulty in making up a long list of such offences, but at the same time it was a source of extreme anguish to many.

Occasional instances have at times occurred, but this year caps the climax. James Boulton, Robert Dixon and Rich. Regan, may be reckoned as the most prominent offenders, but we regret exceedingly at having to add the name of Henry Reid to the number of the delinquents. Indeed we consider him much the worst, as his early training, associations and educational opportunities would certainly have led us to expect very differently. For the last four or five Sabbaths, he might have been observed, sallying forth at early morn—not to any of the places of public worship, to engage in the solemn services of that holy day—but to the harvest field; thus utterly violating both the human and divine law, and at the same time alluring illiterate and indigent persons into his employment by giving them double wages.

Surely, such wanton, deliberate and continuous desecration of the sanctity of the day set apart, and recognized by all christendom, for the worship of the Almighty, calls forth in terms not to be misunderstood, that such chronic desecrators of that sacred day, should have meted out to them their just and well merited deserts and punished in the manner alluded to in your correspondents communication, already referred to—namely, a penalty of $40 and costs.

Few persons like to become informers, or even to hold up the frailties of their fellow-men to public gaze, and neither is generally resorted to till other means have proved abortive, such at least has been the case in this instance. Mr. Reid, has frequently been spoken to, and severely censured for such nefarious conduct.—But, how has he acted when chided? Well in place of feeling ashamed and showing contrition, he had recourse to invective, and quoted Scripture to justain his proceedings. No doubt the readers of the Examiner, would like to know the portion he referred to, "Oh, tell it not in not in Gath nor in the streets of Askelon, that he quotes from Math. XII, 1st verse.—"That Jesus went on the Sabbath day through the corn, and his disciples were an hungered and began to pluck the ears of corn and to eat." Evidently hunger was the cause of their doing so, which is not merely implied, but asserted, and on which ground the Savior justifies it by citing the case of David. To what pitiable coverts evil-doers will have resort, and to contortion of holy writ in making the cases at all parallel.

I have no disposition either to moralize, or lengthen this communication, but such gross conduct loudly calls for a public exposure being made, and having now done our duty in this respect, we have to inform the offenders that should a repetition again occur, no further lienency will be extended to them, but a rigorous application of the law enforced.

COM.

The Springville Volunteer Company is no longer a myth, but a reality. After prolonged and irritating disappointments, which would have tried the patience and damped the ardour of any one less patriotic than Capt. Dundass. His services have at length been recognised by the authorities, who have thus added a Company to the service, which in all the great requisites of military life will compare favorably with any we have yet seen, and we doubt not, should occasion require it, they will be found doing their duty.

They had their clothing and arms served out during last week and paraded on Sunday morning in full dress uniform to the evident pleasure of those assembled, and under the command of their respected officers—Messrs Dundass, Cathcart and McCamus—marched to the Presbyterian Church, which was densely filled, when the Rev Mr Blain delivered an earnest and appropriate discourse from Heb. ii. 10, "For it became him for whom are all things and by whom are all things in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings."

The Company will meet for drill on Friday, unless previously ordered otherwise.—Com.

Burleigh, &c. Council.

The Municipal Council of the United Townships of Burleigh, Anstruther, Chandos, Cardiff, Monmouth, Harcourt and Bruton, met on the 28th inst. All the members present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A petition from L. Tallon and others, also from John Finnerty, George Kemp, W. Meyers, and J. Dunlop, asking for aid to open roads on concession lines, were received.

An application was read from the Trustees of School Section No. 3, asking a loan of a sum of money to enable them to pay for building a School House in advance of the taxes to be raised this year.

A communication was read from Chas. Jas. Bloomfield, Esq., Secretary of the Canadian Land and Emigration Company. The Clerk was instructed to write to him.

An application was received from Mr. Dunlop, for the formation of a new School Section north of Chandos.

The Council went into committee to amend By-Law No. 4.

Mr. Castiday in the Chair.

The By-Law was read in committee and reported without amendment.

Moved by Mr. Castiday seconded by Mr. Scott, that the Clerk notify the Pathmasters to cause the Canadian thistles to be cut in their several beats according to the statutes.

Moved by Mr. Sously, seconded by Mr. Castiday that a By-Law, to amend By-Law No. 4, be read a first time.

The attention of the Council having been called to the state of the road on Lot 15, in the 10th concession of Burleigh, it was resolved,—That Mr. Hall, be authorised to take proceedings against the parties causing the damage on that part of the road, and for the abatement of the nuisance, and that the Council will indemnify him for expenses necessarily incurred in the prosecution of the parties.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Castiday, seconded by Mr. Sously, that Mr. Caroll be authorised to receive offers of settlement from parties who have cut timber on the road allowances of this Municipality.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. Stone, that By-Law No. 15, amending By-Law No. 4, be read and finally adopted, Moved by Mr. Castiday, seconded by Mr. Sously, that a By-Law be drawn up to levy and collect the various rates for the general purposes of this Municipality.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stone, seconded by Mr. Sously, that this Council do now adjourn to Tuesday, the 4th of September, in the forenoon.

EDWARD S. HALL, T. C.

Apsley, Aug, 28, 1866.

Homicide in Montreal.

On Friday morning last Mr. J. G. Burrows of Montrose Terrace Montreal, shot one Felix Prior, a servant of Mr. J. H. Evans, while he, Prior, was endeavoring to get into the dwelling of Mr. Burrows. The following is the principal evidence concerning the matter:—

Dr. Reddy who had examined the body, stated that he had found two wounds.

Mary Ann Tooby, servant with Mr. Burrows, was the principal witness. Her evidence went to show that she heard a noise at her window shortly after going to bed a little after 11 o'clock. She went to sleep and was awoke by some one trying to unhook the wire screen which is attached to the window. She got up and went and awoke Miss Burrows, who thereupon roused her brother. Mr. Burrows went down to the bedroom of the girl; he immediately returned and said there was no one there. While the girl was in Miss Burrows room looking out at a window she saw a man cross the fence in the front of the house and approach her bedroom window. Miss Burrows again told her brother who a second time went down stairs. While the girl was standing looking out at the window she saw the flash of a gun and then saw the deceased give two or three steps towards the gate and fall.

The daily Review wisely remarks:—The shooting of Felix Prior, as a suspected burglar, by Mr. J. G. Burrows, was a very unpleasant affair, and has been disposed of by the Coroner's inquest in a very unsatisfactory manner. We are glad to see that the jury were not unanimous in their verdict, as it does not appear to be in accordance with the evidence that has found its way to the public. We sympathize very much with Mr. Burrows in the trying circumstances in which he was placed, and believe that many similarly situated would have been as excited as he evidently was, and would have done as he did. Nevertheless, we think that it was a grave omission to be deplored that he did not give the suspected burglar warning that he intended to shoot if he did not depart. The poor man is dead, and his explanation is forever silenced, but we think it is possible that, as he bore a good character previous to that sad event, that he had no burglarious intent. He may probably have been the bearer of some important message; but, whatever his purpose, he ought to have been afforded time for explanation. The slaying of a man in self defence can only be justified when our life is in danger, and only on such occasions.

HOW MILITIA MATTERS ARE MANAGED.—As an instance of the red tapeism which the Adjutant-General affects, it has been mentioned that a gentleman who has raised a new company of infantry, on writing for a supply of clothing and requisites, was answered by the Adjutant-General that his company could not be accepted until the signatures of each man composing it were sent to Ottawa. In point of fact, the company had been already accepted and its acceptance publicly notified a few weeks previously in the Canada Gazette. As it was in a measure impossible for the officer commanding the company to obtain the signatures immediately, he allowed his answer to go by default, and the mail a few days after brought intimation from a departmental clerk that the necessary supplies would be sent on.—One would suppose that the Adjutant General would take care to make himself acquainted with his own orders that appear in the Gazette, and not expose himself to such ridiculous self contradictions as are involved in the instance we have just related.—Kingston News.

SCRATCHED BY A LION.—A young man by the name of Grover, residing upon the mountain was seized with a dangerous degree of curiosity last night, after the conclusion of the performance at the circus, and attempted to gain a view of the interior of a van containing a family of lions, through an opening at the bottom of the cage. One of the ferocious brutes not relishing the intrusion upon its domestic privacy, visited the inquisitive youth with a rebuke which might in lion's play have been considered a playful cuff. The young man received a severe gash on one side of the face, nearly penetrating through the cheek, and one eye narrowly escaped dislodgement. The victim bled profusely, and set up a piteous wail, in which he was joined by a female companion, and considerable confusion was occasioned by the incident. The injuries sustained by the youth will probably result in nothing more serious than an ugly scar, which will prove a wholesome warning to unsophisticated persons from his neighborhood in the future against prying into the domestic economy of lion cages.—Hamilton Times.

A strange story is given in the London Globe of a Belgian named Bernard, who has invented a bullet-proof cloak, and who let himself be fired at with a cavalry carbine loaded in the usual way, with a conical ball, which struck him a little above the waist toward the left side, and fell down flattened. The firing in this way at a man, unless by collusion, is more improbable even than the bullet-proof cloak.

Melancholy Suicide of a Young Girl.

A young girl named Christina Gordon, committed suicide at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. Crosby, on Tuesday evening last. An inquest was held on the body on Wednesday by Dr. Howitt, at which the following facts were elicited. It appears that she had been in a very low and desponding condition. It became evident that she was laboring under strong religious impressions. She kept constantly saying she was going to die, and that shortly, and it was of no use getting a doctor. In the early part of the afternoon of Tuesday, she appeared to be more cheerful. She asked her sister in the evening to bring her in a tumbler of water and place it on the window where she could reach it. This was accordingly done. Before Mr. and Mrs. Crosby retired for the night, deceased asked her sister for a drink of water. She drank the greater portion of it, the rest she put down beside her bed. She told Mrs. Crosby to put out the light as she (Mrs. Crosby) would require it before morning. Her sister asked her what she meant, to which she replied, 'You will find out.' Her sister left her for a few moments, and upon returning found that deceased was in a convulsion, her body being quite rigid. She immediately called her husband to come down, as she was afraid her sister was dying. Mr. Crosby upon seeing her condition, hastened for a neighbor. After their return she took another fit. Her appearance presented all the symptoms of poisoning from strychina. They insisted upon sending for a doctor, to which she plead that it was no use, as she would be dead in a few minutes. A third convulsion came on immediately, in which she died after a brief struggle, in a state

Who Owns the Atlantic Cable.

Some little discussion having arisen as to who are the actual owners of the Atlantic Telegraph, we give below a correct list of the proprietors:—

Thus £218,500 out of £230,000 was subscribed by Englishmen, Cyrus W. Field being the only American who subscribed a large amount. That this gentleman has persevered nobly and contributed largely to the success of the enterprise cannot be denied but Messrs Gooch, Glass and Elliot and others are each entitled to equal credit.

The Results of the Last War.

Some time will probably elapse ere an authoritive statement of the recent territorial changes in Europe will be laid before the public, but, in the meantime, the following programme of acquisitions may be taken for granted:—No material deviations seem to have been made to the preliminaries of peace agreed upon at Nikolsburg, and, according to these, Prussia was to have been "indemnified" for her expenses in the war by a money payment of 20,000,000 thalers from Austria, and large slices of territory from Austria's allies, who, as usual in such cases, are the only parties who appear to have materially suffered. Before the war Prussia had an area of 108,771 square miles, and a population of 19,304,843 souls. At its close she absorbs the Kingdom of Hanover, the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein, the Grand Duchy of Mecklenburg, the Electorate of Hesse-Cassel, the Landgravate of Hesse-Homburg, the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg, the Duchies of Nassau, Brunswick, and Saxe and several minor Principalities, amounting to an area of 12,000 square miles, making a total gain of 42,581 square miles, and an additional population of 7,171,680 souls, which, added to her previous extent, gives Prussia an aggregate of 151,354 square miles, and a population of 26,500,008 souls. Prussia, therefore, now ranks as the fifth power in extent and population in Europe, coming immediately after, in this respect, the Kingdom of Great Britain. No power in modern times ever acquired such an enormous extent of country in such a brief period and at so little cost. Napoleon the First, it is true, extended his conquests in a comparatively s ort time, but there the comparison ceases. The gains of the Italians on the other hand may be summed up as follows:—She takes the large and fertile Province of Venetia, and the portion of the Tyrol known as the Province of the Trentino.—These provinces contain an area of about 20,676 svuare miles, and a population of 2?,401,627 souls. To resume, Prussia gains an additional amount of territory almost equal in extent to about the half of Upper Canada, and Italy a slice equivalent to nearly the whole of the Eastern Townships.—Trade Review.

THE POPE'S POSITION.—The Minerve says:—France has officially notified the Roman government of the cession of Venetia to Italy, and counselled a policy of reconciliation and moderation, there being now no hope of a restoration of the former order of things. The Pope is advised to combine conciliation of national aspirations with the independence of the Holy Seat. The Monarche adds:—"There is nothing reassuring in all this, and we believe the temporal power of the Pope was never so much exposed as it is to-day. Peace is signed. Venice belongs to Italy. Victor Emmanuel has an army of 400,000 or 500,000 men. Garibaldi has 100,000 volunteers. There is nothing to show that the inviolability of the pontifical territory is stipulated in the treaty. It Napoleon executes the convention of September, in withdrawing his troops, nothing can hinder the revolutionary avalanche from rolling towards the Vatican."

THIEVING UNDER FALSE COLORS.—Last evening, about 8 o'clock, as a little boy was returning from a grocery store in Cheneville street with some purchases he was accosted by a man in policeman's clothes, who said, "Now, I have got you." "You have been throwing stones." The boy was, of course, taken aback at finding himself, as he supposed, in a policeman's hands. A companion, aged nine, immediately called the boy's uncle; but when he came in sight, the men—of whom there were four—immediately bolted and were pursued till within the immediate neighborhood of the Theatre, and were lost. We have no doubt a sharp look out will be kept for this new dodge.—Gazette.

A DUEL ON A LARGE SCALE.—A letter from Baden contains the following, which illustrates the state of feeling in the lesser German States:—Forty students arrived at the Castle of Durbach, near Offenburg, from Friburg, accompanied by a surgeon. They were armed with rapiers, and retired into the interior of a forest, where they selected a suitable spot for fighting duels on a large scale, 20 to 20. They fought a long time, inflicting wounds on each other in the face and arms. One is said to have had his life endangered. What was the origin of this battle? Politics. Twenty were for Austria and twenty for Prussia.

There is no reason to doubt that Murphy and his gang were thorough Fenians. They were arrested while on their way to join in the attack on Campo Bello. Murphy is a daring fellow, well acquainted with Canada, and able to help the raiders in many ways. Yet a Government journal seems rather to rejoice than grieve over their escape. Why were they arrested if it was desirable to drive them from the Province? They were going away when they were seized at Cornwall. The Spectator is evidently trying to find an excuse for a disgraceful occurrence, and makes a bungle of it.—Globe.

BANK OF ENGLAND RATE OF DISCOUNT.—The Bank of England last week reduced the rate of discount to seven per cent. To English ideas, this is still an abnormally high rate, and calculated to check business. We presume it will be lowered gradually, as complete confidence is restored, governed somewhat by the quantity of bullion that may flow into the bank vaults.

The Toronto Leader reports the sudden death of a barrister of that city, named Geo. James, son of Mr. G. D. James. It appears that the deceased had been subject to epileptic fits for several years, and frequently had them when alone.

The London Engineer reports that Mr. Jos. Saider, the inventor of the system of converting Enfields adopted by the government, is suffering from paralysis of the brain said to have been greatly accelerated by the worry and anxieties caused by his uncertain and harrassing relation with government boards.

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

LEWIS GLOVER.

Peterborough, March 7th, 1865.

Twenty years experience in using Bryan's Pulmonic wafers have proved them to be the most effectual remedies for coughs, and irritations of the throat, caused by cold, or unusual exertion of the vocal organs; public speakers and singers will find them most beneficial.—The entire freedom from all deleterious ingredients render Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers, or Cough and Voice Lozengers, a safe remedy for the most delicate person, and has caused them to be held in high esteem by all who have used them. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25 cts. per box.

LOT'S WIFE FOUND.—Lieutenant Lynch in his voyage to the Dead Sea found a huge pillar of Salt on the shore, and the Arabs informed him that it was Lot's Wife; for our part we are much inclined to doubt it, though we have no hesitation in saying that the best thing to cure colds, sore throat, rheumatism, neuralgia, bowel complaints, &c., is the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," to be had of all Medicine Dealers for 25 cts. per bottle. Try one!

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

ENGLAND TO AMERICA.

The cord is safely tied, my child,
That binds thy shore to mine—
Accept in love the hand that's stretched
In love across the brine.
A giant stride the world has made,
If we can but agree,
To let our kindred hearts respond
By lightning through the sea.

AMERICA TO ENGLAND.

Thy hand we take, thy love return,
The joy that fills thy breast,
Glows in each Anglo-Saxon heart
Throughout the mighty West.
Cursed be the traitor that would strive
To disunite again,
The chain that binds the mother to
Her child across the main.

Varieties.

Caught in her own Trap.

Dora and I had been silent about fifteen minutes,—an unusual occurrence for us,—when she suddenly broke out in one of her gayest, sweetest peals of laughter. The cars were going at the rate of forty miles an hour, but Dora's laugh rang out above all their noise and confusion.

'What is it, Dora?' I said half piqued that she had not at first told me what pleased her and laughed afterwards.

'Nothing, Neil; only I was just thinking of something funny. Do you see that gentleman just in front of us, with the beautiful black whiskers and dreamy brown eyes? Well, he's been watching you for the last half hour or more, looking as if he should love to take a bit of the red roses on your cheeks. Don't blush, but he's in love with you, I'll bet my gold thimble on it. I was just thinking of some of the stories I have read about young ladies mistaking handsome young men for their brothers, &c., and thought what fun it would be if you could only manage to mistake that gentleman for your brother Fred..

I was ready for fun in a moment.

'Tell you what I'll do,' said I. 'You know that I haven't seen Fred since I went to school, three years ago; and of course he's changed a great deal since then. Well if that literary gentleman with brown eyes (he is handsome, isn't he, Dora?) should get out at our station, I'll wait till he gets mixed up with the crowd, see him suddenly as for the first time, rush up to him in a flutter of delight, call him brother Fred, and give him such a kissing as he hasn't had since he saw his sweetheart last.'

'Yes, I would, if I were you, said Dora sarcastically. 'You daren't, you know.'

'Don't I dare, though! Wait and you will see.'

And so she dropped back into the cushion in silence until the train stopped at our station.

Dora gave me a wicked look, and whispered that she knew that my courage would fail me, for the gentleman was really going to get off.

I was not to be triumphed over, thought I; and so, as we stepped out on the platform. I saw the literary gentleman standing amidst the cord, and with a little bound, threw myself in his arms, and kissed him full in the mouth, hysterically saying:—

'Fred, my dear brother, how be you do—are you quite well?'

I caught a glimpse of Dora—she was in danger of going into convulsions. I was ex, acting to hear the stranger say confusedly that there was some mistake; but to my surprise he gave me a hearty embrace, and kissed me two or three times, said that he was well—that I had grown a great deal, and inquired for Dora—who all this time, was exciting the sympathies of the crowd, as they supposed she was insane, judged from her frantic laughter.

'Father and mother are expecting you and Dora, and are so impatient they can scarcely wait to see you. I was afraid you would not know me, but I am really glad that my image had been transured up so carefully.

I was bewildered without measure. It really was Fred, then, and I had not known him. I felt slightly ridiculous, and while introducing Dora to my brother, whispered to her to keep quite in reference to my intended trick. I was to much confused to think of inquiring how he came to be in the cars without seeing me; so we all went to the carriage which was waiting for us, and rapidly drove to our home.

I had never known Fred to be so affectionate. He held my hands in his own all the time, and kissed me at unecessary intervals; but to tell the truth, I had never loved him so well before—never thought him half so handsome.

We reached the gate. Mother kissed me and cried over me all at once: father repeated it; and finally [a frank, hearty voice broke out with:—

'Hallo sis! ain't you going to notice your scapegrace of a brother?'

And to my astonishment a handsome fellow I had not yet seen, gave a genuine hug, and a kiss, that you could have heard across the yard.

'There is some mistake,' I murmured,—'are you my brother Fred? I thought that gentleman was,' pointing to the gentleman I had embraced at the depot.

'Why, sis, are you going crazy? Of course I'm your brother, and that fellow there is my college chum, Archie Winter, who went half way up the line to meet you. What are you blushing at, Neil? I didn't have time to go, and I let him take your picture with him, so that he would be sure and know you. He's been playing some of his mad pranks; and passing himself off for me I'll warrant.'

I looked at Archie Winters beseechingly, as they were all going into the house, I whispered to him;—

'For pity's sake do not speak of that misfortune. How could it have happened?'

'I overheard you in the cars, and will promise to keep your secret only on one condition.'

He whispered something to me that made my face flush scarlet; but I was at his mercy, and said I would think of it—and I was Mrs. Winter in less than two months.

'Mrs. Brown, they say your husband follows very crooked ways,' 'Well, Mrs Smith that is not strange, for when he was a boy he got so much in the habit of chasing snakes, that he never could get over it.'

An old bachelor having been laughed at by a bevy of pretty girls, told them that they were small potatoes. 'We may be small potatoes,' replied one of the maidens, 'But we are sweet ones.

Don't carry your handkerchief in your breast pocket. If you do—you take a wiper in your bosom.

The man who confines himself to the drink best for him is well supplied.

A drunken Dachman by the name of Cain staggering through the streets one day, was asked if he was the man that slew his brother? No, said he, I was the one that got slewed.'

PIANO-FORTES.

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMETS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old harp form of stringing' by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over Strung Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson, L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek, S. Thalberg,
Theodore Eisfield, Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt, A. Barili
Francis H. Brown, M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry. Charles Fradel.

Mr. SIGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes. They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excelence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinion, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and briliency throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 12, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supersceed the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr. S. B. Driggs, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument there has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

For persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"• • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried ——'s Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic.'

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. REELY."

Glucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Poetry.

THE TWO AUTUMNS.

BY CHARLES ARNOLD.

The tall tree waves o'er lovely graves,
The golden sun-shine feeds the meadows,
And in the leaves, the willow-trees,
That guard the tomb of Moses,
Were to and fro, with flickering shadows.

And here I sit, while bright birds flit
Among the quivering boughs above me,
And more sorely [illegible]
Beneath the vines and willows weary,—
On that fair maiden's memory drooping.

O'er fields empurpled the poppy shone,
The earliest rose hardly perished,
When she confessed that in her breast
Young Love was throned, a royal guest,—
My image there alone she cherished.

O happy hour, when from her bower,
With clambering grape vines close entangled,
We saw the moon of leaf, June,
Rise calmly o'er the wide lagoon,
And climb the sky with bright stars spangled.

Her little hand, which scarcely spanned
With timid clasp my first three fingers,
Her lip, her cheek, which love might mock;
Her voice—but, ah! mere words are weak
To plant the joys where memory lingers!

The Summer past, and Autumn's blast
Swept bleakly cold across the heather;
The bright leaves browned, neath skies that frowned,
Then whirled in circles to the ground,
And strewed the paths we trod together.

O heavy grief! with Autumn's leaf
They told me that her days were numbered;
She passed away, her mortal clay
In death's pale beauty silent lay,
As calm as if she only slumbered.

I sit among the graves o'erhung
With many a slender threaded willow:
The churchyard mould seems now less cold
Since, deep beneath, those locks of gold
Have found a soft and dreamless pillow.

About the tombs the laurel blooms,
I hear the bees above it humming,
The sapphyre sigh in floating by;
They bring the scent of ripening rye,
And tell another Autumn coming.

Far down upon the horizon
A purple haze is softly falling,
The fading rose of Summer goes,
And distant bells of day's repose,
Unto my inner ear are calling.

Ah, dreamily they say to me
That those, who here are called to sever,
Are elsewhere blessed with peace and rest,
And I, unto this lonely breast
Shall clasp my Elsie forever.

Selections.

THE BOW WINDOW.

AN ENGLISH TALE.

There is something so English, so redolent of home, of flowers in large antique stands, about a bow window, that we are always pleased when we catch a glimpse of one, even if it be when but forming the front of an inn. It gives a picturesque look, too, to a home that is quite refreshing to gaze on, and when journeying in foreign lands, fond recollections of dear England come flooding o'er us, if we happen in some out of the way village, on such a memory of the land whence we came. I have not from whence from my country seen such a thing for some few years; but there is one fresh in my memory, with its green short Venetian blinds, its large chintz curtains, its comfortable view up and down the terrace where we lived, to say nothing of its associations in connection with my childhood. But it is not of this bow window that I would speak, it is of one connected with the fortune of my friend Maria "alter-or and which had considerable influence on her happiness.

Maria Walker was usually allowed to be the beauty of one of the small towns round London in the direction of Greenwich, of which ancient place she was a native. Her father had originally practiced as a physician in that place, but circumstances had caused his removal to another locality, which promised more profitable returns. The house they occupied was an ancient, red brick mansion, in the centre of the town, with a large bow window always celebrated for its geraniums, myrtles, and roses that, with a couple of small orange trees, were the admiration of the neighborhood. Not that Thomas Walker, Esq., had any horticultural tastes—on the contrary, he was very severe on our sex for devoting their minds to such trifles as music, flowers and fancy work; but then blue-eyed Maria Walker differed from him in opinion, and plainly told him so, many, part girl, as even I thought her, though several years my senior. Not that she neglected any more serious duties for those lighter amusements; the poor patients of her father ever found in her a friend. Mr. Walker strongly objected to giving anything away; it was a bad example, he said, and people never valued what they got for nothing; but many was the box of pills, or vial of medicine which Maria smuggled under her father's nose, to the poor people who could not afford to pay; of course he knew nothing about it, good easy man, though it would have puzzled a philosopher to have told how the girl could have prepared them. She was an active member, too, of a charitable coal club, made flannel for the poor, and even distributed tracts upon occasions. When this was done, then she would turn to her pleasures, which were her little world. She was twenty, and I not sixteen at the time of which I speak, but yet we were the best friends in the world. I used to go and sit in the bow window and while she would play the piano for hours together, I had some fancy work on my lap; but my chief amusement was to watch the passers-by. I don't think I am changed by half a dozen more years of experience, for I still like a lively street, and dislike nothing more than a look out upon a square French court in the great city of Paris, where houses are more like prisons than pleasant residences. But to return to my bow window.

In front of the house of the Walkers, had been a few years before an open space, but which now, thanks to the rapid march of improvement, was being changed into a row of very good houses. There were a dozen of them, and they were dignified with the name of Bonnybump Terrace. They were, about the time I speak of, all to let. The last finishing touch had been put to them, the rolling had been painted, the rubbish all removed, and they wanted nothing save furniture and human beings, to make them assume a civilized and respectable appearance. I called one morning on Miss Maria Walker; her father was out; she still was playing the piano till she saw me, so we sat down on the bow window and talked.

'So the houses are letting?' said I, 'who took an interest in the terrace which I had seen grow under my eye.'

'Two are let,' replied she, 'and both to private families, papa is pleased; he looks upon these twelve houses as twelve new patients.'

'But said I, laughing, 'have you not read the advertisement; healthy and airy situations, rising neighborhood, and yet only one medical man.'

'Oh! yes,' smiled Maria, 'but sickness, I am sorry to say, is very apt to run about at some time or other, even in airy situations.'

'But, Maria, you are mistaken, there are three houses let,' said I suddenly, 'the bill is taken down opposite; it has been let since yesterday.'

'Oh, yes, I recollect a very nice young man driving up here yesterday, and looking over the house for an hour; I suppose he has taken it.'

'A nice young man,' said I, 'that is very interesting—I suppose a young couple just married.'

'Very likely, replied Maria Walker, laughing; but whether at the fast of making up my mind to its being an interesting case of matrimony or what else, I know not.'

It was a week before I saw Maria again, and when I did, she caught me by the hand, drew me rapidly to the window, and with a most tragic expression, pointed to the house over the way. I looked. What was my astonishment when, on the door in large letters I read these words: Mr. Edward Radstock, M. D.

'A rival,' cried I, clapping my hands, thoughtless girl that I was; another lord of Montague and Capulet. Maria, could not a Romeo and Juliet be found to terminate it?'

'Don't laugh,' replied Maria, gravely; 'papa is quite ill with vexation; imagine in a small town like this, two doctors! it is all the fault of that advertisement. Some scheming young man has seen it, and finding no hope of practice elsewhere has come here. I suppose that he is as poor as a rat.'

At this instant the sound of horses' footsteps was heard, and then three vans full of furniture appeared in sight. They were coming our way. We looked seriously to see before which house they stopped. I must confess that what Maria said interested me in the young doctor, and I really hoped this was all for him. Maria said nothing but with a frown on her brow, she waited the progress of events. As I expected, the vans stopped before the young doctor's house, and in a few minutes the men began to unload. My friend turned pale as she saw that the vehicles were filled with elegant furniture.

'The wretch has got a young wife, too,' she exclaimed as a piano and harp came to view, and then she added, 'this will never do; they must be put down at once; they are strangers in the neighborhood, we are all well known. Sit down at the desk my dear girl and help me to make out a list of all the persons we can invite to a ball and an evening party. I look upon them as impertinent interlopers, and they must be crushed.'

I laughingly acquiesced, and aided by her, soon wrote out a list of invitations to be given.

'But now,' said Miss Walker, after a few moments' reflection, 'one name more must be added; they must be invited.'

'What name is that?'

'Mr. and Mrs. Radstock,' replied Maria, triumphantly, while I could scarcely speak from astonishment.

The rest of my narrative I collected from the lips of my friend a little more than a year later.

The ball took place to the admiration of all C——. It was a splendid affair; a select band came down from London, in which two foreigners, with dreadfully uncophonia names, played upon two unknown instruments and deafened nearly every sensitive person in the room, and would have driven everybody away had they not been removed into the drawing-room balcony; then there was a noble Italian, reduced to a tenor singer, who astonished the company equally by the number of strange songs that he sang and the number of ices and jellies that he ate; then there were one or two literary men, who wrote anonymously, but might have been celebrated, only they scorned to put their names forward among the common herd already known to the public; then there was a young poet, too, who thought Alfred Tennyson infinitely superior to Shakespeare, and by the air with which he read a poem, seemed to insinuate that he himself was greater than either; and there was a funny gentleman, who could imitate Henry Russel, John Parry, Beckstone, who gave a negro recitation, which might have been Chinese poetry for all the company understood it. In fact it was the greatest affair of the kind which C—— had seen for many a long day. Mr. and Miss Radstock came, and were received with cold politeness by both father and daughter. The young man was good looking, with an intelligent eye, a pleasing address, and some of that portness of manner which usually belongs to those who have just thrown off the medical student to become the doctor. Miss Radstock, his sister, who kept house for him until he found a wife, was a charming girl of about twenty. She smiled at the manner of both Mr. and Miss Walker, but said nothing. Young Radstock's only revenge for the lady of the house's coldness and stateliness of tone was adding her to dance at the first opportunity, which courtesy was returned, for his face was pleasing and his manner so courteous that my friend Maria could not but feel pleased, when she wanted to be irate, distant and haughty.

They danced together several times, and to the astonishment of many friends of the young lady, and of myself in particular, they went down to supper the best friends in the world, laughing and looking like old acquaintances.

Next day, however, she resumed her original coldness when the brother and sister called to pay their respects. She was simply polite, and no more, and after two or three words they retired, Emily Radstock becoming as stiff and formal as her new acquaintance. From that day Maria became very miserable. She was not avaricious, and did not fear her father losing his practice from pecuniary motives, but it was pride that influenced her. Her father has for some years monopolized the parish, as his predecessor had for forty years before him, and now behold a young unfledged physician setting up exactly opposite, and threatening to divide, in time, the business of the town, was dreadful. The physician of the town sounded better, too, than one of the doctors, and altogether it was a most unpleasant affair.

Maria's place was now always at the bow window. She had no amusement but to watch the opposite house, to see if patients came, or if Edward Radstock made any attempt to call about and introduce himself. But for some time she had the satisfaction of remarking that not a soul called at the house, save the butcher, the baker, and other contributors to the interior comfort of man, and Maria began to hope that Edward Radstock would totally fail in his endeavors to introduce himself. She remarked, however, that the young man took it very quietly; he sat by his sister's side as she played the piano, or with a book or a cigar at the open window, or took Emily a drive in his gig; always, when he remarked Maria at the open window, bowing with provoking courtesy, nothing daunted by her coldness of manner, or her pretence of not noticing his politeness.

One day Mr. Walker was out; he had been called to a distance to see a patient, who was very dangerously ill, when Maria sat at the bow window looking up the street. Suddenly she saw a boy running down on their side of the way; she knew him by his bright buttons, light jacket and gold lace. It was the page of the Perkinses, a family with a host of little children, who, from constant colds, indigestions, and fits of illness, caused by two great a liking for the pleasures of the table, which a fond mother had not the heart to restrain, were continually on Mr. Walker's book.

The boy rang violently at the bell, and Maria opened the parlor door and listened.

'Is Mr. Walker at home?' said the boy, scarcely able to speak for want of breath.

'No,' replied the maid who had opened the door.

'He will be at home directly,' said Maria, advancing.

'Oh! but Missus can't wait; there's little Peter been and swallowed a marble, and baby's took with fits.'

And away rushed the boy across the road to the hated rival's house.

Maria retreated into her room and sank down upon the sofa. The enemy had gained an entrance into the camp it was quite clear. In a moment more she arose, just in time to see Mr. Edward Radstock hurrying down the street beside the little page, without waiting to order his gig. This was a severe blow to the doctor's daughter. The Perkinses were a leading family in the town, and one to whom her father was called almost daily. They had a large circle of acquaintances; and if young Radstock became their medical adviser, others would surely follow. In about an hour the young man returned, and joined his sister in the drawing room, as if nothing had happened. This was more provoking than his success. If he had assumed an air of bustle and importance, and had hurried up to inform his sister, with an air of joy and triumph, of what passed, she might have been tempted to pity him; but he did everything in such a quiet and gentlemanly way that she felt considerable alarm for the future.

Maria was not in the habit of spending most of her evenings at home, rather being generally out, and that large house in consequence lonely. The town of C—— was famous for its tea and whist parties; and though Maria was not of an age to play whist, except to please others, she sometimes condescended to do so. One evening she was invited to the house of Mrs. Barton, who announced her intention of receiving company every Thursday. She went and found the circle very pleasant and agreeable, but horror of horrors! there was Mr. Radstock and his sister Emily; and worse than that, when a lady present volunteered to play a quadrille, and the ladies accepted eagerly, up he came of all others to invite her to dance! Mrs. Barton the instant before had asked her to play at whist to oblige three regular players, who could not find a fourth.

'I am afraid,' she said quietly, but in rather distant tones, 'I am engaged'—the young man looked surprised, even hurt, for no gentleman had spoken to her since she had entered the room—'to make a fourth at the whist table but—'

'Oh, go and dance, Miss Walker,' exclaimed Mrs. Barton. 'I did not know dancing was going to begin when I asked you to make up the rubber.'

Maria offered her hand to the young man and walked away to the dance room. Despite herself, that evening she was very much pleased with him. He was very well informed, had travelled, was full of taste and feeling, and conversed with animation and originality; he sought every opportunity of addressing her, and found those opportunities without difficulty. For several Thursdays the same thing occurred. The young man began to find a little practice. He was popular wherever he went; and when he was called in, was quite sure of keeping up the connection. He was asked out to the principal parties in town; and had not Miss Walker been very much liked would have proved a serious rival.

One morning the father and daughter were at breakfast. Maria, who began to like her bow window better than ever, sat near it to sweet the fragrance of the flowers. When the young doctor came out, she always returned his bow, and a young lady opposite destroyed in confidence in her dressmaker, that she had overpaid her bond to him once. However this may be, Maria sat at the bow window pouring out tea to her father in a very abstracted mood. Mr. Walker had been called out at an early hour, and returned late. He was not in the best of humors, having waited for hours beyond his time for tea.

'I shall die in the workhouse,' said he, as he buttered his toast, with an irritability of manner quite alarming. 'This Radstock is getting all the practice. I heard of two new patients yesterday.'

'Oh, papa,' replied Maria, gently, 'I don't think he has got a dozen altogether.'

'A dozen; but that's a dozen lost to me, Miss. It's a proof that people think me old—worn out—useless.'

'Nonsense, papa; C——'s increasing in population every day, and for every one he gets you get two.'

'My dear,' replied Mr. Walker, with considerable animation, 'I think you are beginning to side with my rival.'

A loud knocking came this instant to the door, and the man servant immediately afterwards announced 'Dr. Radstock.'

Mr. Walker had no time to make any remark, ere the young man entered the room, bowing politely to the old gentleman and his daughter, both looked confused and red the father much surprised. He was in elegant morning costume, and looked both handsome and happy—the old doctor thought triumphant.'

'Pardon me,' said he, 'for disturbing you at this this early hour; but your numerous calls take you so much out that one must take you when he can find you. My errand will doubtless surprise you, but I am very frank and open. My object in visiting you is to obtain permission to pay my addresses to your daughter.

'To do what, sir?' thundered the old doctor in a towering passion. 'Are you not satisfied in trying to take from me my practice, but you must ask from me my child? I tell you, sir, nothing on earth would make me consent to your marriage with my daughter.'

'But, sir,' said Edward Radstock, turning to Maria, 'I have your daughter's permission to make this request. I told her my intentions last night, and she authorized me to say that she approved of them.'

'Maria!' exclaimed the father almost choking with rage, 'is this true?'

'My dear papa, I am in no hurry to get married; but if I did, I must say that I should never think of marrying any one but Edward Radstock. I will not get married against your will, but I will never marry any one else; nothing will make me.'

'Ungrateful girl,' muttered Mr. Walker, and the next minute he sank back into his chair in a fit of apoplexy.

'Open the window, raise the blinds,' said the youngman, preparing with promptitude and earnestness to make the necessary remedies. 'Be not alarmed, it is not a dangerous attack.'

Maria quietly obeyed her lover, quite aware of the necessity of self possession and presence of mind in a case like the present. In half an hour Mr. Walker was lying in a large, airy bed-room, and the young man had left at the request of Maria to attend a patient of her father's. It was late at night before Edward was able to take a moment's rest. With his own patients and those of his rival, he was overwhelmed with business. But at eleven o'clock he approached the bedside of the father of Maria, who with her dear Emily, sat by watching.

'He sleeps soundly,' said Maria in a low tone, as Edward entered.

'Yes, and is doing well,' replied Radstock, 'I will answer for his being up and stirring to-morrow if he desires it.'

'But it will be better for him to rest some days,' said Maria.

'But my dear Miss Walker,' continued the young doctor, 'what will his patients do?'

'You can attend to them as you have to-day,' replied Maria.

'My dear Miss Walker, you, who know me, could trust me with your father's patients; you know that when he was able to go about, I would hand them all back to him without hesitation. But you must be aware that for your father to discover me attending to his patients would retard his recovery. If I do as you ask me, I must retire from C—— immediately on his convalescence.'

'No, sir, said Dr. Walker, in a faint voice. 'I shall not be about for a month; after making me take to my bed, the least you might do is to attend to my patients.'

'If you wish it, sir—'

'I insist upon it; and to prevent any opposition, you can say we are going into partnership.'

'But—' said Edward,

'If you want my daughter,' continued Dr. Walker, gruffly, 'you must do as I tell you. If you wish to be my son-in-law, you must be my partner—work like a horse, slave day and night, while I smoke my pipe and drink my grog.'

'My dear sir,' exclaimed the young man, 'you overwhelm me.'

'Dear papa,' said Maria.

'Yes, dear papa!' muttered old Walker. 'Pretty girl you are. Give a party to crush the interloper; faint when he gets his first patient; watch him from your bow window like a cat watches a mouse, and then—marry him.'

'But, my dear papa, is not this the surest way to destroy the opposition?' said happy Maria.

'Yes; because we cannot crush him, we take him as a prisoner,' grumbled old Walker; 'never heard of such a thing. Nice thing it is to have children who take part with your enemies.'

Nobody made any reply; and after little more attempts at fault finding, the old doctor fell asleep.

About six months later, after a journey to Scotland, which made me lose sight of Maria, I drove up the streets of C——, and eager to see the dear girl, never stopped until I was in her arms.

'How you have grown,' said she with a sweet and happy smile.

'Grown, indeed! Do you take me for a child?' cried I, laughing. 'And you, how well and pleased you look! Always at the bow window, too. I saw you as I came up.'

'I am very seldom there now,' she said, with a strange smile.

'Why?'

'Because I live over the way;' she said still smiling.

'Yes my dear girl. Alas for the instability of human things, Maria Walker is now Mrs. Radstock.'

I could not help it. I laughed heartily. I was very glad. I had been interested in the young man, and the denouement was delightful.

The firm of Walker & Radstock prospered remarkably without rivalry, despite a great increase in the neighborhood, but the experience of the old man, and the perseverance of the young man, frightened away all opposition. They proved satisfactorily that in union is strength. Young Radstock was a very good husband. He told me privately that he had fallen in love with Maria the very day he saw her; and every time I hear from them I am told of a fresh accession to the number of faces that stare across for grandpapa, who generally, when about to pay them a visit, shows himself first at the bow window.

A DESPERATE WOMAN.

The fury of a Betrayed Woman — Thirty-two Young Men Ruined.

(From the New York Commercial Advertiser.)

Mr. Gould, one of the Vice-Presidents of the Prison Association, relates the story of a fallen woman whom he encountered in one of the penitentiary hospitals, which casts a terrible light upon the tendency of licentiousness to produce crime, and we reproduce it in the hope that it may meet the eye of some of the young men who are so blatant in their braggadocio about victories over the virtuous life of the weaker sex.—The woman referred to had been of exquisite beauty and elegant culture. Her father failed in business, and gave up everything to his creditors. She was reduced to the necessity of learning the trade of a dressmaker to earn her daily bread. She became a proficient in the business, and her taste and skill commanded liberal wages, which enabled her to provide an ample wardrobe for herself. She had been intensely devoted to the glitter and gayety of fashionable life—and hope, which "springs eternal in the human breast," whispered that a fortunate marriage might yet restore her to the charmed circles, whose delights she had once tasted, and which she longed to re-enter. She used every effort by the charms of person, dress, voice and manners, to attract the notice and win the love of eligible young men. At length she thought she had succeeded in her object; but the young man whose affections she dreamed that she had won, proved to be a cold-hearted villian, who was in pursuit only of amusement and gratification for the passing hour. One evening he invited her to ride. Driving into the country, he alighted at a house of refreshment in the neighborhood of the city. He offered her a glass of wine, which she drank. The liquor had been drugged. A profound stupor ensued, and she awoke the following morning to find herself ruined. With returning consciousness, the whole magnitude of the injury burst upon her. She instantly resolved upon revenge, and the plan for its accomplishment flashed upon her mind with the suddenness and rapidity of lightening. She betrayed no emotion; she uttered no reproaches. She treated what had happened as a harmless jest, and blandly invited a continuance of the intimacy. The young man exulted in the ease and completeness of his victory; from that moment she became the evil genius of his life. Professing the tenderest and most unselfish affection she drew money from him continually, with which she hired sharpers to furnish him with provocatives to drinking, gambling and all the forms of vice and debauchery. At every rally of his better nature, by a skilful alternation of persuasion, banter and menace, she choked the rising impulse of virtue, chained him to the car of dissipation, and confirmed him in his career of vice.—Full well did she know whither all this would lead him; nor was she disappointed in her malignant expectation. Drunkenness clouded his understanding; debauchery ruined his health, and gambling reduced him to poverty. Not until this point, the goal of all her prayers and efforts had been reached, when poverty and disease had done their work, and he was unable to procure a wretched bed or a scanty meal, except through her charity, did she wreak upon him the full measure of her vengeance.—Then it was her daily delight to visit him, to load him with reproaches, and to reveal to him in bitter exultation, the whole scheme so cunningly devised and so steadily pursued, by which she had wrought his ruin. And when the closing scene drew near, she sat by his bedside and mingled her execrations with the shrieks exorted by his dying agonies. Nor was her vengeance even yet satisfied. Her warfare was against the whole sex, whom she regarded as accursed; and her insatiate revenge cried out for still other victims. Whenever she could fasten her fangs on a young man of genteel family—one of the sort who boasted of easy made victories over female chastity, and whose unclouded prospects foretokened a brilliant career—she never relaxed her hold. She studied, with a keenness sharpened by experience, every point in his character, his tastes, his passions, his hopes, his fears—whatever attracted and whatever repelled him; and then, with an almost unerring sagacity, adopting the means to the end, she seldom failed in her demoniac purpose. She claimed, in this manner, to have hunted down thirty-two young gentlemen, involving them in disgrace, crime and ruin. Some of them had ended their days in prison, and others, hopelessly fallen, were on the road to the drunkard's ead the felon's grave. When asked whether all her sisters in infamy felt the same hatred to mankind, she replied that she thought the feeling to be general, if not universal, among them, adding that when a woman had once fallen, she desired to revenge herself, not only on her seducer, but on all his sex; that no game was followed with greater relish than that of involving all who came within their toils in crime and its consequent punishment; that most of them could number at least two or three victims whom they had ruined, and that many of these victims went to the length of the awful consolation of crime.

The Fenian "Congress" at Troy.

A lively time is anticipated when the recent raid of Gen. O'Neil comes up for discussion. Everyone is blaming everyone else for its failure. O'Neil will present a report of the whole affair, and 'will, no doubt, place the blame on the shoulders of McMahon, who failed to keep their promises of sending him reinforcements and ammunition after he had entered the Province. He has not the smallness to attribute his want of success to the right quarter, namely, the vigorous resistance of the people of Canada.

The grand object of the meeting, however, is to decide upon the next move against Canada. Gen. Sweeney, it is said, has prepared an elaborate report of his plan of operations, which will be submitted to the meeting. What the details of this plan are it is of course, impossible as yet to say, as even the Fenians themselves are in ignorance of them. They will creep out, no doubt, before long, as most of the Fenian secrets do. Whatever this plan may be it must be prepared for, and on the most extensive scale too. Sweeny is determined that it will be no mere fiasco as the former was, provided his presence and generalship can make it successful. Everything is being staked upon the result. With it the Fenian movement must stand or fall. They have had so many delays, failures and disturbances among themselves, that the rank and file are growing disheartened and giving the whole thing up. Considerable dissatisfaction exists, and loud complaints are heard from all parts of the country, at the action of the leaders in so delaying the grand march upon the British Provinces.—In order to satisfy his grumbling followers and to satisfy himself also, Sweeny has announced that the attempt to capture Canada will be made as soon as possible after the plan of campaign is agreed upon by the Congress. He also says that if the next attempt does not succeed, he will abandon it forever. For that reason he asks the brotherhood to give him all the aid they can in the way of men, money and munitions of war. No mere raid will do. It must be as powerful and extensive a move as they can make, thereby trying to the utmost the strength of the brotherhood as well as of the Canadians. If that move, he says, be successful, all will be well; if not, he will resign his position and have nothing more to do with Fenianism.

It will be well for the Canadian authorities to remember this fact. The next attempt to wrest the Province from them is to be the last, whether it succeed or fail. Let them prepare for it at once, and they cannot be too well prepared. We have been accustomed to laugh at the threats of those infatuated men, but when next they go to Canada there will be no room for laughter. They must be beaten back at the first onset; they must not gain the smallest foothold in the country, for so sure as they do, thousands of desperate men who hang around all the large cities in this country, will flock around their standard in the hope of plunder and help them to fight their battles. The thing must be nipped in the bud—troops ought to be stationed at all important points ready for action at a moment's notice. It is only by pursuing such a policy that the country can be considered safe until such times as the projected attempt is made.

The despatch of troops from England to Canada is not at all pleasing to the Fenians. They and many Americans also entertain the idea that England has grown tired of Canada, and will take no part in defending it. Her action in sending reinforcements to the Province will go far to remove such an impression, and will have its effects upon Fenian confidence.

The news of the escape of Murphy and his companions from Cornwall gaol, occasioned much rejoicing among the brotherhood. The patriotic Michael is expected here before the meeting adjourns. There will be a grand pow-wow when he arrives. —Globe Correspondence.

Interview with a Fenian Gen.

A correstondent, who has written us a long letter containing an account of the late excursion to New York, concludes with the following:—

We left off at the State House, and after leaving the interesting building, we proceeded about half a mile through several street, and observing a new church in course of erection, we proceed inwards, and going forward, observed standing near the pulpit, a middle-sized, smart-looking individual, with moustache a la Louis Napoleon. He was in his shirt-sleeves, apparently "boss," for he was giving orders. Your corre-pondent accosted this gentleman, who proved to be an exceeding civil fellow; he was the contractor for the church—a very neat building, capable of seating 1,500 people. He quickly noticed that we were not Americans by our dress and conversation, whereupon he ventured, "Englishmen, I supposed?" We replied that we hailed from the "happy land" of Canada, and were denizens of despotic Britain. "Ah!" said he, "we were recently giving you chaps a little fun." We informed him that Canada didn't care about such fun, but she was ready to hold her own at all hazards. At this the individual informed us that he had been a Brigadier General in the American army, and now held the same rank in the Irish army of Liberation. At the "front" he was in command of 4000 men, only one regiment of which had come from Albany, but he was now proud to say that his own town could furnish an entire Fenian bridgade, now that a blow had been struck. The General did not seem to have a very clear idea as to the benefit that would accrue to the "auld heart" by the capture of Canada, but said that he had always felt a strong desire to see British and American soldiers pitted together; that of the five or six hundred men at the front, from Albany, there were not less than fifty that had seen less than three years service.

On our asking him if he thought our country would be put to any more trouble, he replied—"Yes, by —— unless the country becomes annexed, there will be any amount of trouble, and we are all ready for it to a man."

The conversation of General Hefferman led us to believe that, after all, the Fenian business had little to do with Ireland—that in short, it is but a similar filibustering scheme to the Walker-Nicaragua one, and, as good Canadians, we also with it a similar though much more speedy end.

The General waxed very eloquently in his denunciation of what he termed the "Christian" conduct of the crowd in your city, calling out to the prisoners as they passed through the streets, "hang them," "quarter them," &c. We reminded him that these expressions had been made use of towards rebel prisoners in their recoil of his own city. The "corn" was acknowledged, but the "general row a great difference between "honorable Fenians" and "armed rebels." After receiving from him the donation to the Cathedral, we bade him adieu, promising each other a mutually hot reception should we meet on monarchic soil.—Montreal Transcript.

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

The President of the United States, the first General of the Army, the first Admiral of the Navy, and many thousands of their fellow-citizens, will assemble to-day on the beautiful shores of Lake Michigan to do honor to the late Stephen A. Douglas. It is not often that statesmen find their eulogists among men of their own generation. The men who stand around the grave of Douglas were his companions.—They knew him well. In the course of nature he should still be with them—for Douglas Died comparatively young, in the very talness of his life. In fact, the orator who will to-day discuss his career is almost old enough to have been his father.

It is forty-two years since Douglas, a poor wayfaring Yankee boy, went to seek for his fortune in the State which afterward honored him as one of her most eminent citizens. He wandered early from his Green Mountain home, with nothing but a plain New-England education, and a determination to rise. Tired of cabinet-making and teaching, he engaged in what we called "studying law." The fame of Jackson filled the land, and the smart Yankee, not oppressed with scruples, saw that the sign in Tennessee was the star of conquest.—His great rival, Lincoln, was keeping a post-office, fresh from the glories of the Black Hawk war. Andrew Johnson was Mayor of a little mountain town in Tennessee; Jefferson Davis, a lieutenant of dragoons, was chasing the Indians; Seward was grieving over his defeat as Governor; Breckinride was studying the orations of Cicero against Catiline at a Kentucky college; Chase was endeavouring to gain a law practice in Cincinnati; Sumner was entering the Boston bar; Broderick was cutting stone; Grant was a schoolboy in his teens; Farragut was watching the honor of his flag on the torrid coasts of Brazil; and the orator of to-day, tired of war and law, and entering politics and become the New York Secretary of States Unlike many of these men, Lincoln especially, Douglas blossomed early. He belonged to that hardy breed of men who smit any toil and every latitude. Torrid or frigid, sunshine or snow, the life in him was enduring. He believed in the rowdy virtue of American politics, and had much of the rowdy in his nature. He managed his debates nearly much as Mr. Heenan manages his prize-fights, and conquered by sheer thumping.—The records of our Senate shew no debates more brutal, and yet more powerful, than those of Douglas, especially upon the Nebraska bill; and it was during this debate that he showed the amazing power which made his personal influence while he lived greater than that of any American statesman.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Tone of the United States Press.

We have shown Brownlow met his match; how politicians across the borders handle each other without gloves; and now we propose to give a specimen or two of the tone of the United States press. The New York Tribune, a mild disciple of the Reverend Beecher, speaks of Mr. Weed as the "infamous old villain," and so on. The Gold Hill News holds forth thus:—

The 'Orn of the 'Ution was 'Eard on the 'Ill.—Yes, verily, Gold Hill; for our ice cream man was tooting his horn to-day, very much to the delight of the youngsters and all others desiring refreshments in his line. The donkey that takes the cart of this man around, has ears as prominent as the "local" of the Virginia Union.

And to which the Virginia City Union responds:

The long-legged, slab-sided, knock-kneed goggle-eyed old saphead who continues to do up the locals for the News, in the above item calls us a parody on a mule. Now we don't know him much, but a "local" who will steals three pages of passengers every day, won t do To bankers, merchants, &c., we give notice that the aforesaid "local" visits this city at times; to look out for little things. A number of robberies have occurred in Gold Canon lately, and if the officers would investigate the matter, that "local" would think of travelling to other parts.

Parson Brownlow has a son who has succeeded him in the editorial management of the Knoxville Whig, and who is quite worthy of his father. He thus editorially speaks of one of his cotemporaries:

This old whisky-rotted, broken-down political hack, has been for several months blackguarding and abusing the senior editor of the Knoxville Whig, through a dirty little daily, conducted by an insolent swindler, and a degraded rebel sympathizer—used as a tool by a den of cowardly conspirators.

One radical editor calls another a ninecompoop, and the latter responds with "no antiquated invalid with a wooden leg and a weakness for gin and water."

English Claims Against America.

A Washington despatch to the New York Post, says that the Imperial Government have lately been making some heavy claims against the United States for losses sustained by English subjects resident in the South during the late war, and for seizures improperly and illegally made by Federal officials. In order to offset these claims, Mr. Seward, for several days prior to his departure for Chicago with President Johnson, was engaged in preparing a State paper, in which it is said that he reviewed, with greater vigor and determination than ever, the claims of American citizens against Great Britain, for losses inflicted by British-built cruisers sailing under the Confederate flag. Mr. Seward has not the slightest idea that these claims will be paid, but thinks that they maybe accepted as an offset to those made by Great Britain, and that while he will gain some credit from his countryman for having displayed considerable force and courage, there is every certainty of an amicable acjustment of the differences existing between the two countries.

WINE MADE IN CANADA.—"The Canada Vine Growers, Association," having obtained a special charter during the late Session, is now prosecuting the business of wine making in good earnest. Already the Association owns a Vineyard at Cook-ville, west of Toronto, worth $50,000. The capital stock of the Association is double that amount. Mr. Arnold, of this city, acts as agent for the exhibit, and will be happy to afford every information respecting it, and exhibit samples of the wine.—Ottawa post.

BUFFALO IN DANGER.

A Plot to Destroy the Elevator in that city.

DROWNED.

A gentleman named J. M. Rattle, a Deputy Assistant Commissary General, was accidentally drowned in Port Hope Harbor on Monday evening last. The deceased was a passenger on board the steamer "Kingston," and had in his possession a ticket from Toronto to Montreal. On reaching this port, it was discovered that the boat was on fire, but the passengers were not made aware of the fact until the harbor was reached, when a general panic ensued. The deceased was standing upon the wharf with other passengers, looking up at the fire on the upper deck, when it is supposed he missed his footing, and fell into the water between the boat and the wharf. He must have either been stunned, or lost all self-possession when he fell into the water, as he was seen by several persons, who state that he did not seem able to make any exertions to save himself. An attempt was made to rescue him, but ere any effectual means were obtained, the unfortunate man sank beneath the surface of the water. On his person was found his card, some letters and memorandums, and about fifty dollars in money. Mr. Coroner Maxwell was notified and an inquest was held on view of the body when a verdict was rendered of "accidental death," in addition to which was added the following presentment:—

"The Jury present, and would recommend to the Harbor Commissioners the propriety of hanging a number of Life Preservers in an exposed position on the wharf; and they think it would be the means of saving many lives."

The Chatham Planet says that on Sunday last some young lads went out through the bush on the Pepper farm, near the "Green Mountain House," each having a revolver or other fire-arms. Their principal object was squirel shooting, one of which was soon observed running up a tree, whereupon one of the lads named Wallace Pettingale followed it with his revolver, but the squirrel sprang to another tree.—The lads below then induced one of their number of the name of Morrison to ascend the second tree, and all commenced firing indiscriminately at the poor animal, wherever he could be seen, Pettingale also doing so, without a knowledge of Morrison being in the other tree, and the consequence was, that Morrison received a ball through the heart, and fell from the tree, calling out "I am shot," and immediately expired.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF CANADA.—The Rev. Wm. White, formerly of Richmond, has been inducted by the Presbytery of Perth into the pastoral charge of the Church of Kitley.——The Rev. A. Mackid, of Goderich, was recently waited on by a number of the members of his congregation, who presented him with a purse containing $129, and a kind and feeling address, on the occasion of his retiring from the active duties of the ministry, as a token of their esteem and regard.——On a recent occasion, the members of St. Andrew's Church, Melborne, C. E., presented their minister, the Rev. T. G. Smith, with a purse containing $65.——Official notice of a legacy of $2,000 to Queen's College, by the late George Michie, Esq., merchant, Toronto, has been received from the executors of that gentleman's will. The amount bequeathed will be a most seasonable and material help to the funds of the college, which, as the last report of the trustees to the Synod regretfully certifies, are barely sufficient to maintain existing efficiency, to say nothing about undertaking urgent improvements.

TERRIBLE RAILWY ACCIDENT.—A shocking accid nt occurred on the New York Central Railway, six miles east of Rochester, about five o'clock Wednesday evening. Several persons were killed outright and many others injured. The steamboat express train which left Albany that morning, was thrown from the track by a switch carelessly left open. The train was running fast and on a curve.—The engineer gave the signal to brake and jumped from his engine. The locomotive plunged into the sand and turned over.—The three coaches next to the baggage car, ran together in the form of a telescope and were left lying in a heap with the baggage cars The loss of life and injury to passengers generally, was confined to these three cars. Five persons were instantly killed and forty-six persons injured, some of whom cannot recover. Among the names of the wounded we only notice one from Canada, viz: John Reevy, London, C. W., ribs broken.—Belleville Intelligencer.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1866.

OUR DEFENCE.

There is no question of greater importance to us at the present moment than this one—What are the means of our defence? Threatened by hands of lawless ruffians and renegades, the dregs of the great army of the United States, and these aided and abetted by the citizens of the United States, generally, there is danger of these threats being carried into effect, with what result it is not for us, just now, to state. This one thing is certain, only from the United States can we be attacked or our soil invaded by any power, no matter how great. It is evident, too, that from the United States we may expect very little justice, where self interest is at stake, as the speeches of her statesmen and politicians, the buncombe in Congress and the late acts of her citizens at Buffalo fully attest. The question, therefore, forces itself on us, what are the means of our defence, if unlawfully attacked by the United States, for these raids can be taken in no other light than as acts of the people of the United States. We are not of those who think we cannot defend ourselves, and that, therefore, we should succumb at once and get annexed. Annexationists are scarce just now. Our dangers but attach us more devotedly to the mother country, and tend only to draw out our affections towards our beloved Queen; and when we look across the borders and witness the demagogueism, and paltry, mean, filthy ways the great people of the great United States have of doing their business, when we witness the price at which their boasted liberty is bought and sold, our own country, our government with all its faults become dearer to us, and our liberty enhanced by the comparison. The question—what are our means of defence? however still forces itself on us. To ourselves, evidently, we must look for immediate defence. It is true that Britain's last man and shilling are pledged for our defence. The whole power of the empire is at our back. But the empire is at a distance of 2000 miles from us, and, as time is necessary to bring troops here, we might suffer more or less loss, ere they could arrive, unless we be ready to manfully and successfully defend ourselves. To our volunteers, therefore, we look for immediate defence. Seeing it is so, it is plainly the duty of the government, and of the people to put the volunteer force in the most efficient condition, to encourage them in every lawful way, to hold out strong inducements so that the force may be kept up and strengthened from time to time, that when troubles come we may have a sufficient force ready.

At the time of our late trouble, it is well known that the force was not in an efficient state, owing to bad management and perhaps some defects in the militia law. Both these have been felt and pointed out, so that if they remain the blame must be the government's, and directly laid at the door of the Minister of Militia, or Militia authorities.—We find even yet there is not sufficient camp fittings, that the men have not yet the most approved arms of defence and that proper means of drill are left unattended to, till newspaper reporters force the matter on the attention of those who should be foremost in having all things ready.

During the last raid there was no commissariat. The men were actually allowed to go without food until they could endure no longer, and when they were fainting by the way there was no means of supplying them with food, so badly was everything managed. The artillery was also badly equipped and few in number; and no cavalry. Under such circumstances is it not a miracle that the Fenian brigands did not gain a foothold, and cause greater trouble, and greater loss of life. Even yet we find that the means of perfecting the drill of the force is very inadequate. Just eight days camp drill allowed, and this is thought sufficient to train men for duties that the army of the United States required nearly two years to learn. Surely our military authorities will have received a lesson from the defeats of the Northern army during the first 2 years of the rebellion, so that, if we be called on to suffer, and our soil invaded, we may be saved from like defeats and consequent reproaches. Our volunteers are willing to do their part without a word of complaint; let the authorities do their part.

Reports reach us daily of the certainty of another Fenian raid, and that ere long. The greatest activity prevails among the Brotherhood; Americans also express their opinions sympathy with the wretches. Most exciting speeches are being made by both Fenian leaders and native Americans political demagogues, everything is done and said that is supposed capable of deepening their hatred of England and everything British; and unless fear or cowardice has wide effect on the Brotherhood, we may expect another plundering and murdering expedition. President Johnson in his late speech at Niagara did not use the name of Fenian, and, hence, we cannot draw any conclusion as to what part he is likely to take in the event of another raid. It is evident from all the signs of the times, that on ourselves depends our defence, and to ourselves concerned the responsibility of the look for protection. In view of these things, should we not be preparing for any emergency that may arise? Drill associations should be organized, men should be trained and armed, and every probability provided against.

[illegible]

and thus be ready for whatever may come to pass. The sooner this is done the better, delays are dangerous. If the services of home guards be never needed no harm can accrue from their being trained and organized; and as the doing so would cost the Town nothing but the effort, the question now is—are we ready for the work? Perhaps Ashburnham would do something first. It has always taken the lead, let it do so again.

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS.

Several strangers from the United States have made their appearance amongst us within a few days. On Tuesday no less than 15 or 20 came by the train, but very soon left by the last train. We do not pretend to say they are Fenians, or Fenian sympathisers; but one thing is certain, they deserve to be watched. At a time when Roberts and O'Neil are making their threats that ere three weeks Canada will be in the hands of the Fenians, and the prisoners released, it is the duty of every citizen to keep a sharp eye on every suspicious looking character. We may also remark that more are reported coming. This may be a mere idle report, but even if so, there can be no harm in looking out for stragglers. It is also reported that words of sympathy with Fenianism has been heard on the streets. It is manifestly wrong to put forth these reports unless they are true, and the man or men who say they heard them, and do not report them to the proper authorities, is as culpable as they who give expression to their sympathy. It is a mock delicacy, that prevents men giving information of these things, at a time like this, when there does appear good reason to expect another raid, and one on a more extended scale than the last.

If our country is being filled with these renegades from the other side, with the intention of acting in concert with the raiders, as soon as an attack be made, we put the question to those whose duty it is to consider and see to those things: ought not we to be organizing to meet them if necessity offers itself? Drill Associations should at once be organized. Home guards, enrolled, armed, drilled and ready, that in the event of our volunteers being all called away, we shall have a little army at home, for the defence of our families and property.

We say too that no time should be lost; let meetings be called at once, they will cost nothing but an hour's time. The matter can then be discussed and arranged, and the sooner the better. If the services of such guards or association be not required, all the better, yet the probabilities are that they may be. However, a sense of security, will be given through the presence of an organized, an equipped and trained body of men, in the absence of our volunteers. Who will take the lead now? The Sheriff? the Mayor? Col. Haultain? some one should do it.

THE JOLLY DOGS AGAIN!

Our readers will forgive us for trespassing on their patience, concerning the above clubs but our interest now, (and ere long the public interest, might demand if not exposed) demands all we have done. But a word or two in reference to F. E. Burnham's letter and lame excuse for not paying his accounts. He admits what he denies. He says he was not Treasurer, yet he received the money and paid accounts, was not that being virtually Treasurer? He also admits that he "proceeded to correct the account presented to him, which account was made out by one of the Jolly dogs and showed $20 60 to F. E. Burnham's hands. He corrected it, however, and his own admission and his account, thus corrected, showed him $16 67 in hand, when he saw that, and not till then, did he say he had no money on hand, but never yet did he assert that he had no money belonging to the "Jolly Dogs."

By a "Bill," which he furnished W. Kane, which bill is in F. E. Burnham's own hand writing, he shows that all he paid was $61 50, while he admits having received $85 00 Therefore, he must have on hand $23 50 or else he must have spent it himself, as all the "Jolly Dogs" deny that he paid any more accounts than appeared in the Examiner, last week. Besides, G. Leonard, and W. Kane, went to him several times to get the account settled, and he would not do it.—They called several meetings, but he never attended one. They told him they believed he had money enough to pay the accounts, and they also demanded a statement, and the statement given, is the one published, showing him in possession of $16 67. The other account given in an evil moment shows him in possession of $4 15 more from other sources. Making the nice little sum of $20 82 appear to be in his hands.

Another thing, several of the others, viz, Kane, Leonard, and Moloney proposed, was that Burnham to render an account as near as he could, and they would pay the balance required. His only answer was, first, he would pay $4 15; after he corrected his accounts, he would then pay $5 and still receive $6 67, or $12 82, of the money of the club. When threatened that he would get sued. His answer was, "Sue, and be'd——; he was a minor." We have taken this method of warning the public, concerning the youth. Kane, Leonard and Moloney, always appeared ready and willing to do every thing reasonable to settle and pay. But Master Burnham, would generously pay $5, and keep $12 82—what a generous Treasurer!

He now, by his own accounts, stands convicted of embezzling $20 82 of other parties money. Unless he can clear the matter up, and pay the debt, there is no other conclusion for any sane man to arrive at. What a spectacle for our young men to gaze on.—We told him we would let the public know these things, but he remarked there were other papers in town. But until he pays the account, his letter in the "other paper" is one of the strongest proofs of his guilt.—Our advice to him is,—"be honest," don't begin your career by cheating the printer out of $16 80, for the public will find you out, and if you continue you will not be a great honor to the legal profession to which you aspire; and be truthful, don't claim kindred by your words, with the father of deceit.—The reason why we blame Master Burnham so, is because he ordered almost all of the work, and like Judas, carried the bag. With all his faults, we hope his end may not be like that of Judas. A character is worth more than thirty pieces of silver, in your case there are not thirty pieces of silver.

Another account furnished from his own pen:—

Received at door	$45 65
Paid	61 50
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible] of $3 50 in his favor. Showing $25 17 on hand, less $8 paid since, still $17 17 really on hand, or spent by him, by his own showing.

What a spectacle! we have exposed him to the public, we will next time try whether his plea of being a minor be a legal one, unless honesty prevails, and is the meantime we get our own.

Accidents.

John Gibney, brother to Mr. Shaw, of Buckhorn, met with a serious accident on Saturday night last. While he was letting down a sluice gate in the mill, it came in contact with [illegible] which flew up and struck Mr. G. on the lower jaw, tearing away a large portion of the jaw. Dr. Hurnell was [illegible] and found the wound, taking out three pieces of bone. It is hoped, however, that he will be able to use it as well as ever in a short time.

Lately, while Mr. James Mann, of Smith, was greasing his thrashing machine, his hand in some way got caught and was so severely bruised that Dr. Burnham found it necessary to take off the four fingers by the middle joints. We are glad to learn that Mr. Mann gets along as well as could be expected, and that he will be able to use the hand as soon as it gets well.

Temperance.

We understand that the lecture given by Mr. McMurrry, on Friday evening last, was well received. Mr. McMurray, is highly spoken of by every one who heard him, we are are informed that he consented to return and favor us with two more lectures on the evenings of the first and second of October. One lecture to be in the Wesleyan Sunday School room, and the other in the basement of the Presbyterian Church, if available.—We hope that our readers will bear the date in memory, and attend. We feel confident that they will not have to regret doing so.

Volunteers who fell at Ridgeway.

We have been requested to state that subscriptions, to raise a monument to the memory of those noble fellows who fell at Ridgeway, are being taken at the Bank of Montreal here. And, as the Manager, Mr. Richardson, desires to forward what may be subscribed in Peterborough, at as early a date as possible, he earnestly desires those who feel inclined to give a dollar for that purpose, to call and do it immediately.

INQUEST.—Dr. Poole held an inquest yesterday evening, over the dead body of one Edward English, an unfortunate wanderer, who fell dead in Ashburnham. The verdict, we understand, was, "Died from natural causes, accelerated by intemperance, and want." The unfortunate creature was given to intemperance, and also occasional, if not entire aberrancy of mind.

County Court and Court of Quarter Session.

The Court opened on Tuesday. His Honor, Judge Boucher, presiding. P. Pearce, Esq., and W. H. Moore, Esq., Associate Justices of Peace.

GRAND JURY:—James Russel, foreman; John Allen, jr., Geo. Brownlee, Josiah Blewitt, Malcolm Bell, Richard Borrowman, Thomas Best, James Burgess, Peter Buchannan, Thos. Casement, John Cameron, Peter McNeil, Thomas McMurray, Wm. Patterson, John Dalgey, Henry Patterson, James Cutler, Henry Bell, Michael Switzer, John Stewart and Daniel Wigmore.

The grand jury brought in true bills in the following cases:—

The Queen vs. Alex. Morrison, et. al., riot.
The Queen vs. Scott, et. al., riot.
The Queen vs. Morrison, et. al., assault.

A true bill was also found against Thos. Hill, John Hill and Robert Hill for assault on George Clysdale and Samuel Clysdale on the 25th of June last, in Asphodel.

The first case was Lipsitt vs. Seines, and occupied the whole of Tuesday. The jury being permitted, after agreement, to return a verdict under seal. Verdict for Seines.—C. A. Weller for pltff., S. Smith for deft.

WEDNESDAY.

Immediately after receiving the verdict in re. Lipsitt vs. Seines, Thomas Hill, John Hill and Robert Hill were called to answer to the charge of assaulting, cutting and maiming George Clysdale and Samuel Clysdale, of Asphodel, on the 25th of June last. C. A. Weller for the crown, S. Smith for the prisoners. Mr. Smith, on behalf of the prisoners, filed an affidavit that Mary Ann Hill, a material witness in the case, could not be present on account of injuries received by being thrown from a waggon. The case was delayed until a doctor could be sent to find out the truth of the affidavit in her case, and Dr. McNabb was sent for that purpose.

The second case was Hinds vs. Toronto vs. Keenan. Weller for pltff., Dennistoun for deft. Verdict for deft.

This was a case brought to recover the discount of a note made by Geo. Kempt, Lindsay, and endorsed by Mr. Keenan, which note had been renewed in 1864, but the discount being in some way charged to Mr Kempt. He failing to pay it, the bank sought to recover it from Mr. Keenan.—Council for Mr. Keenan argued that as the bank had charged it to Mr. Kempt, the endorser was free.

Nicol vs. Nicol. Verdict for pltff., $200.

The next case was that of the Queen vs. Walter McGregor against several young men who tarred and feathered McGregor on the 13th April last. Not decided on our going to press.

The Back Country.

A resident of Anstruther writes us:—

We have a new Wesleyan Methodist Church built in Anstruther; it is a little frame building, 20 by 24 feet. We had preaching in it last Sunday, the 19th inst., by Mr. John Robinson; he had 40 of a congregation. We have one acre of land attached to it for a graveyard. It is the first church on the Burleigh Road, it is 23 miles back from Burleigh Bridge. We feel to return our sincere thanks to the friends in Peterboro and Lakefield for their kind subscriptions to our church in Anstruther. We have commenced a Sunday school in our church. We have a house for a day school built half a mile from the church and we expect to have a teacher in it very soon.

We never had as good spring wheat as we have here this year: there is neither rust, smut nor weevil in it: and our fall wheat has been very good too, with very few exceptions. We had a very heavy frost on the nights of the 15th and 16th instant, which killed the corn and beans, and blackened the potatoes in many places. We have fine crops of oats, and our green crop is reviving somewhat after the frost. We have also a very good crop of hay this year.

THE JOLLY DOGS.

[illegible] the Editor of [illegible] Examiner:

[illegible] 4 Row [illegible] ebullitions of your [illegible] evening the [illegible] in your [illegible] you, having [illegible] do so? and yet [illegible] to pay your. [illegible] ther, however, parties, am impli[illegible] in the matter, [illegible] am innocent on me in [illegible] aware in connection with the same, and then it will be seen on whom the odium and blame should rest.

It must be understood that there were never any officers appointed by the troupe, but as Messrs. A. G. Gilbert, and F. E. Burnham, were the parties through whom under the troupe was formed, they were looked on as business managers, and they who ordered the printing, [illegible] generally. Mr. Burnham received the tickets signed them and kept them for distribution, and consequently was the only one connected with the troupe who could possibly give any statement of what had been done with them.

Alderman Cogerts here, the door-keeper paid over the money received at the door to Mr. Burnham, who undertook the whole management of [illegible] days after the concerts here, we were surprised to hear that instead of there being a clear balance of $25 or $30, which was the least we anticipated, [illegible] there were found $5 50 in the hands of our pro tem. Treasurer, and Messrs. Graham & Stratton's bill of $34 50 was yet unpaid, hence, there appeared a deficiency. At the time Mr. Burnham, stated he had but $13 50 on hand, he said that he had not received payment for the tickets which were sold, so that after paying all the debts excepting Messrs Graham & Stratton there was a balance of $13 50 out of the money received at the door. On account of the balance being so much smaller than the members of the troupe expected there was a general feeling of dissatisfaction among them, but they presumed that there would be sufficient collected for those tickets which had been sold by parties outside, to more than cover the amount due to Messrs Graham & Stratton, and so matters were allowed to remain quiet for some time.

Some time after, Mr. Graham asked we for payment of his bill, and we referred him to Mr. Burnham, from whom he could not get a satisfactory answer. Mr. Burnham, denied having any money on hand, and said that Mr. W. Maloney, and I had received a portion of the money, which was not the case, as it was known that only Mr. Burnham, received the money belonging to the troupe here, when I spoke of this to Mr. B., he denied having said anything of the kind—but he denies also having any funds on hand, or of having admitted the $12 50 referred to above. It was then suggested that a meeting should be called and Mr. Burnham to hand in a statement, of this meeting he was notified, but did not attend and although several meetings were called for the express purpose of receiving his statement in order that should there really be a deficiency, the amount might be subscribed among the members, but it appears that on these occasions he suddenly took his memory so far as those meetings were concerned, for he never attended, and although repeatedly asked to give in a full statement he never did so, and as he would not do so, we endeavored to find out what disposition he had received for tickets, a memoranda of which was given to me, a copy of which I subjoin:—

L. Unisse	$4 75
J. Deicher	1 50
A [illegible]	75
T Maloney	1 50
W. Kane	1 50
C Coulter	1 25
G. Crone	2 00
Which makes	$13 25

To which add $4 67, which I handed to him at Omemee, to pay Mr. McGregor, for driving us there, but which he never paid to us and add $12 50 the amount he admitted having left from funds received at the door making in all $30 42 which should be accounted for by him. But yet he would not pay Messrs Graham & Stratton's bill which amounted to only $24 80, nor would he even admit of having any balance over but still he would not give in a full statement.

Of the above sum paid for tickets, Mr. Burnham, I believe denies the principal portion but of course, those parties are ready to prove as to the amount paid.

From the above statement the public, will see on whom the blame should rest. Messrs Graham & Stratton are well aware that some of the troupe exerted themselves to their utmost to have the bill paid, but were unwilling to pay the same when they thought that pay less. We never had received funds enough to discharge that debt.

Mr. Burnham, in his letter to the Review, last week, seeks to shirk the blame by wrongfully endeavoring to throw it on the shoulders of the rest of the troupe. His assertion that he never admitted having any balance on hand, is rather inconsistent with the statement made to us. How he could have imagined that we were to subscribe towards paying a debt when we believed him to have funds on hand to pay the same, is more than I can imagine. No doubt we did tell him that if he would give a full statement, and if there were a deficiency thereon, we would then subscribe towards paying Messrs Graham & Stratton's bill, but not otherwise.

Trusting that this statement will satisfy you and the public that some of us are willing to pay our debts, and apologizing for occupying so much of your space,

I am, respectfully yours,
GEORGE T. LEONARD.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR:—Under date of September 8th, you give place to a communication, in which your informant accuses myself and some others of working on the Sabbath. I would not take the trouble to notice the matter was it not that he states several falsehoods, and exaggerates all [illegible] In the first place, in accusing me of [illegible] forty [illegible] of [illegible] morning to work in the harvest field, thereby implying that I made such a common practice, which is false. That I did on three occasions during a wet harvest, which has [illegible] three weeks, go out on the Sabbath to draw in grain from impending rain is true, grain that I had used every possible exertion to get into the barn the week previous.

He next accuses me of inducing illiterate, and indigent persons, to join me in (as he calls it,) desecration of the Sabbath day, by the offer of double wages, which is also false. Those persons whom he calls illiterate and indigent, volunteered from kindness to help save a field of grain, that otherwise would have been lost, and I would not take one cent for their assistance on Sunday.

He likewise said that I had been often expostulated with and censured for such nefarious conduct, but instead of showing contrition quoted Scripture in justification; had your informant the manhood to do so in person, instead of through your columns, I might have cited (for his special benefit) the instance of the Pharisee and Publican, and that by removing the beam from his own eye, he would better see the mote in mine.

I would be sorry, Mr. Editor, by word or act, to show disrespect to the Sabbath, and, therefore, I think there are few and exceptional cases where working on that day would be justifiable, among those few is drawing in, on the Sabbath of a wet harvest, grain—the produce of a year's labor—that one wet day might very seriously injure, if not totally destroy. However, if the law thinks different, I and others must bow in submission with the best grace we can.

MILITIA APPOINTMENTS.—There has been a great deal said lately about the inefficiency of the Militia; and we are quite sure the public will be taken entirely by surprise when we inform them that the vacancy in the Adjutant-General's Department, vice Brown deceased, is actually filled by Capt. Carter, the hero of the St. Armand Rebellion. It is not, perhaps, for non-military critics like ourselves to say how far Captain Carter was blameworthy in the sudden change of base, which has become celebrated chiefly as being the only movement of the campaign which seem to be made for purely strategical purposes. But one thing is certain, though the retreat were the most brilliant operation of the war, it is no conceived of by the public that the appointment of the commander on the occasion will be a very heavy blow to such confidence as is still felt in the military management of our Provincial Authorities. The Government can not afford to follow Col. Brown by Capt. Carter, especially at the cost of passing over a gentleman so well known for his probity, services, and zeal as Brigade-Major Macpherson. —Herald.

[The appointments of an individual who is liable to "fits" in the most trying emergency to such a responsible position is not merely a blunder, it is a crime against the public safety, and shakes all confidence in the administration of our military affairs.—ED. WIT.]

THE KINGSTON BANQUET.

The Ottawa Citizen says the banquet to J. A. was "a great success, a brilliant success, indeed." We hope the Citizen was not in the same state J. A. sometimes falls into. We expect, as far as drinking is concerned, that the banquet was a brilliant success; J. A. is noted for being clever at that sort of work.

The Ottawa Post says:—"Judging from the reports in our city morning contemporaries, we must confess that the Kingston Banquet was not as brilliant a gathering as we were led to expect. The list of provincial or local [illegible] was great. The Worship the Mayor could not preside, in consequence of indisposition, but in his stead Mr. Thos. [illegible] was supported by the guest of the occasion, the Atty.-General West, and the Hon. Messrs. W. P. Howland, T. D. McGee, A. Campbell, J. Cockburn, G. S. Cartier, and Ferguson Blair, ministers. The Rev. J. Girling, J.C. Street, A. [illegible], and Wm. Ferguson, Esquires, M.P.P.'s, were also present, with a number of gentlemen occupying official positions in and about Kingston. About 150 in all.

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him, but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed witho t assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

HEALTH IS STRENGTH.—To prevent or conquer disease is one of the grandest attainments ever aimed at by man; and Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers will as sure cure coughs, colds, tickling in the throat and pulmonary complaints, as war and pestilence will destroy. Severe colds if not attended to sooner or later lead to incurable consumption, and the strength of the strongest soon fails if neglected. The readiest and best means known for the cure of the complaints is "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers," which have been thoroughly tried for the last twenty years, and have never known to fail. Singers and public speakers will derive great benefit from the use of them. Sold by all Medicine Dealers, at 25 cents per box.

The Mints of the United States have coined since they commenced operation (some seventy years,) the large amount of Eight hundred Million dollars, about one-fifth of the whole metallic currency of the world, of which amount $500,000,000, has been derived from their own mines; we are not without mines, but while we feel that they will not produce so much gold, we have the pleasure of knowing there is a sovereign remedy in the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" for sudden colds, rheumatism, neuralgia, tooth-ache, &c. Sold by all Medicine Dealers, at 25 cents per bottle.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

A BEAUTIFUL HORSE.

There is nothing that can contribute so much to render the horse beautiful and elegant to improve his condition and make him all that is desirable as "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine;" it has been used by many persons who own valuable carriage and other horses with decided success, and so well pleased are they with it that they always keep it on hand in case of emergency; it may be given at all times with perfect safety.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C.W., proprietors for the Canadas. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The undersigned having been restored to health in a few weeks by a very simple remedy after having suffered several years with a severe lung affection, and that dread disease Consumption—is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure.

To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, &c. The only object of the advertiser in sending the Prescription is to benefit the afflicted, and spread information which he conceives to be invaluable; and he hopes every sufferer will try his remedy, as it will cost them nothing, and may prove a blessing.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S
CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

Among the most important of modern Medical discoveries, stands

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

Has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the tortuning pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Ordersare coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it, with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
A. P. REDMOND, M.

Peterboro, July 11, 1866. 28

The Fickleness of a Loving Girl in a pet

Well, let him go, and let him stay,
I do not mean to die;
I guess he'll find that I can live
Without him, if I try;
He thought to frighten me with frowns,
So terrible and black:
He'll stay away a thousand years
Before I ask him back.

He said that I had acted wrong—
And foolishly beside;
I won't forget him after that,—
I wouldn't if I died:
If I was wrong, what right had he
To be so cross with me;
I know I'm not an Angel quite—
I don't pretend to be.

He had another sweetheart once,—
And now when we fall out,
He always says she was not cross,
And that she did not pout;
It is enough to vex a saint—
It's more than I can bear—
I wish that girl of his was ——
Well, I don't care where!

He thinks that she was pretty, too—
Was beautiful as good;
I wonder if she'd get him back
Again, now, if she could:
I know she would, and there she is,—
She lives almost in sight;
And, now, it's after nine o'clock,
Perhaps he's there to-night.

I'd almost write to him to come—
But then I've said I won't—
I do not care so much, but she
Shan't have him, if I don't;
Besides, I know that I was wrong,
And he was in the right;
I guess I'll tell him so, and then ——
I wish he'd come to-night.

Recipe for Choosing a Good Wife.

As much of beauty as preserves affection,
Of modest diffidence as claims protection;
A docile mind subservient to correction,
A temper led by reason and reflection,
And every passion kept in due subjection;
Just faults enough to keep her from perfection;
Mind this, my friend, and then make your selection.

HINTS FOR PREACHERS.

Dr. Emmons, on being asked what was the best system of rhetoric for a clergyman, replied:—

"These two rules make the best system: First have something to say; second, say it. To a young preacher he said, never try to do what you know you cannot do; never try to be what you know you cannot be; but try to preach better and better every Sabbath, which you can do. Moreover, let your eloquence flow from your heart to your hands, and never attempt to force it the other way.

To another he said: In writing sermons, always have a plan, and let every sentence help to accomplish that plan. Let your sermons and prayers have a beginning, middle and end. Keep your best and most important thought until the last. The close of the sermon should be like the approach of a ship to the wharf with all the sails standing.

First, address the understanding; secondly, the conscience; thirdly the passions of your hearers. And take care, in delivery, to stand behind, and no before, your subject."

Courage in Everyday Life.

Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however much your eyes may covet it.

Have the courage to show your respect for honesty, in whatever guise it appears; and your contempt for dishonest duplicity by whomever exhibited.

Have the courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones.

Have the courage to obey your Maker, at the risk of being ridiculed by man.

Have the courage to prefer comfort and propriety to fashion in all things.

Have the courage to acknowledge your ignorance rather than to seek credit for knowledge under false pretences.

Have the courage to provide entertainment for your friends within your means—not beyond.

Have the courage to take a good paper, and pay for it annually in advance.

6. STOP THAT BOY.—A cigar in his mouth, a swagger in his walk, impudence in his face, a care-for-nothing in his manner. Judge from his demeanor, he is older than his father, wiser than his teacher, more honored than the President of the Board of Trustees for the town, higher than the Governor. Stop him; he is to fast; he can't see himself as others see him; he don't know his speed. Stop him, ere tobacco ruins his nerves; ere pride ruins his character, ere the loafer masters the man, ere good ambition and manly strength give way to low pursuits and brutish aims.—Stop such boys. They are legion, they are the shame of families, the disgrace of their town, the sad and solemn reproach of themselves.

A celebrated barrister retired from practice, was one day asked his sincere opinion of the law. Why, the fact is, rejoined he, If any man were to claim the coat upon my back, and threatened my refusal with a lawsuit, he should certainly have it, least in defending my coat, I should lose my waistcoat also.

AN AFFAIR OF LETTERS.—An ingenious person has discovered that the three most forcible letters in our alphabet are N R G; that the two which contain nothing are M T; that four express great corpulence. O B C T; that two are in a decline, D K; that four exalted station, X L N C, and three excite our tears, yet when pronounced together are necessary to a good understanding—L E G.

"Mr. Ponce, don't you think marriage is a means of grace?" said Mrs. Ponce, with an air of triumph. "Well yes," growled out old Ponce; "I should suppose anything can be called a means of grace that brings down pride and leads to repentance."

You labor over much on composition, doctor, said a clergyman to an eminent divine. I write a sermon in three hours and make nothing of it. So your congregation say, quietly quoth the doctor.

Peter says it is folly to tell a man that he must not enlarge his debts when the poor fellow is doing all he can to contract them.

'Do you see that fellow lounging there' doing nothing?' said Cousin to Jenks the other day. 'How does he live? by his wits? Oh, no, he's a cannibal?' 'A cannibal?' 'Yes, a cannibal—he lives on other people?'

'William,' said a teacher to on of his pupils, 'Can you tell me why the sun rises in the east?' 'Don't know sir' replied William cept it be that east makes every thing rise.

Some cases to rest upon the assumption that, if they cheat a poor fellow out of his farm, he has no ground for complaint.

PIANO-FORTES.

DRIGGS' NEW PATENT.

ARE THE ONLY INSTRUMENTS constructed on a truly scientific principle. That have greater strength, and will remain longer in tune than any other Piano. The construction is simple and natural, all the extraneous lumber in the body of the instrument is dispensed with; the sound boards are merely two arched planks of thin wood, like the front and back of a violin; the strings are attached to a strong iron frame, which is separate and entirely independent of the case, thereby dispensing with the old heavy form of stringing, by substituting straight bridges, preserving at the same time The Over String Bass, of which Mr Driggs is the inventor. By these improvements we gain much more vibratory power, at the same time preserving all its purity and richness of tone.

They have received the highest testimonials from the Press, and all the principal artists in the country, among which are:

Harry Sanderson,	L. M. Gottschalk,
Max Maretzek,	S. Thalberg,
Theodore Kiefield,	Wm. Mason,
Herman Wollenhaupt,	A. Rerili
Francis H. Brown,	M. Strackosch,
Wm. Henry Fry.	Charles Fradel.

Mr. SIGESMUND THALBERG, the great pianist, says:—I have examined your new Piano-fortes and I cordially approve of its system of construction. Its principle, by which great increase of vibratory power is obtained, being very simple and perfectly philosophical. The tone is grand and noble; it has great capacity for sustaining the sound or singing, and its volume of tone or power I have never heard excelled in depth, purity and sympathetic sweetness.

Wm. HENRY FRY, late musical critic of the N. Y. Tribune says:—I have examined your newly invented Piano-Fortes They merit all the praise given to them by Messrs. Thalberg, Gottschalk, Strackosch, Mason and others. As regards the structure, they are original and philosophical; in purity, volume, and continuity of tone; in vocal versimilitude, that crowning excellence which enables the pianists to "sing" on the instrument. Your Pianos deserve the highest rank. Your invention, in my opinon, is destined to work radical changes in the manufacture of Pianos throughout the world.

From the N. Y. Herald, Sept. 5.—Upon a careful examination of Driggs Piano-Forte, we find the results obtained are a very fine singing tone, great purity and brilliancy throughout the entire instrument, not often found in Pianos constructed upon the old plan.

The N. Y. Times, July 13, says:—We have now an instrument without an equal. It can sing with a smoothe delicacy, perfectly unattainable on any other instrument; an ordinary player obtains with no exertion, the fullness of a Grand Piano Forte and they must speedily supersead the old styles.

GENTLEMEN:—Having thoroughly examined and tested the Piano-Fortes invented and patented by Mr. S. B. DRIGGS, I am of the opinion that the tone resulting from his improvements, as exhibited in the instruments under examination, in point of richness, depth and brilliancy, equals that of the best Grand Piano-Fortes, and excells them in pure, musical and actual tone, power thus approximating closer to what I consider perfection in the instrument than has yet been achieved by any other system of manufacture.

Yours respectfully,
L. M. GOTTSCHALK.

The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celecrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. REELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER—for Indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c., where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity makes it a cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bottle. Ask for "LYON'S" Pure Extract. Take no other.

CHRONIC AND SECRET DISEASES

And all Female Complaints.

UNFORTUNATE READ.

YOUNG MEN WHO ARE TROUBLED with weakness generally, caused by a bad habit in youth, which produces constitutional debility, you can rely on our remedies, for we have treated over fifty thousand patients, and we guarantee a perfect cure in all cases.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.

Our PERIODICAL DROPS will bring on the monthly sickness in cases of obstruction from any cause, and after all other remedies of the kind have been tried in vain.

NEW REMEDIES AND QUICK CURE.—For Syphilitic stricture, nocturnal weakness, pains in the joints, affections of the kidneys, diseases of the head, throat, nose and skin, and all those dreadful affections arising from a secret habit of youth, which produces constitutional debility, renders marriage impossible, and in the end destroys both body and mind, the treatment we adopt is the result of upwards of thirty years experience and successful practice in Europe and America.

Poetry.

THE CHEERFUL HEART.

What though the world to us its joys
And riches to impart,
They are but blessings thrown away,
Without a cheerful heart;
For happiness does not consist
In what the world calls wealth;
But in the soul which ne'er complains,
In sickness or in health.

Thank God that scattered here and there
Upon this dreary earth,
Are those within whose hearts are found
The attributes of worth,
Good, gentle kind and noble souls,
Who like the moonlight fair,
Shed forth their holy brilliancy
On all things—everywhere.

Oh! cultivate a cheerful heart,
While on this earth of ours;
Why should we tread on thorny ground
When life is full of flowers:
Why shroud our souls in sombre clouds
Of pain, and woe, and sadness,
When nature teaches every one
To sport in glee and gladness?

Selections.

A LEGEND OF PROVENCE.

I am yet king! exclaimed Francis the first, vaulting into his saddle after the disastrous battle of Pavia had consigned him to a year's captivity, whose last month had more gall than honey, with the dowager Queen of Portugal, sister to his imperial and imperious captor—Charles Vth. From the leer to the Rhone whispers had crept forth that he had returned a crest-fallen man, who, after chafing his proud spirit in bondage, had no means of breaking his chains but by accepting a bride for whom he had small regard.

However this may have been, he rode through Provence, where his subjects received him with every demonstration of joy, although as he approached their gray old towns, he thought their giant gates looked down upon him with derision. He was wont to rally, and set spurs to his steed, and leave his retinue far behind; but on one occasion, the townsmen, who had timely apprisal of his route, met him outside their walls, he could no less than rein up, and bow from his stirrups, which he courteously did, to the admiration of all who beheld him; for he who could wrestle with Henry the Eighth and throw him in lusty falls, was no more deficient in grace than strength. They besought him to honor their tilt-yard with his presence, where in festivity of mimic fight, they might celebrate his enfranchisement from the prison of Madrid.

By our faith, good leigeman, quoth his Majesty, we have had such hard knocks on the battle field, that we are none in love of the shadows of tourney. And he waved his hand by way of adieu, when his horse started at an old Castilelan whose hair was silver white, and beside him stood his daughter.

Never had Francis seen beauty so rare, and modest withal. She bore a massive salver on which lay a bunch of rusted keys and with downcast looks she said:

My lord will please accept the keys of the brave old town, and she held them towards him with such gracefulness, that in amazement he stooped from his saddle, stroked her dark tresses with his hand and inquired who she was.

My name, my lord, is Ellen, and this is my father, Peter Ingevere.

And your age, sweet damsel? asked the King.

Sixteen last Candlemas, rejoined the little maid.

By this time the sun was on the wane, and Peter, who was governor, besought him to sojourn for the night, and he would soon have fifty good cooks to celebrate this great feast.

To this Francis, who nothing more desired than an invitation, consented; and accompanied Ellen to her father's house, where some time after a band of trained violists arrived to commemorate with songs this happy visit.

Ellen entertained the King with artless talk so interspersed with sense, that her conquest over her suitor became complete. And when placed by her side at dinner, he forgot venison and pastry, and peakers of wine! for though so many other ladies shared the honor of his presence, to none were his attentions so refinedly pointed as to the daughter of his venerable host. Perhaps some envied her the distinction, of which she appeared unconscious, and some of them were surprised to see her go from the hall, observing as she passed that this was a feint to draw the King more in her toils.

Ellen merely said she had arrangements to make for to-morrow.

And why not for to-night, cousin? asked the King, who, when the wine-bowls had passed round more than once, had followed her from the table and discovered her reading in a little oratory alone.

And why not to-night fair Ellen? suavely withdrawing the book from her hand. She did not reply while she tossed over the illuminated leaves, where pictured saints seemed to frown upon him chidingly. The silence evidently disconcerted him, but he evaded his chagrin in smiles.

What's a charmed portal my lord? said she interrupting him, and drawing back at the same time.

We swear by thy mild blue eyes that none whom Francis ever loved shall be so beloved as Ellen, said he.

My lord, said she, I've heard of holy books bursting their clasps when perjured mouths came nigh. Beware of robbing my poor eyes of modesty their only claspings towards me. I warn you to never practise falsehood.

By our knighthood, we shall be true to thee girl till our heart had no throb for any living creature.

Will you love me till my hair becomes gray?

Eschantress we shall love thee wert thou a withered crone, from which hideousness itself might recoil, cried he so affectionately that she paused.

And for what am I so vastly inestimable? said she hesitatingly. It cannot be my manes—a few chips of the shears, and farewell my pride in ringlets to the winds. It may not be my brow, for care shall soon furrow it, and blanch my cheek which now seems blooming. Core, too, shall more peak my chin, and shrivel, if I have any, to most perishable.

Lady, we love thee more for thy good sense than for thy beauty, said he, and stepping closer to her his spur struck the door, which closed with a spring. He rubbed his hands together and expressed delight at an incident which created to her a considerable trepidation, that soon subsided into a calm.

I was childish enough to be alarmed; but I have nothing to fear from a true knight. His christian Majesty would not oppress the meanest of his subjects, or betray confidence where he is an honored guest, observed she drawing a chair before her, and leaning in an easy posture over its tall, carved back.

Not for a diadem would we harm thee, dearest, said he. Yet, by our sword we would sooner forfeit every acre of Navarre, and leave Italy the brightest jewel in our rival's crown than forego thy love. Thou must be ours; and the enraptured monarch disengaged her from the bulwark, and embraced her ere she could extricate herself from his arms.

Hist! heard no noise? breathed she softly, and she held her finger towards the door. He heard none, nor had she; and she twined her small fingers round her wrist.—In two hours hence it shall be midnight.—Meet me here when the town clock chimes. Pray, my Liege, till then retire, said she, and she opened the door.

Dost mock us, Ellen? Say wilt thou keep thy promise?

Assuredly my lord does not doubt me when I say yes? Yes, I shall meet your Majesty. See, the revellers from the hall seek you as one lost. Join them, and remember the appointed hour.

Francis retired abashed, when with gentle force he had been expelled, from the oratory. Ellen quietly resumed her devotions for the night.

Tranquilly she arose, and her manner betrayed neither excitement nor emotion, though from repeated efforts she made to trim the chamber lamp, and furtive glances cast often at a mirror, doll must one be who could not distinguish that she was ill at ease. She paced round the apartment which was small and meanly furnished, its only ornaments being pictures of embroidery on Scripture subjects. In one part were suspended loose sheets of vellum, parts of a missal for festival purposes, and in another seemed a perch to have been erected upon which perched a hawk, but so in the shade it was difficult to determine whether it was part of the ravelled tapestry or the real bird itself.

At length she sat on a low stool and encompassed her knees between her hands rocking to and fro as if engaged in unravelling some painful train of reflections.

If inward beauty can be no wise retained except by outward injury, better the body now scath than the soul be defiled, said she reviewing herself in the grotesque mirror which a pensive expression which soon cleared into cheerfulness.

Now, Vanity aside, continued she. Nell did you ever think you were so pretty as to make the conquest of a king? Never, Nell, never! Nell must be lovely to have accomplished that. La, what a toyshop of charms are temptingly piled in yonder glass, and she shook the oil so that wavy light fell on the mirror. Blue eyes and black hair are peculiarities not often found together. Yet here I have them in Milesian perfection, albeit the average spirit of my eyes in half merriment, half melancholy. And cheeks are here, that though they may not shame the rose, they never know the blush of counterfeit. Teeth, likewise, which though passing white, any elephant-hunter would at one glance discover were no ivory; and lips which a truer wooer than my lord Francis told Ellen were gushing ripe, any wild bird would know at first pecking were not worth sweet strawberries. Well, and I was thinking it's a pity all the toyshop should be in an hour or two as sad to look upon as a sepulchre.

She called her maid, and bade her bring a chafing-dish, heaped with live charcoal and sulphur in bar, which done the maid retired and Ellen sat alone once more.

Suspending the basin of a spirit lamp over the dish, she dropped in the sulphur, and as it fused into liquid a yellow flame flickered up, and a dull halo was cast around the chamber. She shook out her hair from the golden pins that bound it, as if she intended to rebrush it again. Redressing her tresses never had more; for dressing her tresses never had more; for with a pair of scissors she clipped round till her head was negress bare, but not half so picturesque, for it had no curls!

Smearing her forehead and cheek with oil the sulphuric vapor arose in poisonous influence as she leaned over the fatal dish. Her eyelashes were the first sacrifices to the fume; and the pained eyeballs rolled in the sockets as if they were driven inward by gusts of fire. The fairness of her forehead at first became a dark olive hue, and assuming a charred blackness, the skin burst over the quivering veins. Her cheeks soon was bereaved of all blush and beauty, and her lips if they had any similitude of fruit partook less of the rowan than the sloe. She endeavored to allay the pain by averting her head from the vapor; but the evasion only increased her agony, for her neck, upon which drops of the sulphur chrystalized, became acutely sensitive of the weight of a string of pearls. One by one she removed them from the smartened flesh but the clasp behind had sunk so deep that its withdrawal gave her torture intensely severe.

With inconceivable effort she preserved herself from insensibility, and with copious draughts of water allayed the burning fever in her throat. Her voice lost its sweetness, and she expressed her grief in such harshness and monotony that she started from her seat as the clock struck twelve.—As peal after peal swept dismally along she tottered to the door which she opened, and groping her way along the walls, for her eyes were dim, searched for hood and bells which also shook. The perch reeled backwards and forwards, as the hawk on it flapped its wings and screamed so loudly at the sound of its favorite emblems of chase, that the chamber rang with its screams.

The King who had been walking in the corridor approached, hearing in one hand a chamber lamp and in the other a scabbardless sword. Ellen mustered sufficient strength to speak, for obscurely he saw that something was amiss, and he inquired the cause.

I will tell my lord said she, and the screaming hawk possessed at diver shadows as if they were its prey. Alas! there was now occasion to cast down her eyes, for little of their lustre remained.

My lord, had I hearkened to your suit, my father's welcome had been paid with wrong, and your Majesty's chivalry being more eclipsed than my charms could brighten. Happily a brief pain has preserved your honor.

O infatuated, yet noble minded girl, what hast thou done? exclaimed he, putting down the lamp and sword, and covering his face with his hands. Why didst not thou intimate thy heroic resolve, and the possession of worlds would not have made us ruin that loneliness which kingdoms can never repair.

You would have called it mad sick martyrdom, or coquetry run mad, or epithets equally fantastical, said she, pressing her hand to her bosom.

Stay, there is yet hope. The injury thou hast inflicted is not irreparable, cried he, rushing to arouse the household, when she beckoned him back.

I pray your Majesty be calm, said she, the worst is past.

O heavens, how heartless! we seem to be the cause of all this wrack. O Ellen, canst thou forgive thy destroyer?

Indeed I can; far better be thus than be a tarnished thing cast away for maids to loath and men to scorn me. Now the worst they can say of me is that I spoiled myself of a questionable good to escape a dread evil.

And what will they say of me dear Ellen?

That the good King Francis once upon a time meeting a poor plain girl in an obscure town, was so blinded with strange love that she saw no way to restore him to sight but to lose her own.

Gracious and all mysterious God, exclaimed he, appall'ed, thou dost not say thou art blind?

In sooth, such is my fear. Give me your hand, and I'll determine whether there is water in the well-spring of the brain, said she, with touching tenderness; and she shed a tear which he kissed away as he endeavored to examine his palm.

Ellen, Ellen, say thou canst see, and make me happy! exclaimed the agonized monarch, falling on his knees, and resting his head against her breast.

All is dark, my Leige.

All, Ellen?

Yes, my Liege.

O say not so. Say there is yet a little light.

And so there is Lord Francis; a little light that misled me into—?

Love, Ellen?

'Tis so, Lord Francis.

For whom, Ellen? Thou tremblest. I know all.

Then if you do, why do you ask, Lord Francis?

Ellen, thou lovest him who would have been thy base undoer.

'Tis so my Lord.

O, torture, worst of all, and Ellen's blind! and her tears fell plenteously on his upturned face, while he continued to ejaculate.—"And she is blind, O! and who will love her now?

Won't you my dear Lord Francis, love me as though I was a dear sister long since dead?

Dearest sister, I will, said he, kissing her hands fervently. Sister Ellen, I will and never till now knew Francis love so pure, so lasting.

Eh! yon keen crucible hath burned away all drossines, said she, moving her hand over the chafing dish. 'Tis with life, as with this episode of an hour. Nothing in the way of virtue was ever obtained without pain. To horse, Lord Francis, and whenever you pray remember Ellen Ingeverie.

And must we part thus, more dearly loved and doubly fair.

Yes and rejoice that no guilty blush crimson my cheek, nor criminal throb upbraid my heart for beating, replied she, as the hawk uttered such a piercing series of screams, that first her attendant, and then others, and finally retainers and revellers, rushed into or surrounded the room, where they discovered the sovreign surnamed "The restorer of Learning, and the Great," deprived of forethought and firmness of mind.

The most skillful leeches the town or court could afford were summoned; but their aid was only of partial avail. Facial beauty had forever bade farewell to her whose self-control was worthy of the best days of chivalry. Eyebrightness had not, however, departed; and in the gray mist of the morn she saw her lover depart never to return.

In after life he was wont to say, that throughout his glorious career of war and peace he had met only two human beings eminently great—one, the famous Bayard, the poor captain of a few lancers the chevalier sans reproach, from whose sword Francis sought and received knighthood as earth's greatest honour, and the other the humble and lovely Ellen, who had taught him that love without purity is dishonor, and charms without virtue is shame.

At a Sunday School examination the teacher asked a boy whether he could forgive those who wronged him. "Could you forgive a boy, for example, who had insulted or struck you?" said the teacher.

"Y-e-e-s, sir," drawled out the lad very slowly, "I think,—I—could, if he was bigger than I am."

The Largest Farm in the World.

(From the Scientific American.)

I observed a note in your last issue of an 8,000 acre farm, in Bureau county, Illinois, and Mr. A. S. Alexander's farm in Morgan county, Illinois, both of which will pass for fair-sized Illinois farms. But the farm which is, no doubt, the largest cultivated farm in the world, and, I believe the best, is owned and cultivated by M. L. Sullivan, Esq., formerly from the vicinity of Columbus, Ohio, now of Champaign county, Illinois. He owns and presides over 70,000 acres of the best land on this hemisphere, 23,000 acres of which are under fence, and in actual improvement and cultivation; the balance is used for herding. I will venture the opinion there cannot be found five acres of unserticeable land in Mr. Sullevan's entire 70,000. Its productiveness is unsurpassed. Almost all of Mr. S's farming is conducted by labor-saving machinery, so that it is estimated that throughout, one man will perform the average labour of four or five, as conducted on small farms. He drives his pests by horse power; breaks his ground by Comstock's spades; mows, rakes, loads, unloads and stacks his hay by horse power; cultivate his corn by improved machinery, ditches any low ground by machinery, so that all his labourers can ride and perform tasks as easy as riding in a buggy. I had the pleasure of being present when he harvested a thousand acres of his wheat; this was done with ——'s 'Header's,' about eight or ten men and twenty horses cut and safely stacked away about 200 acres a day, and performed the work better than I ever saw it by the old modes. To give all the improved modes of agriculture would require more space than you would like to spare. Notwithstanding all this labour-saving machinery, Mr. S. employs from one to two hundred labourers, some two hundred horses and mules, and a large herd of working oxen.

FAITHFUL AND WISE.

The following anecdote of Richard Weaver, the well-known evangelist of England, is a striking illustration of what tact and faithfulness can do in winning souls:

In a railway carriage a navvy was swearing terribly. The guard, knowing Richard's habit of speaking to every one, whispered to him, "Better let him alone; he is so violent that he would strike you if his passion were raised."

Richard got close to him and said, "Give me your hand, my friend." He then whispered into his ear, "Why are you calling on my Father?"

"I know nothing of your father," answered the swearer.

"I'll tell you his name and character," said Richard, and then he repeated the text, "God so loved the world," &c., and enlarged upon it.

As if struck by sudden conviction, the man answered, "These were the last words my mother said to me." "Then let us pray," said Richard, "that God may make them then the means of your salvation."—They did so, and Richard, long after met him a changed man.

A Terrible Secret about False Hair.

To Mr. J. S. Mill, member for the borough of Westminister, London, the public is indebted for the information that hair is false, if ladies are not; that it is a matter of large trade, and bought and sold as the "touch," or more commonly speaking, churchyard hair. The dealer draws attention to the fact with pride, that it has not been cut but drawn from nature with the bulb intact. Sometimes this class of hair comes to market with pieces of scalp-skin at the end. How this hair is obtained is a mystery the trade does not care to fathom, but it comes from the dead men and dead women, for hair is almost indestructable.—The beautiful wig of auburn hair now in the British Museum, London, had lain in the tomb of a Theban mummy for upwards of 2,000 years before it found its way to the national collection, yet the hair is as fresh as though it had just come from the hands of the hair-dresser, and the curl is so strong that it cannot be taken out even by the application of heat. Churchyard hair is brought into market by bones as well as foreign collectors. There can be little doubt, that the majority of the long English tresses come from the heads of criminals. If it is necessary, the charming locks of our fair ones should be supplemented from this source, they should at least be informed they are neither obtained without oaths, prayers, and blasphemous imprecations upon the despoilers, which the belles little dream of as these purchased tresses dance pendulous on their Botanic Gardens' neck. Such is the mercantile information which we obtain upon good authority and we are sure that the reflections it suggests will add to the pleasure of the spectator or the pleasure of the wearer, who, faute de mieux, or in the absence of equal luxuriance of tresses, has recourse to merchandise.

A CALCULATING WIFE.—A husband, with a matter of fact wife contributes this to the Drawer:—I was riding out the other evening with my wife, who has not a particle of poetry in her composition.—Calling her attention to some clouds, I dilated on their beauty. She looked at them attentively, and I hoped that I was producing an impression. At last she spoke, and I listened. She seemed very thoughtful. "Yes; I'd like a pattern of a new silk dress just like them." I was confounded and silent, while she continued, with a sigh:—"But such a dress would cost all of five dollars a yard, and I don't know but more." I spoke to my horse and trotted on. I feared that the next thing she would ask me for would be money, she is so practical.

A thrifty young man married a rosy young Irish girl, quite to the horror of his mother and sisters, but he stoutly defended himself by the following logic:—"If I marry an American girl, I must have an Irish girl to take care of her and I can't afford to keep both."

The London Times thus compares the two guns, the Prussian needle gun and the English Snider Enfield:

"As compared with the Prussian needle-gun the efficiency of the English breech-loader is nearly four times greater in all that relates to accuracy of aim or rapidity of fire, while as regards the safety and ease with which the breech mechanism is worked, it is beyond any degree of comparison. There are eight distinct movements of the breech required to load and fire the needle-gun—there are only four necessary in Mr. Snider's. Seven rounds per minute have been fired from the Prussian gun, and the average is four; while twenty-one rounds per minute have been fired from the English breech-loaders, and the average it is believed, will be ten."

The troops under orders for Canada are armed with this rifle, and 40,000 of the same kind are being prepared for our Volunteers.—Ottawa Citizen.

NUMBER OF BOOKS IN THE BIBLE.—How many books are there in the Old Testament? How many in the New?—The following simple rule, if remembered, will always enable any one to answer these questions. three is the smallest sacred number. Multiply 3 into itself 3x3=9.—Set this at the right hand of 3 thus, 39.—Thus you have 39 books in the Old Testament. Multiply these two figures together 3x9=27, the number of books in the New Testament.

THE COMMERCIAL VALUE OF HARD AND SOFT WATER.—The water with which the city of London is now supplied varies in hardness from 12 to 27 degrees, while that obtained by Glasgow from Loch Katrine is only 8·10ths, or almost absolutely soft. Each degree of hardness destroys 2½ ounces of soap in each 100 gallons of water used for washing. Therefore soft water is commercially of more value than hard water. It is supposed that the saving of soap in Glasgow by the introduction of Loch Katrine water amounts to £40,000 per annum; and could London be supplied with soft water the saving would be £400,000.

CATHOLICISM AND THE NEEDLE-GUN.—A letter from Rome in L'Opinione Nationale asserts that the needle-gun was nearly adopted in the Papal army, when a cardinal observed, "as the weapon in question had not been used in any Catholic army, it was not for Rome to show too much eagerness in an invention with which the Lutherans had been inspired by the Prince of Darkness."

GENEROSITY OF LOUIS NAPOLEON.—A story is current that as Napoleon III. was this year leaving Vichy, he called for Leon, his old valet, and having a sealed packet to him, said that the parcel contained the title deeds of the chalet and grounds he had just quitted, and which the Emperor had inhabited during his successive visits. "You are landlord now," said his master to Leon; and I hope you will accept me next year as a tenant at the rate of twenty thousand francs rent. I shall pay regularly."

NOTHING TO WEAR.

From the New York Herald.

We publish this morning a most extraordinary document, that will pass into history and be quoted by authors, moralists, satirists, philosophers, reformers and moralizers all over the world. The debasement in question is an authentic schedule of the wardrobe of a young lady in this city in the year of grace. It came into our possession in a perfectly legitimate but very curious manner. The lady in the daughter of a professional gentleman, well known by his extensive advertisements, and her wardrobe was destroyed by a recent fire. Her father had effected an insurance upon this valuable property, however, and applied to the company for the money. The company, professing to be astounded at the amount demanded, resisted the claim, and the case was carried into court. The list of articles consumed or injured is one of the necessary papers in the case, and was drawn up under the direction of the young lady herself.

It is very easy to say that a wardrobe like that enumerated in this schedule is extravagant; but the fact is that the list scarcely gives a full idea of the extravagance of American toilettes. Twenty-one thousand dollars is an immense sum to have invested in clothing; but it must be remembered that the original cost of these articles was much more than twenty-one thousand dollars. Many of the dresses, shawls, bonnets and other portions of the young lady's costumes, had been more or less worn, and the prices affixed only represents their value at the time they were burned, which is all the loser has the right to recover.—For example, "nine pairs of boots and shoes" would be very cheap at $45; a "dust wrapper from Cashmere" could hardly be purchased for $18; "four magnificent opera cloaks" are valued at $175, when one of them would have cost that sum if new; cloth cloaks at $8, $10 and $12 must have been used to be worth only that amount of money. No fashionable milliner could sell "four bonnets, some exceedingly elegant," for $100, but would charge as much as much for one elegant bonnet.—It is evident, then, that to get at the real cost of the wardrobe of a young lady of fashion in this metropolis we must add several thousand dollars to the amount claimed. The articles when first purchased must have cost $30,000 at least.

We learn from this schedule that to make a figure in the fashionable world a young lady requires twenty-six robes of silk and satin, two of velvet, twenty four dresses of poplin, cashmere, grenadine and Swiss and India muslin, with underskirts and bodices of silk; nine jackets to wear over these dresses in the course, seventeen cloaks, mantillas and capes for out-door wear; fifteen muslin skirts, besides the underskirts already enumerated; twenty-one sets of flounces and capes of lace, of all qualities, from Honiton to Maltese; and, in addition to all these, a quantity of worn dresses, cloaks and jackets too numerous to mention and too comparatively insignificant to be estimated. We must take into consideration, however, the fact that the lady was probably not deprived of all her clothing by the fire. The schedule shows what she lost, but we have no means of ascertaining what she saved. Yet it is only by getting at this unknown quantity, that we shall be able to realize the full extent of the young lady's requirements. At present we really feel that she has to publish does her some injustice. Twenty-six silk robes and twenty-four other dresses would not satisfy any but the most reasonable and economical Flora McFlimsey. There are houses in the Fifth avenue that could reveal much more extensive wardrobes.—The jewels and jewelry, too, which cost more heavily than dresses, as many a husband and father knows, are not set down in this list, which must consequently be pronounced inadequate. Still it will serve to convey to the uninitiated and to posterity some conception of the expenses of an American fashionable life.

BAD TREATMENT.

From the Stratford Beacon.

There is no use in disguising the fact that it took a vast amount of persuasion last week to get our Stratford Companies once more on the tramp for frontier service. Now, if we may credit the reports in the daily papers, was this backwardness peculiar to Stratford. The volunteers in other places were quite as reluctant to respond to the call. So unpopular had the idea of going to the front become on the part of our own men, that thought on former occasions the order was received with enthusiasm—even begged as a favor—at the time appointed on Friday morning for the departure of the special train, not more than 20 or 30 of both companies could be got together, and when they left in the afternoon all the drumming up in the interval had failed to bring out more than from sixty or seventy—just enough for one good company. It is notorious that rather than serve again, many of our most industrious young men went off—"deserted" to the United States.

This is not a good story to tell. But why keep back the truth? It is all the talk in our own little community. And it is better to out with it, and endeavor to seek a cause for so extraordinary a state of things, than to try to hush it up and let the evil spread. Why is it that the volunteer service has in so short a time become so unpopular? Is a word, it is bad treatment. The men complain that they are treated more like dogs than persons who willingly leave their comfortable homes in the hour of their country's need. Hardships and privation they expect to bear in time of actual conflict; but they ask, and rightly, too, what is there against volunteering, which should not entitle them, at the hands of a well-to-do Province, to at least as clean and good bedding as a man would give his horse, or to food fit only for the swill tub? Both we are assured, were their portion during their western campaign. Furthermore, they assert, that "shaves" of all kinds were practised upon them by contractors—that they had to pay, out of their slender allowance, for things which they never got, and for damage to barracks which were never sustained.

But there is another cause of dissatisfaction. There is anything but a cordial feeling between the men and their officers.—Rightly or wrongly, the men complained that their officers treat them with the hauteur sometimes shown by those in the regular service to soldiers of the line. They say that advantage is taken of their position to heap needless indignity upon them. If this be so, it is no evidence of weak-mindedness. In the volunteer service, Jack, socially speaking, is as good as his master, and often a good deal better. The men in the ranks are entitled to be looked upon by the officers rather as companions to arms than as "common soldiers." It is all nonsense to suppose that there is a want of discipline and a loss of efficiency by any of this conduct. The man's pride will not suffer degradation, and it does not become the officers to submit them to it. The private soldiers are indoctrinated with the idea that it is as honorable to carry a rifle as to wear a sword. It may not be so profitable; but they are willing to forgo the dollars, and it comes doubly hard if they receive instead an extra number of kicks.

We hope these concerned will look to these things, and endeavour to make themselves and the service a little more popular.

Important to Counsellors.

The following case was reported in the Globe of Thursday last and affords something useful for councillors:—

'In Re Blaikie and the Corporation of the Township of Hamilton—Municipal Law—Councillor's pay.

'Mr. Hector last term to quash a by-law of this township passed on the 8th of January, 1866 by which an allowance of $20 for services as Councillors, and $10 for services in reference to road contracts, was granted to each Councillor for the previous year, on the ground that any such allowances was illegal and beyond the powers of the Council. The rate was enlarged until this Term, when Mr. Christopher Patterson showed cause and contended that, as the Council had the power under the Municipal Act to pass a by-law fixed the rate of pay not exceeding $1.50 for each day's attendance at the sessions Council, the allowance of $20 a year could be sustained, even if that of $10 was illegal.—The Court, however, after argument, quashed the by-law as illegal, with costs, holding that the authority given by the Municipal Act to the Council to pay public money to themselves must be strictly followed, and that they can only pay to themselves compensation at the rate not exceeding $1.50 per day for each day's necessary attendance at the ordinary session of the Council.'

A FAIR IMPOSTOR.—A young woman of pleasing appearance and neatly attired, was given in custody of the police this morning, for protection, she being without friends in the city, and evidently afflicted with some hallucination. About ten days since she visited the Deaf and Dumb Institute, and was temporarily admitted, on the supposition that she was a deaf mute. At this establishment she played her role admirably, conversing in the language of signs with ease and dexterity; but yesterday a clerical gentleman happening to be in the Institute, she thought proper to unbosom herself to him audibly, and forthwith she recovered her power of speech and hearing to a perfect degree, appearing quite jocular over the success of her imposition. The young woman is about nineteen or twenty years of age, and gives evidence of cultivation and refinement. She converses fluently in French or English, and exhibits wonderful shrewdness, declining to give any account of herself and carefully guarding her conversation. In reply to enquiries she answers that she is anxious to see life for a time, when she will return to her home.

The young woman referred to above is supposed to be from the Lower Province, and from what remarks she has carelessly dropped, she is the daughter of a lawyer; her mother is dead, and she has a brother and sister younger than herself.—Hamilton Times, 13th

At the Kingston Dinner, Mr. John A. Macdonald took occasion to express his admiration of the American Government, who had acted 'nobly' in quelling the Fenian invasion. He proposed the toast of "Friends on the other side of the lines,' and coupled with it the name of Mr. Hurlburt, of the New York World. The World was at the time of the raid in June na organ of the Fenians, and probably Mr. Hurlburt wrote some of the articles in which the scoundrels were urged on to imbrue their hands in the blood of the best citizens of this Province. Under such circumstances, the compliments paid to him are utterly out of place. We can tell Mr. Hurlburt and his confreres, who are now stimulating the blood-thirsty scoundrels to a fresh attack on Canada, that the people of this country are not in a humor for paying him compliments.—Globe.

Mr. Macdonald could not possibly have known the antecedents of this Mr. Hurlburt, as he would not certainly have sullied his mouth with so utterance of the fellows name. He probably got introduced to Mr. Macdonald at Niagara Falls, and ingratiating himself into his confidence, accompanied him down to Kingston, when Mr. Macdonald thinking him to be a good fellow, made the mistake of coupling his name with the Toast in honor of the United States Government.—Whig.

'THE LAND OF LIBERTY.'—A statement appears in the Hamilton Times of Tuesday, to the effect that an excursion party from London to Cleveland, by the City of London, on Friday last, were insulted and annoyed by a number of Fenians on their arrival at the latter place.

The Fenians showed their good intentions by brandishing loaded revolvers and making loud threats, and on Saturday morning gathered in force. In the afternoon the U. S. Marshall advised the captain to leave the city in order to prevent a disturbance, and this he felt compelled to do notwithstanding that a heavy storm prevailed at the time. We can scarcely bring ourselves to believe that a harmless excursion party, consisting of men, women and children, should be thus compelled to put to sea in a storm. The 'land of liberty' is a free country, with a vengeance, when a band of lawless men can do just as they please.—It speaks very little for the credit of the Americans, and shows the power wielded by the Fenian cut throats.

The Quebec News says: "We hear that Mr. Tibbits' steamer Artic has been purchased by the Imperial government, to be used as a gunboat on the western lakes. While we regret that we are about to lose the very best boat of her class on our waters, and the only one that we have to depend on for a winter ferry, we cannot but congratulate Mr. Tibbitts, and the tradesmen who built her; for the high opinion entertained of her qualities by the naval authorities. She was inspected on Friday afternoon by the commander of H. M. S. Aurora, and by the chief-engineer, sailing-master, and master-carpenter of the same vessel, and thoroughly overhauled. The report is highly favorable to the qualities of the Artic. On the trial trip she steamed fifteen knots an hour, which is an excellent average speed for a vessel of her size.—We have not heard the price obtained for her."

The Bill suspending the issue of writs for the approaching Legislative Council elections, to the 7th day of July, 1867, was reserved by His Excellency until Her Majesty's pleasure could be known in the premises. She Secretary of State for the Colonies has informed our government, via the Atlantic Cable, that the Royal Sanction will forthwith be given to the measure.

It is stated that Dr. Kirwin, of Quebec, has been commissioned by Lord Monck to purchase a thousand horses in Canada on account of the Imperial Government, for the use of the Hussars and Artillery soon to arrive.

The Miantanomah.

We are gradually beginning to find out the truth with regard to the wonderful American monitor over which the London Times went into such ecstacies of wonder and admiration. The fact of her guns having knocked a hole in her turret by their recoil at the first discharge was made public by the Duke of Somerset, and now the United States Army and Navy Journal very succinctly lets out another morsel of considerable importance with respect to the Miantanomah. It appears that when she arrived in England and her great success as a seagoing vessel was first announced, the captain and officers omitted to mention that the two large and powerful steamers which accompanied her were employed in towing her nearly the whole distance, and did not cut loose until almost within sight of land! The fact that these American turret vessels are obliged to have one or two wooden ships to take care of them, shows that they are not of much value for any other purpose than coast defences, and the serious terror which some persons in England have manifested relative to the ironclad fleets of other nations seems altogether groundless.

FAILURE OF THE BANK OF UPPER CANADA.—Rumors have been afloat concerning the Bank of Upper Canada for some days, and brokers have for two days declined to take its bills. They were, however, redeemed at the agency here, and, therefore, we could say nothing concerning it. To-day, we understand, a telegram has been received in town announcing that the head office of the Bank of Upper Canada in Toronto had closed its doors. This bank has long been laboring under difficulties caused chiefly by its connection with the Government of the Province.

While we will be obliged to decline receiving the notes of this Bank, we would at the same time caution our readers not to part with them at a very low rate, as some have already done. The stock was last quoted at 10 per cent., and all that must disappear, as of course it will, before creditors can lose anything. Then, again, stock-holders are liable for double the amount of their stock, which should surely secure all creditors in full.—Montreal Witness.

The oldest inhabitant probably does not remember such a long continuance of wet weather in harvest time as we have had this year. There were, it is said, only eleven days in August in which it did not rain, and up to this (13th of September) it may almost be said, "The rain it raineth every day." Scotland has generally been considered to have a very wet climate, but we doubt if it is more so than that of Lower Canada has been for the past six or seven weeks. Great loss must result from these almost continuous rains at this critical season.—Montreal Witness.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.—A strange rumor comes from Rome to the effect that a conspiracy to poison the Emperor of the French at Vichy was discovered before he left that place. The poison was to have been administered in a potion which the Emperor was accustomed to drink after his bath. It is asserted that a man named Valentine was to have carried this design into effect, but when it was discovered through a warning letter sent by one of the conspirators in Rome to the Emperor, Valentine committed suicide.

THE NEW INVASION OF CANADA.—The plan of the new invasion is to sail from the American shores of Lake Huron, land somewhere on the Georgian Bay, and thence march to the rear of Toronto, while an insurrection in Toronto and other co-operative movements are made along the frontier. The time fixed for the expected demonstration is between the 20th and 25th inst, about which time a provincial exhibition is to be held in Toronto, the attendance at which will crowd the avenues of travel and the city, rendering strangers less noticeable.—N. Y. Herald.

CONFEDERATION.—The London Morning Post in its city article says the British Government have not only agreed to an Imperial guarantee for the £4,400,000 loan required for the British North American Confederation, but have also consented to guarantee a further sum for the purchase by Canada of the Hudson Bay territory, which it is considered should be included in the confederation.

There are a number of rather suspicious looking visitors in Montreal, not at all like the usual run of American travellers.—What their object is, we know not, but the police have doubtless an eye on them.—Montreal Witness 15th.

FRENCH SCHOOL OF MEDICINE.—We understand that this institution has been affiliated with the University of Victoria College, Coburg, which gives it all the advantages enjoyed by the other medical schools.—Daily Review.

An English Lord, sitting in the telegraph office in London, had his cigar lit by an electric spark from the Lord's Content Newfoundland. It cost him two hundred guineas.

DREADFUL SUFFERING AT SEA.—A private letter from Mr. Henry Furgason, published in the Stamford (Connecticut) Advocate, gives an account of the remarkable sufferings of the crew of the clipper ship Horset, bound from New York to Sanfrancisco. On the 3d of May the vessel crossed the equator, and was within three days sail of San Francisco, when some varnish ignited in an open lamp, and in a few minutes. There was no chance of saving her, and the crew, numbering 31, manned three boats, and put in provisions for ten or twelve days. They continued together from the 3d till the 19th of the month, and finding it impossible to tow their boats any longer, they seperated, and the boat which Mr. Furguson was in headed for Clarion Island, latitude 18 12 north, longitude 114, but trade winds, instead of coming from the east, came from the north, accompanied with such a sea that it would have been suicide to beat against it. On the 30th they gave up looking for this island, and changed their course for the westward, looking for a cluster of islands which was laid down as "doubtful." By this time their provisions had nearly given out, and they were obliged to depend considerably on such fish and birds as they could catch. After spending nearly a week in looking for these islands without success, they shaped their course for Hawaii, a distance of nearly a thousand miles, with little more than a knuckle of ham and one can of "soup and bouille."—During the last four days their sufferings were very great, and during that time they had nothing but two gills of water, and such nourishment as they could extract from greasy rags and boot leather. On Friday, June 13th, after 41 days exposure to a tropical sun, storm and starvation, they saw land, and in the afternoon landed at a little settlement of natives at Laupahoehoe, in the island of Hawaii. At the time they landed, the crew, 14 in number, were very weak, and could hardly move, but they were met with kind attention, and were fast regaining strength.

Eight cases of cholera, two of which were fatal, were reported in New York on the 17th instant.

HOME GUARDS.

We are pleased to see that our worthy Sheriff has taken the matter of Home Guards in hands, and has got a huge array of names to his list to form themselves into a body of Home Guards for the protection of property, &c., in case our Volunteers should be called away on duty. A meeting was held on Monday evening and officers appointed, so as to have some kind of organization. Col. Haultain was chosen Captain, A. Smith, Esq., Bank of Toronto, Lieutenant, and Jas. Dixon, Esq., Ensign. The officers agreed to find out the most convenient method of obtaining arms and of getting acknowledged by the government so as to be able to drill and of thus forming a permanent association for drill and home defence. The men have agreed to meet twice a week for drill as soon as acknowledged. It is needless to remark, that until acknowledged by the government, nothing but the most pressing necessity and danger should induce us to run in the face of law and order. We trust, however, that there will be no delay on the part of the government in placing us in a position to defend our homes and families, and this the sooner since it will cost the country very little. This, too, is a successful way of training men for emergencies; all who join this Home Guard association may not wish to be called away from home, nay, many of them might be useless in a campaign, yet these may be very useful in the association to keep it together, and also to encourage the matter. Some, however, and not a few perhaps, would willingly go to the front if their services should be required, and certainly this would be a cheap way of getting such men drilled and ready for the field. These things should weigh with the government in obtaining acknowledgment of such an association—the name is of small moment—and also in affording encouragement by way of supplying us with arms for training purposes. If the government will not supply arms, let them permit the men to supply themselves, and we believe, this many would do at once if allowed to do so. We trust by next week to be able to chronicle the agreeable intelligence that this commendable spirit of our citizens has met with a suitable response.

AGRICULTURAL.

THE COUNTY Agricultural Show will be held at Lakefield, on the 11th October.

THE DUMMER & DOURO Agricultural Exhibition will be held at the Village of Warsaw, on the 16th October.

THE OTONABEE Show will be held on the 20th Octo'er, at the Village of Keene.

THE EAST DURHAM Agricultural Show will be held at Millbrook during the second week of October. It will, therefore, be the same week as our County show. It is difficult to avoid this clashing; nevertheless, it is a pity that it does take place, as, Millbrook being so near, if proper arrangements had been made, no doubt, many of our farmers would have gone down, if for no other purpose than to compare notes with the farmers, &c., of East Durham.

THE SOUTH MONAGHAN Show will be held at Bloomfield, on the 15th October; and, as this is a prosperous little Township, a good exhibition may be expected. There is another thing in relation to this Township; it is to be attached to the west part of this County, for representative purposes, and this would be a favorable opportunity for our farmers to get acquainted with each other, now they could, in the most friendly manner, talk of the noble and peaceful avocation of tilling the ground, and thus be preparing to discuss in a friendly manner the great political questions that have arisen or may yet arise, when the time for such discussion shall come.

School Examinations and Pic-Nics.

Through the united liberality of the Hon. Billa Flint, and the councils of North Monaghan and Smith, aided by the government, prizes to the amount of $40, for each township have been provided, and there will be competitive examinations for the prizes on the following days: In North Monaghan, on the 4th of October, and in Smith, on the 5th of October. In connection with each examination and distribution of prizes, we believe it is the intention of parents of the children in each township respectively, to have a pic-nic, the same day as the examination. The pic-nic in Smith, will be held at Bridgenorth, and the friends in the immediate neighborhood will be expected to do their part in providing seats, swings, &c.

The North Monaghan pic-nic, will be at the Cherry Orchard, about a mile and a half from the town. We may state here the reasons for selecting this place. 1st, It is a very suitable place. 2nd, the friends of Ed. ucation in the immediate neighborhood agree to erect seats, provide fire, water, kettles, swings, &c., and 3rd, the people in the northern sections say that in view of the fact that the eastern section is not so well supplied with means of conveyance as the other sections, they wish to bring the pic-nic as near that section, as possible. These reasons we hope will prove satisfactory to all for the present. If there should be another pic-nic next year, it can be held nearer the centre, or more southward, to suit the southern section.

Failure of the Bank of Upper Canada.

On Tuesday, the above Bank suspended payment, in consequence of the other provincial Banks refusing to take the Bank of Upper Canada bills. Some of the banks the Leader says, would have aided the failing bank, but on learning that all the agencies of the Bank of Montreal, had received orders not to take the bills, all the banks thereupon refused them.

The following statement the Leader sets forth as an approximate statement of the affairs of the bank at the present time:—

LIABILITIES.

Circulation	$ 750,000
Balances due on current accounts	200,000
Deposits on interest	350,000
Due the Government	1,300,000
Total	$2,650,000

ASSETS.

Specie	$ 100,000
Real Estate	1,050,000
Government Debentures	196,000
Notes Discounted	2,450,000
Mortgage, &c.	80,000
Total	$4,456,000

For the sake of contrast we give the statement furnished to the government in July last. The public should be in possession of the August statement by this time were it not for the unaccountable delay in publishing the returns. The July statement is as follows:—

LIABILITIES.

Circulation	$ 969,056
Deposits not bearing interest	677,102
" bearing interest	1,809,748
Balances due to other banks	359,770
Total	$3,736,676

ASSETS.

Specie	$ 367,044
Real Estate	1,232,268
Notes or bills of other banks	84,152
Balance due from other banks	22,969
Discounts	2,631,196
Other debts not included under the foregoing heads	894,295
Total	$5,736,676

Since the date of this statement both assets and liabilities have been reduced but the relative position is much the same as will appear on comparison.

It is hoped, however, that all the creditors of the Bank will be paid in full. Shareholders, it is believed, will be the only serious losers.

The failure of this Bank, however, will not effect any of the other Banks. Parties holding Bank of Upper Canada notes need not be much alarmed, as they will in all probability be worth the face of them yet.

FENIANISM.

There are no new revelations concerning the great humbug Fenanism. Threats, of course, are still being made, preparations are still going on, but nothing very definite is yet being done by them. The wholesome dread that they have of meeting red coats may deter them from their threatened invasion this fall. The gun-boats that are placed on our waters will aid materially in keeping up that dread. As soon as the fall elections are over American sympathy will in some degree be withdrawn, and there will be a cooling of their ardor for a while. Their money must by this time be scarce hence the probability is that there will be no attack. It is well, however, to be ready for whatever may come. There can be no doubt but that the American people are siding and abetting their designs, with the intent of bringing about annexation, but in this, they will find themselves mistaken. We know too much of our American neighbors to seek an alliance with them just now.

School Pic-nic in Otonabee.

Through the liberality of the Trustees of School Section, No. 10, Otonabee, a large number of prizes was given to the most advanced and industrious pupils of the school, in said section. The distribution of prizes took place on the forenoon of Tuesday last. In the afternoon the children of this School and the pupils of School Section, No. 16 united and had an excellent pic-nic. We had the pleasure of being present in the afternoon and of enjoying the rich treat provided, in the various exercises of the children of the two schools, and the good things provided by the ladies of that locality. The pic-nic was held in a very nice piece of woods belonging to Mr. Richard Stewart. A substantial platform was erected for the children to stand on, of these there were about 60 present, besides a large number of parents and friends, and the trustees. Under the direction of the teachers, Miss Susanna Dowling and Miss Maria Dowling, the children sung several pieces, the singing was principally by the girls. But the following boys, viz:—Masters G. H. Savigny, C. Matchet, George Hayter, W. Hales, James Fannon, John Fannon and Richard Stewart recited some pieces in a very clear, distinct and intelligent manner, for boys of their age.

After these exercises all present sat down to a most sumptuous preparation of every imaginable good thing, and to these ample justice was done indeed. Swinging, running, laughing and sports of various kinds succeeded until approaching night warned all to retire. The whole affair passed off in the most agreeable manner. Teachers, children, parents and spectators appeared delighted with the first school pic-nic in that part; and from its successful beginning and ending we may almost predict that it will not be their last. The singing of the girls (can the boys not sing?) and the recitations of the boys, together with the pleasant associations formed on such occasions are worth being cultivated and encouraged.

Church Opening.

A new Presbyterian Church in North Smith, in connexion with the labors of the Rev. Mr. Thom, of Lakefield, will be opened for Divine Service on Sunday next. The Rev. John Smith of Bowmanville will preach at 10 30, a.m.; the Rev. James Thom, at 2.30, p.m.; and the Rev. John Gilmour, at 6.30. A soiree will be held in the Church on Monday, tea will be at 3 o'clock, after which it is expected that the Revs. J. Smith, J. Gilmour, J. H. Thom, W. Sheridan, W. Blain and Jas. Thom will deliver addresses. From the array of talent thus set forth, a good time may be expected. We trust that many will avail themselves of the opportunity and attend the meetings. The cause, too, is a good one, and one in which the whole neighborhood should unite. It is needless for us to say, that among the speakers, are some of the best in the Province.

HORRIBLE MURDER.—A murder is supposed to have taken place at Caughnawaga, and the murderer is believed to have burned the body of his victim in a lime-kiln. The supposed murderer is named Wilson, and was son-in-law to the man whom he is accused of killing. Wilson is now in jail in Montreal, awaiting his trial.

Leader Correspondence.

A most outrageous correspondence appeared in the Leader of Tuesday, last, anent the subject of electing a coadjutor Bishop, the writer compared this whole to a horse race, and went so far as to name the candidates as "Bishop of Brantford's wh. m.," "Cobourg Lass," another "Pontiac Mare," "The Badger," &c. It is a matter of surprise that so respectable a journal would allow such a scurrilous thing to appear in it. Religious denominations have a perfect right to select their officers in whatever way seems best to each denomination; but more especially have Episcopalians that right, without being lampooned, because of the respectibility of that body, and because of the decent and orderly manner in which it has generally conducted its business, and no doubt will conduct the present election of Bishop. We understand that the candidates are, Dr. Bethune, Cobourg; Dr. Grassett, Dr. Fuller and Provost Whittaker, Toronto.

We were unable, up to going to press to obtain a copy of the last cases of the late court sittings. We can inform our readers, however, that in the Walker McGregor tarring and feathering case all the accused were acquitted. Let us hope that the trouble they have been put to, to defend themselves, will have a salutary effect in the County, and prevent any violation of law in the same way again. No matter how any man may outrage the common decencies of society, no set of men have a right to take the punishment of crime into their own hands. There is one thing that will be satisfactory for the Jurors who acquitted the accused to know that is is generally believed that all the accused were innocent, and that the perpetrators really came from a distance for the purpose. For the honor of the County it would be well if no such case should again trouble our courts, and that no cause for "tarring and feathering" should ever again present itself.

The case of Hills, for cutting and maiming Clydesles was postponed to the assizes.

The Weather.

The weather here has been exceedingly unpropitious for the last two weeks; almost every day has had its showers, and on several days there have been complete down-pourings. The great weight of the crops, however, is safely stored away—except some oats and peas. Through Ops and Mariposa we learn that there are large quantites of both wheat and oats out yet. The weather, also, has prevented the getting in of the fall wheat as early as usual. In other parts, but especially in Lower Canada, the wet is doing much harm, causing some of the crops to rot in the ground.

ARSON.

On Saturday morning last, Henry James Inisworth, was charged before A. C. Dunlop, Esq., of Ashburnham, with setting fire to the house of Mr. Gregor McGregor, on the night of the 14th inst. Inisworth had threatened to destroy the property, and was found in the yard just before, and also at the commencement of the fire. The fire, however, was fortunately put out without much damage. Inisworth was sent up for trial at next court, and the prosecutors bound over to attend against him.

Notice.

Attention is called to Mr. Claxton's large stock of handsome Kidderminster and Brussels Carpets, which he is selling at very moderate prices.

A FEARFUL DISASTER AT JOHNSTOWN, Pa.—As the President passed through that place the people were assembled to greet him and his party. The crowd in their eagerness had gathered on a bridge that stretched across the canal along side of the railway. Just as the cheers were echoing far and near the bridge gave way, when hundreds of men, women and children were precipitated to the bottom of the canal, which contained about 15 feet of water. 8 persons were killed and 30 wounded, but strange, although many children were in the arms of mothers and others not one child was hurt. The scene is said to have been heart rending when the dead and wounded were being taken out of the canal.

JOLLY DOGS.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR:—F. E. Burnham, in last week's Review, asserted that there was a balance from the Lindsay Concert still remaining in my hands. Instead of such being the case there was a balance overpaid and in order to settle the matter, a meeting of the "Jolly Dogs," was called on Monday evening last, but as F. E. Burnham, had not been notified, (Mr. Gilbert, who called the meeting having been unable to see him) it was suggested after the proceedings were concluded, that the meeting be adjourned till the next night, and that Mr. Burnham be notified and requested to attend the same, which was done. The result of such meetings will be seen from the following extracts, from the minutes of said meetings given by the Secretary thereof:—

A meeting of the Jolly Dogs, was held on Monday evening the 17th inst. Mr. A. G. Gilbert in the chair.

Mr. Leonard, handed in a statement of receipts and expenditures connected with the Lindsay Concert, showing a balance overpaid of $1 40 "which was received as satisfactory and correct."

W. KANE, Secretary.

At the adjourned meeting, held on Tuesday evening, the 18th inst., all members present except Mr. Buller, "the minutes of the original meeting were read, and received, and confirmed." All present being satisfied with Mr. Leonard's statement.

W. KANE, Secretary,

All the members, even Mr. Burnham, were perfectly satisfied with the statement.

Yours, &c.

G. T. LEONARD.

Arrival of the Moravian.

FASTNET POINT, Sept. 16.—The steamship Moravian, from Liverpool on the 6th, passed this point to-day.

200 troops are on board, detachments from different regiments, but chiefly the Royal Artillery.

Cholera is prevalent in Italy. Large numbers of deaths have occurred at Naples, Genoa and other towns.

Various diplomatic changes are considered imminent in Paris. The dismissal of Drouyn De L'Heys was subject of much comment and it was believed it would conduce to the preservation of peace.

We clip the following in reference to the Princess Royal from an English paper:—History abounds in facts illustrative of the influence which a mother exercises over the future of her children;—every line in the following extracts in bold outline the parental care and training of our beloved Queen, and as we read of the Princess Royal's works of mercy, we cannot help exclaiming 'How like her Royal Mother!'—"The Prussian Monitour says:—The Princess Royal, whose physical and moral state has imperatively demanded, since the death of her son, Prince Seigismund, an absolute repose of some weeks and the more so that she is still performing the duties of a mother towards her newly-born infant—will leave the residence at Herrinhorst, according to present arrangements, in the first day of August. The Princess, who, at Heringsdorf, has evinced the liveliest interest in the care of the wounded, has caused several apartments of her palace to be arranged for the reception of disabled officers. After a short stay at Berlin, which will be devoted to a visit to the hospitals and to conferences with the members of the charitable societies, Her Royal Highness will proceed to Silesia, to occupy herself with the general direction of the hospitals of that province, placed under the command of her august husband.'"

The Democratic party have chosen their candidates for State offices at the approaching fall elections. Among the offices to be filled is that of State Prison Inspector, and one Frank B. Gallagher, of Buffalo has been put in nomination for the office. The reasons for his selection are not attempted to be concealed. The World which in view of the exigencies of party has returned after a long silence, to its championship of Fenianism, thus alludes to the matter: "The nomination of Frank B. Gallagher, of Buffalo, for State Prison Inspector, is a fitting "exhibition to those ardent and indomitable friends of free government and sound "Democratic principles, our Irish fellow-citizens. The Convention den ied to put upon the ticket the man who would be most acceptable to the Irish voters of the State, "and it was no hasard of mistake in taking "the gentleman who presided over the Fenian "Convention in Troy. A man who has received this recent mark of honor and confidence from his compatriots, is a candidate "whom they will be proud and zealous to elect." Thus both parties vie with each other in their efforts to secure the Fenian vote, and thus the beauties of republican institutions are exemplified by the fact that professional murderers and robbers have become masters of the situation.

TRIAL OF BREECH-LOADERS.—Yesterday afternoon, 17th inst., a couple of gentlemen representing the Windsor (Vermont) Manufacturing Company, who have been in town for some days with several descriptions of repeating arms and breech loaders, to which they are recommending the attention of our Government, invited the Hon. Mr. Macdougall and several other gentlemen to a trial of the rifles near Mr. Gilmour's residence. The converted Enfield, patented by Mr. E. G. Lamson, one of the above Company, seemed to give most complete satisfaction to all present. We do not know what action the Government will take in this matter, but it is probable, after the trial of yesterday, that the proposal of the Company to furnish the arm will receive favorable consideration.—Citizen.

A MEASURE OF PRECAUTION.—The Cobourg Sun says:—"On Friday last a telegram was sent from the Militia department to the different battalion head-quarters, ordering that a guard should be placed over the armories each evening to protect them from the supposed designs of marauding Fenians. Our Mayor and Brigade-Major having each received one of these telegrams they promptly acted upon them, and a guard was accordingly stationed at Victoria Hall on Friday night, and every night since. The Home Guard's are also on duty every night.

FREAKS OF LIGHTNING.—On Friday evening the storm worked serious damage all along the line of the Provincial Telegraph Company, in a number of places uprooting the posts, and playing other strange freaks. In the office of the Company in Toronto, the lightning having struck the wire tore one of instruments from the Operator's table, while the batteries were being disconnected, scattering it in pieces through the room.

We find the following in the Oshawa Vindicator:—"On Monday afternoon, the 3rd inst., the father of Dr. Millary, of Uxbridge, who is a very old man, left Uxbridge for Victoria corners, a village about six and a half miles distant. He arrived here safely, and left, it is supposed, to return to Uxbridge but did not get there. Up to the time of writing, notwithstanding the strictest search has been made, nothing has been heard of him. It is feared that he has fallen into some pond or river and b en drowned."

The Port Perry Standard says:—We regret having to announce the early demise of our respected townsman, Mr. Thomas Shaw, late of the firm of Shaw and Gordon. The deceased was a promising young man, very highly respected, and his death is mourned by the whole community. The clothes which were to adorn his person on the event of his nuptials, now form his shroud, and are worn by him to the tomb. Truly "in the midst of life we are in death."

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The steamer Palmyra, from Liverpool on the 4th inst., and Queenstown on the 5th inst., brings the following items of news:

The Daily Telegraph says the last advices from Canada are the reverse from discouraging, and that the object of the home government dispatching small reinforcements is to meet the admirable spirit of the colonists with corresponding promptitude and energy, and render the defence of the whole frontier, ashore and afloat, thoroughly effective.

The Sunday Gazette says that when the additional reinforcements reach Canada, the British army in that quarter will amount to 16,000 men.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 17.—About three o'clock this morning, an intoxicated man by the name of Fallon murdered his wife. She was asleep when he entered the house and he awoke her. High words followed, when he seized an axe near by and struck her with it, instantly killing her. He has been arrested.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16th.—The billiard tournament terminated last night. Plunkett won the billiard table, McCarthy, the silver plate; Trawley, the watch and chain; and Dion, first prize, champion cue.

SWINE IN ATTICS.—Not long ago, both in Edinburgh and Glasgow, such discoveries were made as that of swine being reared in the garrets of houses, eight and—particularly in regard to the former city—ten storeys high. It was found that, in some instances, swine, which had been taken there when they were young pigs, and, of course, easily transportable, had become so big, unwieldly, and heavy, that they had to be slaughtered in these elevated situations, so as to be removable piecemeal. Since that period a more vigorous police system has led to such outrages against the sanitary weal of the inhabitants being abolished, although there is still much to be done in the same way.—The Beggar's Benison.

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the invigorating Fluid,

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving it the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

A BEAUTIFUL HOUSE.

There is nothing that can contribute so much to render the house beautiful and elegant to improve his condition and make him all that is desirable as "Gray's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine;" it has been used by many persons who own valuable carriage and other horses with decided success, and so well pleased are they with it that they always keep it on hand in case of emergency; it may be given at all times with perfect safety.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The undersigned having been restored to health in a few weeks by a very simple remedy after having suffered several years with a severe lung affection, and that dread disease Consumption—is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure.

To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, &c. The only object of the advertiser in sending the Prescription is to benefit the afflicted, and spread information which he conceives to be invaluable; and he hopes every sufferer will try his remedy, as it will cost them nothing, and may prove a blessing.

Among the most important of modern Medical discoveries, stands

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

As a Family Medicine, it is well and favorably known, relieving thousands from pains in the Side, Back and Head, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Cramps in the Stomach, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, Burns, Scalds, Frost-bites, &c. &c.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER

Has now been before the Public for a length of time, and wherever used is well liked, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction, where the Directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in subduing the tortuing pains of Rheumatism, and in relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for these complaints. Orders are coming in from Medicine Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

The Canadian Pain destroyer never fails to give immediate relief. All Medicine dealers keep it. Physicians order and use it; and no family will be without it after once trying it. Price only Twenty-five cents per Bottle.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

Poetry.

MY WEDDING BOOK.

Jessie, Jessie, give it back to me;
I wish you would not look
Inside, unless you want to see
My penciled compliment?

You'll find a blot on every page,
For now the maiden's coyness;
I know 'tis shameful, at my age—
I tried to ink them out.

There's something wrong in every line;
For hope I could not tell
If 'twas another friend than mine
That those strange letters spell.

Do not the heads, and ends and grief,
I truly think that closing leaf
Were written thus the first.

Jessie,
Read it to me, my boy,
Aloud! Father, God bless you!
Two clustered stars in from his look—
Is that writ fair and clean?

If there are blots and crooked lines
Across those pages white,
Where his other self inscribed divines
'Twill be a hateful sight.

When you are writing every day,
Upon this other page;
How little blemish be to-day,
The best you can write with age.

O, write your very best, my boy,
Ask God to guide your hand,
And every leaf will bring you joy,
When you before Him stand,

"I NEVER."

Children, are you acquainted with a family by the name of ——? Well I don't think I will write their real name, for they might not like it, but I will call it Never!—a family by the name of Never. Perhaps you are not; so I will tell you a little about some of its members; and then I want you to go right to work and find out who they are and where they live. There are a great many in the family; and they are quite a wonderful sort of people too: I think it will be worth your while to hunt them up, and see what they are doing in this great busy world of ours.

First, there is Annie (this is not the real name, you know; I leave that for you to find out): she certainly has a wonderful pair of eyes, for such a little girl. One day she comes running in and exclaims, "Oh, mother! I never was so frightened in my life! such a snake! why I never saw such a big one!"

"Where?" asks her mother, smiling quietly.

"Oh, down by the brook!"—and Annie soon has the whole troop of brothers and sisters following the steps of the hired man, who is going to kill the terrible snake.—They do not seem to see it in the same light that Annie did however: for Henry exclaims indignantly, "Pooh! that's half as big as the one we saw by the school house last week."

"Now Ann, what a little goose!" chimes in Theo.

"Why, Miss Annie, that's no snake at all!" says the man, laughing heartily.

Annie herself begins to think the size of the snake has decreased some; and leads the way home. Half way there, she suddenly scrambles up the roadside bank, calling out. "Oh, Sade, look what buttercups! I never saw such big ones!" Having gathered some and carried them home, they are found to be not quite as large as some she had picked the day before. Some thing curious about Annie's eyes, certainly!

"I never saw anything so funny in my life!" she says, relating as occurrence; when, if she stops to think, she will remember that she has seen things quite as funny and which have made her laugh a great deal more.

"I never saw such a crowd!"

"Nonsense, Annie! remember the day of the procession."

"Oh, well!" The day of that crowd has gone by; and Annie's eyes are constantly seeing new wonders.

Edgar's ears are quite as wonderful as his sisters eyes. It is really very strange how many new and marvellous things he hears daily. "Those plaguey youngsters! how can a body study! I never heard such a noise as they make!" It was the neighbor's children prattling under the window; and Edgar hears a great more noise every day in his play-ground at school.

"I never heard anything so splendid!"

"What was it, my son?"

"Alice More a singing."

"Does she sing as well as her teacher?"

"Why, mother!"

"Then you have heard something as splendid, after all." Was it the fault of Edgar's ears?

"Pshaw! I never did hear anybody talk so long!" A gentleman had been talking with his father for above ten minutes, and Edgar was impatient for his tea.

"I never heard the wind blow as it did last night! why, I was afraid the house would come down!" Nobody else appeared to have such a fear; and they all thought the wind had blown quite as hard before.

Theodore's eyes and ears seemed to be generally right, but he was often troubled with very strange feelings. Sometimes you might hear him saying, with a doleful face, "Oh, mother, is'nt dinner ready? I never was so hungry in my life! Never! and Theodore says this so often, that it is really quite curious to see what a great degree of hunger he can endure.

Another time he will say, "Well, there! I never was so tired! never!" and sinks into the nearest chair, with a long sigh. But just as we begin to pity him, and propose that he should go lie down and rest, a whistle from outside arouses him:—"There's Ned Warren!" and the poor feet that were "never so tired" before, get down stairs in a very spry manner. Again, some evening, Theo will exclaim, pushing his books from him, "Now, I can't study! there's no use in trying: I never had such a headache in my life!" Mother looks compassionate, and asks, "Have you had it all day?"

"No ma'am; it's just begun; but, oh dear, I never felt such a pain before!"

He is excused from his studies, and sent to bed; and presently, mother following with cool refreshing, finds him just going into a quiet sleep: and Theo has had headaches which have kept him awake! Lottie is generally in some trouble of her own; so that she doesn't have much sympathy to spare for brother Theo's bad feelings.

"Now, just see there! I never fixed my flower bed yet, but what some cat or dog had to go and tear it up!"

Lottie had made flower beds a great many times, and the cats had only scratched it once before.

"I never did choose a rice seat, Ed, but what you would go in it first?" Poor persecuted Lottie!

"I know I had a new copy book in my desk, but to get a blot on the first page!"—Her last one had not any blots all the way through; but I suppose Lottie's memory is bad.

"I never had a dress made by Miss Smith yet, but it was half a yard too long!"

I really believe, children, that you will find Miss Lottie easier than the others in the family; for she has an inch a hundred foes nearly all the time. Do not hesitate, Lottie, I advise; it will be well to be in such constant trouble!

Now I leave you to begin your search after the members of this curious family.—When you have found them out, ask them what is their mission in the world; and if it is a wise and honorable and useful one, you may make them your friends; but if you find that they are a set of foolish, untaught, shiftless people, who do no manner of good in the world, I advise you to "cut their acquaintance" immediately.—N. Y. Observer.

GERMS OF GREATNESS.

BY ELIZA COOK.

How many a mighty mind is shut
Within a fameless germ;
The huge oak lies in the acorn nut,
And the richest regal robes are cut
From the web of a dunlop worm.

The river rolls with its fleet of ships
On its full and swelling tide,
But its far off fountain creeps and drips
From a chinklet's bank and mossy lips
That a pebble and dock-leaf hide.

The thoughtless word from a jesting breath
May fall on the listning ear,
And draw the soul from its rusty sheath
To work and win the rarest wreath
That mortal brow can wear.

Yon tiny bud is holding fast
Gay Flora's fairest gem,
Let the sunlight stay and the shower go past,
And then wee, green bud shall at last;
—The pride of her diadem.

The sower casts in the early year
The grains of barley corn,
And barns and barrels of goodly cheer—
Of Winters bread and nu-brown beer—
From the infant seed is born.

The Poetlehant may be a thing
Of lightsome tone and word,
But a living sound may dwell in the string,
That shall waken and warm as its echoes fling,
Till unto'd hearts are stirred.

Look well, look close, look deep, look long,
On the changes ruling earth,
And ye'll find God's rarest bold'st throng
Of mortal giants—strange and strong—
Arise from noteless birth.

Fate drives a poor and slender peg
But a crown may hang thereby;
We may kill an eagle when crushing an egg,
And the shilling the starving boy may beg
May be stamped with Fortune's die.

'Tis well to train our searching eyes
To wonder, not to mock;
For the nameless seed may win the prize,
The "wee" child grow to giant size,
And the atom found a rock.

Selections.

The Battle of Garscube.

A STORY OF THE LAST CENTURY.

Pluris est oculatus testis unus quam auriti decem. —PLAUTUS.

The sun had not long poured its enlivening beams upon the spires and streets of Glasgow, when the loud knock of Ritchie Falconer, the barber, made me start from the blankets, and throw myself into my dressing-gown. In those halcyon days every nose in the western metropolis of Scotland, from the Lord Provost's to that of Bell Gordie, * was daily or hebdomadally in the hands of the barber. Silver-tempered razors, almond shaving soap, and patent strops, were in the womb of futurity; and however urgent the necessity might be of ridding oneself of what has since become so fashionable, a man would as soon have tried to amputate his own limb as have attempted to draw a razor athwart his own face. The friseurs of that period, although they could not boast of the elegant scratch-wigs which cover the phrenological developments of our modern perruquiers, had bumps upon their frontal sinuses which indicated something more than a mere acquaintanceship with bears' grease and honey-water. They were generally fellows of wit and observation, had received what was called a grammar scho'l education, and mindful of their former corporation connection with the men of the scalpel and lancet, conceived it becoming to sport as much of the Latin which reeror Farr had whipped into them as could easily be squeezed into their morning colloquies. A Glasgow strap of the last century prated more about the virtue of Militades than Maccassar, and ingratiating himself with his customers rather by the starch of his cravat or the sabre cut of his whiskers. Besides all this, everything transacted in the city was as well known to him as the prying and hawk-eyed editors—alas, long defunct—of the Journal and Mercury. He knew the peculiarities of every establishement, from that of the blue and white cheek CORK (Anglice shell manufacturer) to those of the tobacco aristocracies, and was as intimately with the past removes at a bailie's dinner, as the projected changes at the city council board. In short, he was little less entertaining than the Spanish Asmodeus, and often not less anxiously looked for by his morning customers in Glasgow, than was the little tell-tale devil by Don Cleophas Perez Zambullo, in Mad id.

But tempora mutantur et nos mutamur all ills. The use of the barber's basin seems almost a fation. The perambulatory race of straps is extinct—the morning tale of the suds is no more, and but one or two septuagenarians, who still retain the cut and curl of the last century, stalk about as the sad remembrancers of that eventful period.

'Good morning, sir,' said Ritchie, with a smilling countenance, as he opened my chamber-door; 'had a good night's rest, I hope?' 'Pretty well,' said I, seating myself in my shaving chair. 'Gaudeo te valere,' added the barber, 'as I always say to Professor Richardson when I'm gaun to curl his caput. But alas, there's anithing sterin' in the col'ega at the present time—they're a' awa, frae the worst to the beggist o' them, takin their otium cum dignitate; even John M'Lachlan Bidellus, honest man, is awa to Gourock. He gaed aff yesterday in the fly-boat, † and his wife, on account o' the high wind, is between the de'il and the deep sea o' anxiety to hear o' his arrival.'

'You must have been quite a sinecure, Falconer,' muttered I, through the thick lather that encompassed my mouth.

'Sinecure!' exclaimed Cock, 'and the deacons-chusing my sune? I hae just been up wi' Deacon Lawbroad, the tailor, wha threeps he maun be shaved six times a week at this time, instead o' twice, and my certie it is nae sinecure to rane his bread. O'd his face takes mair time to clear than half-a-dozen—but nae wonner, sooner or later that and mak it tender.'

'But I thought the deacon had turned over a new leaf in the prospect of obtaining a magisterial chair.'

'A chain! O tempora! O mores!'—cried the barber, sneer ogly, while he followed it with a whew-w-w—like that of my uncle Toby, "set him up, indeed! my mang, they'll be ill aff when they tak the tailor to the council chaumer. It does na doe for would-be bailies to be drinking pap-in at the Black Boy till twa in the morning, and clashing an clavering wi' Peggy Beully. No, no, we maun hae doucer pows than the deacen's to bow in the Wynd kirk frae the front o' the haft!—Doctor Porteous, honest man, could na thole to see nae mony marks of the speerit staring him in the face ilka Sunday! But warl-a-wat there's nae saying what'll be bailies now-a-days. Audaces fortuna juvat, timidosque repellit.'

'Why, Ritchie,' said I, "it would not at all astonish me, ere many years, to see you yourself following the town officers, and wondered at as one of the wise men of the west."

'Why, sir, at pulchrum est digito monstari et dicerri hic est,' said the barber, evidently delighted with the idea, 'after that thoughtless, freckless, senseless cool, Macsapless, ane need na lose a' heart.—Well, but he's a fine hau' for the provost. I'm sure he'll vote through thick and thin wi' him and boo like ony white-bunnet at an auction. O'd, the folk say he coft his cock'd hat frae Miller and Ewing twa years since syne, and what is mair likely, he slept wi' his chain the first night after he got it. But what does ye think the twa faced body mured in the council the ither day? why, nacthing less than what was proposed in Provost Cheek's time, him, ye ken, wha lived in the lan just abooo the flesh market—nacthing less than that the city barbers should na be allood to shave their customers on Sunday. Foul fa' the silly loon!—Had he as muckele brains in his pow as powther on his shouthers, he might hae seen the folly o' his hypocrisy. I easily wunner the provost, wha is a sensib e man, would listen to sic a paumering hypocritical body. But it's only anither proof to me, that when the unco guid get into power, they're aye scalding their tongues in ither folks' kale. The bailie has lang sat under Mr. Balfour, honest man, and the outer kirk folk, ye ken, a' think themsells far greater saunts than their neebours.'

'And what are we to do on Sunday, Falconer; the council cannot lay an embargo on one's beard growing?'

'Verbum Sapienti!' replied Ritchie, taking me by the nose for the finishing touch of his razing operation. 'The trade have agreed to cause their apprentices to parade the streets on that morning in white hose, and you have only to raise the window, haud up your wee finger, and my sang! your chin will sune be as smooth as it is noo, Sunday tho' it be. Are decent Christian folks, do you think, to gang like heathenish Sews at the nod o' a Glasgow trades-bailie? O'd, I ken a black-a vicod chield that maun be shaved twice a day when he wants to be particular. Do you think it is affording a' 'prai e and protection to those who'd do well' to keep mei frae hearing the word on account o' a lang beard? But let the deacon sleep—Anoto quæramus vera ludo. I've something mair extraordinar to tell you, but in the meantime I must get the curling tongs heated before throwing a little moost (powder) into your hair.'

On the barber's return with the heated tongs, I immediately begged him to say what he had to communicate.

'O'd, sir, the news is nane o' the best.—Do ye ken there's an unco sough aboot rioting and rebellion?' said Dick in a canting and fishing tone of voice.

'Rioting and rebellion! Pooh, pooh.—That must be all fudge. Meal is abundant and cheap at present, wages are high, and trade is brisk; the Scottish convention has been dissolved, the secret societies have given up their sittings, and the real friends of the people are determined to resist the French revolutionary principles. But who are they that are to occasion the dread riot or rebellion, as you call it?'

'I danna ken,' said Ritchie, sarcastically, 'whether it will be by the freens o' the people, or the foes o' the king; but if it happens, it will be by a set o' folk that are no ower weel pleased wi' the goverament, and really I'm no muckle astonished at their displeasure. O'd, there's no many decent weel-doing men, that would like to be shot at against their will for a pun' shilling a day.'

'Oh, I understand you,' said I; 'you have heard it hinted that there may be some further disturbances consequent on the extension of the militia act to Scotland?'

'You have hit it,' said the barber. 'Do you ken, as I was coming here this morning, I heard a clashing and clavering almaist as nosy as what goes on at the Washing-house in the Green; something serious o' the kind is expected to happen in the neighbourhood.'

'Why, Falconer, I am exceedingly sorry to hear any rumour of that kind, for, to tel you the truth, this militia measure is not at all popular, and what is worse, it has been deemed by many altogether contrary to the strict letter of the articles of Union. On this account it has been made a handle of by demagogues, and I am really alarmed lest the people, goaded on by which they will ultimately become the unfortunate sufferers.'

'Recte Domine!' cried Ritchie' covering my head and face with powder. 'They has been egged on to do nae already, and what was the upshot?—broken heads and cauld wames? Oh, it was a sad affair that at Tranent. What a black burning shame that nae mooey innocent folk should be slain and slaughtered—God forbid we should ever hae sic like doins here! I hope the folk will take tent; and if decent lads maun leave their wives and bairns, against their will, in defence o, their kintra, let the kintra pay them better, and look kindlier after their nain' families. Had the folk hereabouts mair to say in the makin o' their laws than they hae, I jalouse they would na get sic scrimps justice. But vox populi quæ pauco loquitur; I'm maybe speakin treason and ye ken I would na like to gang o'er the great deil (ma) like Tam Muir and the like o' them. We maun keep out o' the clutch o' auld Bruxy* as lang as we can. My mang! He's a kittle freen to foregather wi' anywhere, but I can tell you, I would rather meet wi' him in the heart o' a change house, than at the bar. But I maun be gone. Forget what I hae been clyping about politics, but dinna forget to hauud up your wee finger on Sunday at the windaw to the first pair o' white hose you see when you want a shave.'

So saying, while gathering up his various implements of trade, and offering me, as usual, a vale Domine, off flew Ritchie Falconer to Adonise and amuse some other customer.

Arraying myself in my morning suit, I sallied forth to take my usual walk to the Pointhouse. The banks of the Clyde, at that period, were not, as they are now, studded with cotton-mills, weaving-factories, print-fields, and dye-works. The verdant turf was only trodden by a few idle stragglers, while the water was unruffled for hours save by the saloon fishing-boats, which paddled from Finnieston to Govan. No steam-boat, crowded with fashionables, and pouring out its volumes of heavy smoke had yet disturbed the river's general placidity. No ship was seen looming in the distance; a ponderous gabert, a herring-wherry, and a Gourock fly-boat, were all the Clyde then bore on her bosom, and these were like angel's visits—few and far between.' †

While enjoying the beauties of the scenery, my thoughts involuntarily turned on the riots apprehended by Ritchie Falconer, and on the probability that the volunteers, to which I had a pride in belonging, would be called out to quell them. The melancholy affair at Tranent constantly obtruded itself on my recollection, and I could not help beseeching Heaven to forfend what might force me, in my military capacity, to fire on, perhaps, the most thoughtless and guiltless of my countrymen. On returning to the city, I inquired anxiously about the rumour communicated by the barber, and found that it had already got general wind. In the coffee-room, too, after breakfast, I discovered it to be the only topic which occupied the various knots of gossips that encircled the tables. Hearing nothing, however, but conjecture, the matter was immediately forgotten amid the bustle of business, until I was stopped in the street a little after two o'clock by a friend, who, with a face as long as a yard-stick, communicated the fact that a serious disturbance had that day taken place in the parish of New Kilpatrick, and that the rioters, when the messenger had left the place, were threatening to set fire to the house of Lord President Campbell, at Garscube, his lordship having incurred the displeasure of the populace for carrying the militia act into operation, in his capacity of Deputy Lieutenant of the county. While busily conversing upon the subject, and discussing the means that would be resorted to for preventing such outrages, the sound of distant drums and fifes was heard advancing from the west to the east end of the city, and, on listening, I immediately recognized the well-known assembly rattle of the Royal Glasgow Volunteers. I took instant leave of my friend, and hurried home to don my regimentals and to attend the summons.

On entering the house I found my worthy old servant in a fearful quandary. She had heard the news of the riot, coloured with a thousand fancied terrors, and the result in her eyes appeared to assume a magnitude little short of a rebellion, as frightful as the one she had some faint recollection of in her girlhood. 'Hech, sirs! hech, sirs!' sighed Girzy, wringing her hands, as she saw me buckling on my bayonet and cartouch-box, and examining the flint of my musket—'that I should leeve to see anither bluidy tuilzie among freens and brithers, and that these een should again look on folk feeching wi' their ain kith and kin, and murdering ain anither for the sake o' mere neerdoweels. Peden's Prophecy I'm thinking will come to pass sooner than sinners jalouse, when a man will travel a simmer's day up the strath o' Clyde, and neither see a tum reeking nor hear a cock craw! Oh master, ye had better stay at hame, and say ye're no that weel. Heaven will forgie ye for sic a sma' lie. There will nae doubt be plenty there without you. Wha wad like to lae innocent bluid on their head? Wash your hands, oh, wash your hands o't! Think o' the thoughtless souls at Tranent that were sent without a moment's warning to their lang hame, and their dreed account. How many cheerless cots and mourning hearts that woeful day occasioned! Were it a wheen o' thae cruel-hearted French clanjamphry, that had landed to destroy us, I would na care to see you saw nookit; but to gang out that way to kill your ain countrymen—oh it's a black burning shame. Dinna gang, sir—tak my advice, and dinna gang the length o' your tae!'

Seeing Girzy's anxiety, and knowing the deep interest she took in my welfare, I thought it my duty to calm her by saying, that the rebellion she believed to have broken out at Garscube was nothing but a squabble between a few farm-servants and the legal authorities, and that the mere appearance of the volunteers on the ground would restore all things to their wonted quiet. 'Weel, weel!' replied Girzy, in a sceptical tone, 'I wish it may be sae. He that wul to Cupar maun to Cupar. But oh, sir, tak care o' yourself, and if the babbie should turn out to be mair than you jalouse, just dae as I would dae—e'en leave it to be nettled by them that are paid for being shot at. Tak tent to yoursel, and oh be shure no to turn the point o' your gun against wives and bairns!' Talking in this anxious strain, and following me to the door she pulled an old shoe off her foot, and threw it down the stair after me, as she said, 'for guid luck!'

On arriving at George's Square, which was the place of rendezvous, I found an unusually large assembly of the corps, all of whom were in high spirits and eager for the fray. On falling in and counting the files there appeared to be the full complement. Three hundred bayonets were in fact present, and it is perhaps not too much to say, that there was no member of the corps who would have hesitated to beard the tasteless wight, who denied this regiment to be the handsomest in his Majesty's service.—Whether that opinion was founded in justice, or was the result of mere self-complacency, it is not for me to determine; but it is certain that this corps of gentlemen, at least, proved a constant theme of admiration to all the sighing spinsters around the city tea-tables, and, what was far better for its deathless fame, it attracted the notice of the Glasgow Homer, better known under the every-day cognomen of Blin' Alick, who, in his peripatetic wanderings, blazoned far and wide the gallant character of the corps in the following graphic lines:—

"We are gentlemen of honor,
And we do receive no pay;
Colonel Corbet's our commander,
And with him we'll fight our way!"

And so they seemed determined to do on this memorable occasion, for no sooner had the gallant colonel told us that we were that day assembled to support the king and the glorious constitution, and that every man was expected to do so with his life, than the whole regiment simultaneously doffed their caps, and gave a loud huzza of approbat on. The colonel was a man in whose military tactics every member of the corps placed implicit confidence. He was none of your pot-bellied, sun-shune, feather bed soldiers. He was a tall, slender, wiry figure, with an eye that would not have winked in front of a battery, and a heart that would have bounded to have led on a forlorn hope. On observing the peculiar manner which he had of turning out his toes, one might have supposed this officer a complete military Martinet; but the idea was immediately dispelled when he proceeded to mount his Bucephalus. Unlike many volunteer commanders, he had smelt gunpowder when it was seasoned with a goodly peppering of bullets, and in his youth had crossed blades with the determined foes of his country.—He was present in the bloody conflict that took place in the market-place of St. Hilier's, on the 6th of January, 1781, and had, on that occasion, gazed upon the dying features of the gallant Major Pierson. The colonel could also boast, in the highest degree, of what was esteemed absolutely necessary to one's gentility in those days of Spenceau principles,—the character of being a thorough-paced Tory, and a sworn foe to demagogues and democrats.—With many useful and amiable qualities of head and heart, which it is here unnecessary to enumerate, this gallant officer had one foible, and it was one which, whenever military movements were occupying his thoughts, or were the topic of conversation, he displayed. Proud, as well he might be, of his share in the achievement in Jersey, he had acquired the habit of prefacing every opinion on military tactics, and every project of military operation, with a full and particular account of the whole transactions of the eventful day at St. Hillier's, and which at length became to his friends and the corps, about as well known and as tiresome, as the story of the royal dejeuner at the castle of Tillietudlem. Upon the present occasion, this Lady-Margaret Bellenden peculiarity displayed itself strongly, for no sooner were the cartouch-boxes observed to be fulfilled with ammunition, than the colonel, after telling us that we were about to march to Garscube, and warning us when there to be steady and cool, involuntarily stumbled upon Jersey.

"Gentlemen," said he, "well do I recollect when on the morning of the 6th of January, 1781, the drum summoned us to arms, and when ——" The Major well knowing the colonel's foible, aware also that there was no time for the accustomed yarn of half an hour, no sooner heard the famous 6th of January uttered than, in open defiance of all military rule, he instantly rode up and intimated that all was in readiness for the regiment to proceed. The thread of the colonel's discourse being broken, the battle of St. Hiller's was forgotten, and instant preparations were made for the battle of Garscube. The volunteers being then successively ordered to "prime and load, fix bayonets, shoulder arms, and by sections on the left backwards wheel," the word "march" was given, and off we paced boldly to beard the foe, followed by a crowd of idle urchins, whose reiterated shouts rendered the field-officers' heeds more restive than their horsemanship warranted to be either safe for themselves or seemly for the character of the corps.

* The well-known bellman of Glasgow, almost as celebrated as Dugald Graham, the author of the "Metrical History of the Rebellion," who was one of his predecessors in that noisy office.

OUR LIFE.—There is but one breath of air and a beat of the heart betwixt this world and the next. And the brief interval of painful and awful suspense, while we feel that death is present with us, and that we are powerless, and the last pulsation here is but the prelude of endless life hereafter; we feel in the midst of the stunning calamity about to befall us, the earth has no compensating good to mitigate the severity of the loss. There is no grief without some beneficient provision to soften its intenseness. When the good and lovely die the memory of their deeds, like the moonbeams on the stormy sea, light our sad and darkened hearts, and lend to the sorrounding gloom a beauty so sad, so sweet, that we would not, if we could, dispel the darkness that environs it.

† As a proof of the altered use of the river Clyde, it may be stated that, while at the period of our story the river revenue then did not exceed a few hundred pounds, the present revenue is upwards of thirty-six thousand per annum.

CURIOUS LAW SUIT.

COST OF SPARKING—A SINGULAR OUT-OUT ACCOUNT.

There came off to-day before Police Justice Hubbard, in this city, a singular law suit growing out of the following particulars: Charles Morland and Robert Undine, two young men about twenty-five years of age, have for some months been courting a young lady. The men grew jealous of each other, and each strove to win the girl to consent to a marriage.—But she could not decide which to have.—Sunday night of last week, the two men were sitting on the porch talking with the girl, when a dispute arose between them which was the shortest route to North La Crosse—Morland saying by the depot, Undine claiming by the waggon road.—They referred the matter to the girl, who laughingly replied that the best way to decide was to walk there and back, each by his route when they could decide which was the quickest, and as there was but little difference in the distance she could know which was the smartest man. And she playfully added, "Go, noble knights, and he who first returns shall claim my hand in marriage!"

Each man started, Morland disappearing around the corner by the depot route, Undine around the other corner, by the wagon road. When Undine returned after a forty minute walk on a hot night, he was made still hotter by seeing Morland coolly sitting on the porch, where he had been for thirty-five minutes he only stepped around the corner, and returned, preferring sitting with the young lady to walking three miles over railroad ties. After some hard words Undine told the girl to go to—a hotter place than La Crosse, and left the house.—He brought suit against the girl to recover pay for the following bill of goods, which he had presented her while sparking her.—We copy the bill from the court records:

One gold ring	$ 5 00
One fancy fan	3 00
One fancy pair white kids	2 00
One box confectionary	3 00
Total	$13 00

On the trial, Hon. Angus Cameron, appeared for the prosecution, and Brick Pomeroy, by particular request, for the defence, under whose instructions the young lady presented a bill as follows:

To Kerosene oil 7 months	$ 3 00
To rent of parlor for sparking	10 00
To confectionary eaten by plaintiff	00
Total	$13 75

After a rather amusing trial, during which the plaintiff admitted that he ate some of the confectionery he brought the girl, the court gave a verdict of twenty-five cents and costs against the plaintiff!—His Honor, Mayor Levy, Judge Flint, Gen. Washburn, ex mayor Lloyd, and several of our prominent business men were in attendance out of curiosity, and were summoned as witnesses on the part of the defence, as to cost of kerosene, worth of room for sparking purposes, etc., etc.! The cost of suit amounted to $13 624.—La Crosse (Wis.) Democrat.

A FENIAN SHOT.

Early on Monday morning the town of Berlin was thrown into a state of excitement by the occurrence we are about to relate:—Between two and three o'clock in the morning a lady named Mrs. Jackson, wife of H. F. J. Jackson, Esq., whose residence is near the railway station, was aroused by what seemed to be a noise in the lower part of the house. She awoke her husband, but he thought she must have been mistaken. However, they listened attentively for a few minutes, when the noise renewed itself distinctly, evidently proceeding from some intruder in the house. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson then rose, and the former secured his revolver, intending to go in search of him, but Mrs. Jackson insisted upon attending her husband in the perilous enterprise. They then went, Mrs. Jackson carrying the light and proceeded down stairs, when, on reaching the foot, they encountered a man. Mr. Jackson fired and the robber did the same, the ball of the latter whizzing close to Mr. Jackson's head, while the ball from his pistol also failed to reach the desired mark. Quick as thought he then let the revolver round, and firing, he placed a ball in the man, who at once fell at his feet with a groan. All this time Mrs. Jackson had retained her firmness and had now the satisfaction of seeing the would-be robber lying wounded and helpless.—Assistance was soon obtained, when it was found that the ball had entered the upper part of the man's bowel's and come out through the rib in the rear. On being taken to jail, he said that his name was Connor, and declared himself to be a Fenian! The wound is a very serious one, and is thought will lead to a fatal termination. The people of Berl

FENIANISM.

The Attorney-General has addressed an official circular to officers of the Peace throughout the country, directing them to keep a close watch on supposed or suspected Fenians, or strangers who may come amongst us from the other side of the line. It is not enough merely to have a law by which disaffected parties can be arrested; the officers whose duty it is to carry out the law, in such times as these should not be so crippled and confined by orders from the Government, that they feel it useless to move in the matter. This is the position all parties felt themselves in ever since the passing of the present act, and this is the case in a great degree, even since the issue of the late circular. They feel that if arrests are made that the matter would just end there, or perhaps after confining one, two or more, ther would be some way brought about for their escape. Now it is better that the law remain a dead letter, by allowing everyone to pursue his own course, than to take up parties and let them go unpunished. We are sure that the Government might have left the matter with the people; there is no appearance of undue rashness on the part of any one towards his neighbors, nor is there anything to fear from that direction. On the contrary, there is a great deal of mutual forbearance among all classes of citizens, strangers are allowed to pass to and fro without molestation, so long as they attend to their own business; and this will continue unless troubles arise, when, in all probability, strangers would be viewed with a little more suspicion than at present. But even though there were dangers of some one suffering without offence, yet it would be better that one or two should suffer than that the whole community should be forced to suffer for want of proper precaution or timely punishment being meted out to those scoundrels who might come amongst us as spies. We think, however, that Feinanism will soon play itself out. The promoters of it are poor, worthless beings, without money or character. It depends, for the sinews of success, upon poor hired boys and girls who have enough to do to support themselves.—These can barely afford an odd half-dollar, now and then,—a sum very inanfficient to carry on a war with the greatest power of the earth. These hired girls will soon give up paying to the funds, and then the O'Mahoneys, the O'Neils and the Roberts will have nought wherewith to make their poor dupes drunk and very soon the whole must come to an end. We have only to wait a few months and the evil will cure itself.

Our American neighbors are likely to have another war very soon—another great Rebellion. The signs of the times point in that direction just now. Republicanism and Democracy are likely to culminate in open war. Ere long the Republic may have something else to do than secretly aid a set of out-throats. The South is quiet, but not settled. The North is goading them on to something perhaps, worse than the last rebellion, for this time there will be open enemies in the North, who would as soon be subject to southern chivalry, as to Republican misrule. Let us wait awhile and we will find that the system the great Republic is pursuing in fitting out marauding expedition to annoy quiet neighbors may produce a wholesome dread in their own minds. During the St. Albans raid sensation, the acts of a few men produced the most wild terror in the minds of the Americans from Maine to Michigan, and this even when our volunteers were guarding the frontiers, but then amongst a great people everything must be great; a half dozen misguided men could throw the Republic into great consternation. The politicians of the United States would be better employed in endeavoring to settle home difficulties, than in annoying their neighbors.

THE COADJUTOR BISHOP.

As announced last week, the election of Bishop came off on Thursday and Friday. On Thursday nothing satisfactory could be arrived at. The friends of the different Candidates appearing determined to support their man to the last. There appeared to be three parties in the contest—the High, the Low and the Moderate—Provost Whittaker and Archdeacon Bethune representing the High Church party, Dr. Fuller, the Moderate party, and Rev. Mr. Grassett, the Low Church party. The great contest for the first day was between Provost Whittaker and Dr. Fuller, the Archdeacon and Mr. Grassett coming third.

Friday evening, however, after eight successive attempts to elect one of the Candidates, and failing as many times, Provost Whittaker retired, when the friends of the Provost united with the friends of the Archdeacon and elected him, but not until the Synod had well nigh separated without electing any one. The Archdeacon is said to be a moderate man, not likely to render himself unpopular by forcing any set of views upon the people. He is also a Canadian by birth and will in all probability succeed as well as any one that could have been chosen. At present the newly elected Bishop is 66 years of age, and according to the common course of events, cannot occupy the high position for very many years. Cobourg however has reason to feel proud that she has furnished the Church with one of its highest dignitaries.

Mr. Buchanan, the Chief Emigration Agent has been favored with a communication from some anonymous correspondent, of which the following is a transcript:—

Canada, 1866.

Sir,—I have to inform you, as Chief Immigration Agent, that no matter what inducements may appear in the Gu lse journals, or may be held by you or any other agent, to make unhappy exiles and remain in Canada, I, for one, will and shall oppose the steppage of any Irish emigrant in this country, every one of whom shall and will go to the United States, and there be banded and united to take revenge on the English tyrant, if it was in twenty or forty years to come. Revenge we must and shall have upon the base and bloody tyrant, and as far as in my power nothing will be left undone, by publishing in the Irish local newspapers, announcing Canada as not a fit place for any one, but to take the United States in preference.

England's exiles will and shall have revenge. Oh! may God send the day soon. Every sound and down-trodden Irish heart will soon raise the cry, liberty or death.

A MAN AT THE HELM.

I will denounce Canada in the worst light I can, and prevent any of my countrymen coming to it—but for one purpose alone.

A. M. at H.

The writer of the above letter is presumed to be an Irish Canadian. We trust, however, for the good name of all Irish Canadians, that the presumption is false, for we cannot believe that any man could be found so full of hatred to any power, or be carried so far as to wilfully injure those whom he wishes to benefit. There is no country under the sun, where Irishmen have such liberties and privileges as in Canada. No one interferes with them in matters of faith or conscience. They enjoy all the rights and privileges of other subjects of Her Majesty. There is no Know-nothing Club, nor any other Club, that seeks to deny them one privilege that any other citizen enjoys. They can obtain and enjoy a comfortable home, none daring to molest them therein; and a greater number of them have already realized this in Canada, than in any other country in proportion to their numbers. Hence, the man who would do aught to prevent their settling in Canada, would be their greatest enemy. Such men ought to remember that it is only a few years since they were discussing the wisdom of leaving the United States entirely with the intention of settling in Canada.—Neither country has changed one iota since. Canada is as friendly to Irishmen, and the United States as much opposed as then, and we wonder that Irishmen do not see this, and avoid being a cats-paw for Yankee Know-nothing demagogues, who would rob them of every liberty, and almost of life itself to attain their most selfish ends; get the Irish to fight their battles, do their dirty work of annoying Canada, and when the work is done sink them lower than the negro, as at present there is a movement to give the negro the right of franchise, while no such movement is on foot for the Irish. What a laughing stock they make themselves, by allowing themselves to be the dupes of Yankee politicians, who buy and sell them as they require their aid at the polls. Canadian Irishmen must know this, and ought to seek to relieve their countrymen in the United States, from the bondage of being mere tools.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION.

This exhibition is being held this week in Toronto. The weather has not been very favorable, Tuesday being rather wet for comfort outside. From the Toronto dailies we learn that there are a great many entries; the total number, however, has not been yet given. The show of wheat is not so good as that of late years.

The only exhibitor from this part on the list is P. J. Ayres, who exhibits a model for adjusting water wheels. By means of a winch the wheel is stopped when necessary, and can be raised out of the water in winter. Mr. Ayres also shows an improved Tire-setting machine, which is said to be very useful for blacksmiths.

Volunteers.

Our volunteers leave on Saturday for the camp at Thorold, to undergo their eight days drill. This has been looked for weekly for some time, and should cause no alarm. Up to the date of going to press, we hear no fresh news of Fenians. They either fear to make an attack, or are concealing their intentions until a favorable opportunity offers. So long, however, as our volunteers are on the frontier, there need not be much uneasiness. The Leader thinks that if they intend another attack, it will be before the fall elections, hence, will be soon. There is no appearance of any intentions of attack at present.

Lectures.

Mr. McMurray, of the Temperance Alliance, will deliver two lectures here next week, one on Monday evening in the Wesleyan Methodist Sabbath School Room, the other on Tuesday evening, the place of which will be announced on Monday evening. Mr. McMurray is highly spoken of every where he lectures; we advise all to go and hear him.

New Music.

Messrs A. & S. Nordheimer, have just published a new piece of Music, called the "Volunteers farewell." It is considered a beautiful song, and is likely to ensure a large sale. It can be had at Graham & Stratton's, Peterborough.

Literary Club.

We are requested to state that a meeting of the Board of Directors, of the Peterborough Literary Club, will be held in the Firemen's Hall, this evening, at 8 o'clock.—A full attendance is particularly requested.

The cheese manufactured at the Ingersoll Cheese Factory, for the provincial Exhibition of this year, is composed of the milk of seven thousand cows—that is one milking of that number; is six feet eight inches in diameter; upwards of three feet thick; and weighs seven thousand pounds! The big cheese shown at the Exhibition of last year weighed only four thousand pounds; so that the cheese of this year is nearly twice as large.

SKEDDADLED.—Mr. Cordier, of the Saturday Reader and International Journal has left Montreal for the Land of Liberty, leaving his creditors to console themselves over the loss of $60,000. Mr. Cordier was also a partner in the Trade Review, but sold out and thereby made considerable. He was preparing to publish, when he found it most convenient to leave. He is supposed to have lost money by speculating in gold.

The Hon. W. P. Howland has been gazetted as Minister of Finance, the duties of which office he has continued to discharge since the resignation of Hon. A. T. Galt.

The Sabbath.

We publish a reply to-day to a letter that appeared in our columns about two weeks since. This we wish to be the last, on this subject. We regret that there should be any cause for these anxious or murmuring remarks among those who should be on better terms. If, however, the law has been violated, it should be vindicated before some magistrate which would certainly be the way to make it respected. There can be no excuse for violating the Sabbath by drawing in grain or any other labor, except works of necessity and mercy. Still we think there are other violations of the sacredness of the Lord's day, as heinous as drawing in grain, or even ploughing. To borrow articles of husbandry on Sunday for use on Monday or through the week, to ask hands to a threshing, to make arrangements for secular business, to go a visiting, and that perhaps several miles, when there is neither sickness nor necessity, and when, perhaps, the team has to be used for the purpose; nay, and all of these, besides many more very common transactions, appear to be a violation of that sacred day, and it can only be because these are common, and drawing in grain or hay, uncommon, that the one act is considered more heinous than the other. The command is:—"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it Holy; six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work, &c. And we cannot see where the liberty is granted to the contrary. There are too many who think only of the outward act, forgetful of the state of the inner man; too many who like the gaid sakd minister of whom we have read somewhere, who riding along the way to church on Sunday morning with a neighbor, took a fancy to his neighbor's animal, when he opened a colloquy in this wise:

Minister—That's a fine horse ye rile.

Neighbor—He is indeed, sir.

Minister—If it wasn't Sunday, I'd be asking the price of him.

Neighbor—If it wasn't Sunday I'd tell ye it was twenty pounds.

Minister—If it wasn't Sunday I'd tell ye that I'd give it for him.

Ministers, of course, are made say and do strange things; but we hope whether the good old minister broke the Sabbath or not as insinuated that the moral will not go unheeded.

Missionary.

We have been requested to state that there will be a meeting of the Indian Missionary Society, on the 27th inst., (this evening,) in the Victoria Hall, at 7:30. The mission is in connection with the Church of England. Two Indian Chiefs will be present, viz: Pudwaiganeene and Mighekwongi Ojibwas. There will, we expect, be addresses by several Rev'd gentlemen, and also by the chiefs. The meeting in Toronto, was a successful one. We hope the one in Peterborough will be also. There will be a collection in aid of the mission.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK, for October, is received, and is an interesting number. The beautiful steel plate and the Fashion plates will be duly appreciated by those for whom they are intended. The reading matter is in the usual style of the Lady's Book. This excellent Fashion Book is only $3 00 a year.

The Gazette contains an Order-in-Council from England, requiring every passenger ship, after the 20th August, carrying more than fifty passengers, to have on board a duly-qualified medical practitioner, in consequence of the prevalence of cholera.

Pocket picking seems to be as common as usual at the Toronto Provincial Exhibition, all warning to the contrary. Frontier papers still announce the regular arrival of suspicious looking characters from the other side. We hope they will be well watched.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.—By the last mail the unwelcome news has been received of the death of the sister of His Excellency. He, in consequence will not attend the Provincial Exhibition as anticipated.

SABBATH DESECRATION.

Mr. Reid has replied to my statements in the Examiner of the 6th inst, under the above heading, and rarely indeed have I noticed a lower tone of morality than pervades the entire communication; but for the present I forbear further criticism.

Had I went in person to remonstrate with Mr. Reid on the impropriety of his conduct, it appears I would have fared even worse than those who did go; for again strongly fortified with Scripture, he would have made the attack, not satisfying himself, however, with the parable of the Pharisee and the Publican, he would also have hurled at me that of the beam and the mote, repeated for the ten thousandth time to any one who chides immorality. Mr. Reid denies having paid any money for the labor he obtained on the Sabbaths. Let him have the benefit of the denial in view of the difficulty of proving bargains made under such circumstances, but of this I am assured—that he offered one man $2.00 per day, and those who did work were, during the evenings, sumptuously regaled at the tavern, where regular jollifications ensued.

Mr. Reid does not deny that he was expostulated with for his conduct, that he replied by invective, that he quoted Scripture to sustain himself, but he also admits that he drew in grain for three Sabbaths, to which might have been added at least another Sabbath stooking a large field of wheat, and to which may be added still another Sabbath making hay, in all of which he not only does not see any error, but for the first time that I am aware of in the history of the Province, has the audacity—if not to justify—at least to palliate the act, or rather series of acts, through the columns of a respectable and widely circulated newspaper.

Yet, notwithstanding all this, Mr. Reid in conclusion has the boldness to assert that he would be sorry (?) by word or act to show disrespect to the Sabbath. O tempora, O mores! Surely more unblushing effrontery was never uttered and cannot fail to bring the odium so deservedly merited.

I now leave the readers of the Examiner to judge on whose side rests the falsehoods and exaggeration of facts so vauntingly referred to by Mr. Reid.

Remaining, Mr. Editor,
Yours truly.
COM.

THE GUARDS COMING OUT.—The United Service Gazett says:—H. M. S. Tamar will be employed in the conveyance of the 53rd Regiment, and H. M. S. Orontes will take the 61st Regiment to Canada. Both are vessels of good speed. A strong force of artillery will be despatched immediately, and it is in contemplation to send two battalions of Guards also from London. A large quantity of munitions of war, about 1500 tons, are being prepared for immediate despatch. With a force like this, in additional to the battalions at present stationed in North America, and the many regiments of militia, a good account will, doubtless be given of any Fenians who may make their appearance in Canada.

Canadian Usury in support of Italian Oppression.

The Montreal Witness says:—

We have received a copy of a circular issued in French by the Catholic Bishop of Montreal, which is being sent to leading men amongst the faithful of the Diocese of Montreal:—

"BISHOP'S PALACE, Sept. 16, 1866.

"In the desire of favoring the Montreal Loan, the subscription to which opens on the 1st of October next, I have had the thought of calling together a meeting of the Catholics of this city, and even the country, for Monday the 24th inst., at eight o'clock in the evening, in the Academical Hall of the St. Mary's College. Ever reckoning on your devotedness to the Holy See, I invite you to assist at this meeting in order to encourage, by your presence, a work which of itself draws universal sympathy, and lends a new lustre to the Catholicism of our religious country; for the cause of the Pope is our cause, and his wants are ours.

"I am very cordially, Sir,

"Your very humble and obed't serv't,

"† Ig. Bi. of Montreal."

The Witness further remarks:—

In addition to this circular for the select few, a pastoral letter for the people is published in the French papers, in which Monseigneur urges them to attend, descants on the holiness of this succor intended for the Holy Father, and states that several leading gentlemen will address the people in both languages, and that the pupils of the college will also perform some of their best musical pieces on the occasion. Altogether it is evident that the Bishop displays great zeal in this affair, and is very anxious lest the impression be produced in Rome that he has not brought the generosity of his diocese up to the mark. Of course we cannot indorse the subject, and that on many accounts. We will content ourselves with presenting to Catholics two insuperable objections to the Bishop's appeal.

The Potifical loan is a sanction of usury, and its indorsement by Monseigneur an act of inconsistency,—a contradiction of all that the Canadian Bishops and clergy have written and preached on the honest rate of interest and against usurers. The orthodox six per cent. is now dropped, and the rate of a little over seven and a half adopted; this being held out as a special inducement to the people, and particularly to poor mechanics. The doctrine has hitherto been held, and even boldly advocated in the halls of legislation by the friends of the clergy, that it was unfair, wrong and contemptible, to take advantage of your brother's necessity by loaning him money at a higher rate than six per cent. It is but recently, and, as was alleged by the Catholic press under Protestant influence that the severe prohibitory laws in this respect have been relaxed. And now, that the Holy Father is hard up, his devout children in Canada will lend him money only at a usurious rate! Is this Catholic principle and devotedness to the Vicar of God?

But this is not all. The Pope, before he can obtain the money, must submit to a shave on the part of his Canadian children of no less than 34 per cent. The obligation for $100, and to be paid hereafter in full by the Holy Father, is issued at $66. This large share, added to the high interest, renders the operation usurious to a certain degree seldom attempted by our worst usurers in Canada. These shaves cannot compare in magnitude with that about to be forced on the Pope by some of his Canadian children. If a usurer in the rural parts charged 12 or 15 per cent. for his money, the rate was deemed atrocious, the man hard-hearted, and his sin great. But a shave of 34 per cent! And such a transaction is urged upon the people by Monsigneur and by all the Catholic clergy! If, after this, the people in the rural parts are worse ground down than ever by usurers, they will know to whom to trace the responsibility of the mischief done them. Usurers will talk boldly, and with a clear conscience. They will tell the poor French farmer, that since it was right for an infallible Pope to submit to a discount of 34 per cent. they show great favor by exacting a shave of only 15 or 20 per cent. from a man of less credit, and that this is within the limits endorsed by the clergy.

We have only one remark more to make about this loan. What does the Pope want the money for? In order to sustain an army arrayed in behalf of despotism against Italian liberty. This Canadian money is required to pay foreign mercenaries to crush a Catholic people, who, left to themselves, would no more submit to the to the political government of the priests than French Canadians would. If the usurious principle of the loan is extremely objectionable,—at least in a religious and Catholic point of view,—its object is a great deal worse. It is unfair, unjust, inexpressibly mean, not to say criminal, for a free people to aid by their money the crushing of the liberties of another nation. Those who do it must expect to lose all claim to sympathy if they ever complain of the unjust treatment to their own nationality. Since French Canadian Catholics contended for their own national right, and watch jealously every shadow of an infringement of it, let them also respect the rights of the Italian nationality, and refrain from sending money to Rome in order to crush Romans.

The ecclesiastical brokers who recommend this Pontifical loan, tempt the people by the prospect of large profits. A better advice can be given to them even on the score of a selfish, personal interest. Do not loan your money to the Pope, for you are sure to lose it. The temporal power is tottering; the Catholic powers are gradually withdrawing their support; the foreign legions at Rome will before long either vanish or be driven from the land, and this with the applause of the Catholic nations of Europe. The Pope is not likely ever to be in a position to repay your money, and when he is bankrupt there is no court on earth before which you can sue him to recover what you have lost through the allurements of unhallowed gain.

BOUND FOR LONDON.—At three o'clock yesterday afternoon 27 men of H. Battery, 4th Brigade, arrived here on the express train on the Great Western Railway, bound for London, to join the Battery already stationed in that place. Lieut. Alleyne was in command. The men appeared in excellent spirits and quite delighted with Canada, so far. Sergeant Butworth, of the Toronto Field Battery accompanied them to their destination. A number of the men of other Batteries were also on board the same vessel, the Moravian, which brought them out from the old country.—Hamilton Spectator.

STRENGTH OF THE BRITISH FORCES.—When the reinforcements now embarking reach Canada we shall have quite a respectable army in our North American provinces. There are now two brigades of artillery and fifteen battalions of infantry, of which letter eleven are in Canada, two in Nova Scotia, and two in New Brunswick. An additional force of artillery, a regiment of cavalry and three more battalions of infantry will have been landed by the end of the month, when the total of the regular forces will not be less than about 16,000 of all arms.—Sunday Gazette.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We deeply regret to record the occurrence of another sad accident resulting from carelessness by parties near machinery. Mr. Montgomery, a farmer in Alnwick, had a threshing machine at work on Thursday last, the 20th instant A Mrs. Graham was seeking some straw for the purpose of plaiting, and came near the machine. A sheaf was thrown towards her and fell near the tumbling shaft. On stooping forward to pick it up, her clothes accidently came in contact with the revolving shaft, and before the machine could be stopped she received such injuries as to cause death.—Cobourg Sun.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A correspondent informs us that on Saturday, the 1st of September, while a party of men were engaged in raising a barn in the Township of Montegle, a log which had been raised up to the corner of the building slipped and carried down with it a German named Batts. His body was so severely bruised that death ensued about six hours after. Deceased leaves two orphan children totally unprovided for.—Belleville Paper.

THE BANK OF UPPER CANADA.

From the Trade Review.

We regret to announce the failure of the Bank of Upper Canada. This bank has gradually been losing public confidence for a long time; the stringency of the money market brought matters to a crisis; a run was open it by bill-holders encouraged; and after payment on Saturday till 3 o'clock on the 16th instant, the bank at Toronto and its branches closed the doors. The Directors have not yet issued any statement but the bank will undoubtedly go into liquidation. In the difficulties experienced by the institution the past three years it must have lost much of its valuable business connection. In consequence of severe losses the shares were reduced, a few years ago, from $50 to $30; and during the last session of Parliament power was obtained to further cut them down to $20. For two years no dividend has been paid, and the value of the stock in the market for some time has not exceeded $3 per share.

The depositors and holders of its notes will probably be paid nearly in full, and ought at present, we think, to obtain 75 to 80c. on the dollar, as present value.

The condition of the bank, as set forth in the statement to the Provincial Auditor, 31st July, 1866, is as follows:—

When we add to these assets the paid-up capital of the bank, $1,937,287, and take into account the double liability of the stockholders to other creditors, the note-holders and other creditors of the bank will perceive that they have a large margin over one hundred per cent of the liabilities.

The bank finds the severe pressure in the money market which for some time has existed in a serious degree. From the 1st of last August its circulation was reduced $150,000; its deposits were reduced over half a million, and its coin from $367,044 to about $1c0,000. The bank, feeling its dangerous condition, made known its situation, and applied to the Government, last week for assistance. The Government advanced it $50,000. Its manager (Mr. Cassels) asked $50,000 more; but the bank not receiving this latter amount, and the run upon it still continuing, the doors were closed.

This bank is one of oldest in Upper Canada, and for nearly twenty-five years has been a leading institution. Its failure is an unfortunate circumstance in many respects, and will no doubt produce some inconvenience and embarrassment.

A cotemporary very truly remarks that its greatest misfortune originated in its departure from the regular and legitimate banking, discount and exchange business, to loan money on inconvertible real estate,—wild lands which afforded about as good security for present realization as Arctic ice, and village lots where villages have never grown. Its present Directors have struggled with great perseverance to overcome this mistake, and had it not been for the removal of the Government deposits three years ago, they might possibly have succeeded.—Since that period the bank has had to pass an ordeal of uncommon severity, which would have crushed it sooner had it not retained a remarkable share of popular affection. It was par excellence, the people's and farmer's bank in the Western Province, and people clung to it even in the hardest times. This is fully exemplified in the large amount due the depositors, and the unhesitating manner in which its notes passed current until within a few days. The Grand Trunk Railway followed the example of the Government some months ago, and removed its account from the Bank of Upper Canada to the Bank of Montreal, we believe. The Great Western Railway also removed its account a very short time ago—so late, we believe, as last week—going back to the Commercial Bank, with which it has so long been at war, but is now again at peace The removal of these three—by far its largest accounts—has, of course, had a good deal to do with the present crush. We believe the Bank of Upper Canada is the first chartered bank which has failed in the Province.

We have just received the Toronto Globe of the 19th instant, and find in it the following remarks:—

"Let it be clearly understood that not one shilling of loan can possibly result to the public from the stoppage of the Bank of Upper Canada. The stockholders may lose part of their capital, possibly the whole of it, but the bill-holders and depositors must be paid every penny that is due them. The assets of the bank are amply sufficient to pay all its creditors; and even were it not so, the stockholders are a large and wealthy body, and they are personally responsible for the debts of the bank to double the amount of stock they hold.

"Let not, then, any holder of Upper Canada Bank bills, or any depositor, sacrifice his debt under the influence of panic. The worst that can happen to him is to be kept out of his money for a time. The whole amount of notes in circulation is about $750,000; the deposits of individuals made up nearly the same amount; and the debt due the Government is about $1,200,000. The whole liabilities of the bank are under three millions of dollars. To meet this, there is specie, $100,000; Government debentures, $200,000; Postal and Municipal debentures, $400,000; Bills Receivable, $500,000, and Real Estate, $1,750,000. No doubt it will take a considerable time to realize these assets; but in the meantime the promissory notes held by the bank will be maturing, the bills of the bank must be taken in payment of these notes, and thus the bank note circulation will be very soon absorbed."

For the information of Bill-holders we give the following from the Globe of yesterday:—

"The question of time is a much more serious one. Three eminent Council have, it is alleged, joined in the opinion that until the assets of the Bank have been exhausted, the stockholders cannot be called on to pay any money under the double liability provision. Now, that is a most important point, for it is very obvious that years cannot elapse, in any case, before the vast landed estate can be sold, and the Bills Receivable realised. If this opinion holds good, the Bill-holders and Depositors must look to being paid by instalments, as the assets are realized, probably extending over some years.

To such of the Bill-holders and Depositors as do not wish to wait the realization of the assets, there is the option of selling their claims now at their market value. Notes and cheques of the Bank are received in payment of promissory notes held by the Bank—and a portion of them will no doubt be absorbed in this way. It is impossible to determine at what rate it would be expedient to sell now rather than hold until the Estate is realised. Each holder must determine that for himself. The rates up to this time have varied from twenty-five to fifty per cent discount—and they will do doubt continue to rise and fall according to the proportion of buyers and sellers in the market."

THE DEBT OF THE UPPER CANADA BANK TO THE GOVERNMENT.—There is considerable discussion as to the position of this debt. It amounts to about $1,200,000, some of the instalments due under the settlement made at the withdrawal of the account having been allowed to go into default. The effect of the default was to make the whole debt immediately exigible, and we hardly think the government was justified, under the circumstances, in not making a prompt demand.—The question now, however, for the creditors and stockholders of the Bank, as well as for the public at large, is what the government will do with respect to this claim.—The Crown has a prior claim to all other creditors, which it can enforce summarily by means of a writ of extent, and it would seem that though late, prompt measures ought even now to be taken to protect the Treasury. Should that, however, be done, it is evident that it will sweep away a large part of the assets most immediately available for liquidation.—Herald.

Lately Major General Meade of the United States army, visited Kingston with three or four other United States officers. A number of the citizens were introduced to the General. Colonel Gibbon, C. B., of the royal artillery, the commandant at Kingston, called upon General Meade and offered the gallant officer and his party the use of the gunboat Heron to convey them to Ogdensburgh to which place they were going. The General accepted the offer, and when the party left, salutes were fired in their honor.

FACTS WORTH KNOWING.

Canada has many institutions of which we have reason to feel proud. Much could be said in praise of our Political, Scholastic, and Religious institutions. These are all creditable to us as a people, but there is some which has proved more serviceable than

OUR DOMESTIC MARTS.

These number eighteen, and they had a paid-up capital of $20,744,167 at the close of the year. Their average liabilities during 1865 was $21,876,213, to pay which they possessed assets to no less than $26,394,783. The public could want no better guarantee of the soundness of these institutions than the above figures exhibit. Their "average assets" were made up as follows:

Notes and Bills discounted	$44,152,063 85
Coin and Bullion	6,866,979 54
Government Securities	6,486,917 49
Landed and other Property	2,986,922 96
Balances from other Banks	2,349,494 44
Other debts due	2,367,575 96
Notes or Bills of other Banks	1,541,191 78
Total assets	$26,394,765 12

Next month (October) the largest expansion of our bank circulation generally takes place. Last year it reached no less than $14,186,813. This arose mainly from the large crops which required to be moved to the American market before the Reciprocity Treaty closed. The average circulation during the twelve months was only $9,818,953, which shows there was an expansion during October last of nearly $4,300,000. That there will be as great an expansion this season is, we think, rather doubtful

THE STRAINS ON SUBSCRIBERS

which took place throughout Canada last year were 1,463, which is a smaller number than during either of the two preceding years. The number of Coroner's inquests held was 1,430; on 24 of the bodies found, it was not deemed necessary to make an investigation. The verdicts given in the two sections of the Province were as follows:—

	Upper.	Lower.
Found dead—cause not stated	57	27
Suicide	40	16
Murder, Manslaughter, Infanticide	55	18
Drowned	105	264
Natural Causes	159	906
Intemperance, (accidents, &c., from)	38	17
Burned or Scalded	9	14
Froze—"died of exposure"	22	10
Killed on Railways	45	8
Killed by Horses and Carriages	25	5
Other Accidental Deaths	97	100
Total	602	795

This is a melancholy array, and we fear that intemperance has had far more to do in the work than appears by the above. It is painful to think how many strange deaths are directly attributable to the intoxicating cup. The cost of these inquests to the country was nearly $10,000, the exact amounts being $10,961 for Coroner's fees and expenses, and $3,652 for Constables' services.—Trade Review.

THE FENIANS AND THE FALL ELECTIONS.—If the Fenians attempt another raid on Canada, it will be before the fall elections take place. By making it at that time they will expect to paralyze the action of the Federal Executive; the calculations being that the Government will not venture to encounter their hostility just on the eve of a party contest. The Canada expedition, if there is to be one, is the time a scheme of the leaders for selling the Irish vote to the highest bidder. To get the price up to the highest point—to make both parties compete for this vote—it may be necessary to try another raid on Canada. This is the philosophy of the whole affair; but it is not the less mischievous and troublesome, for the time being, on that account. But an organization used for such purposes does not promise a very tenacious vitality. Fenianism, in the States, ought to give up the ghost after the fall elections. Its purpose will then and there have been accomplished. The Irish vote will have been sold, and the leaders will make merry on the money.—Leader.

TROOPS FROM ENGLAND.—The Great Western Railway Depot in this city, yesterday afternoon, presented quite a military appearance. About twelve o'clock the steamer Passport arrived from Montreal, having on board fifty soldiers a draft of the 60th Rifles who landed in Quebec on Tuesday, per steamship Moravian, from Winchester, England. They were under command of Lieut. Butler, and embarked on the three o'clock train, en route for London, C. W., to join their regiment, stationed in that city. They were accompanied by Surgeon W. Binden, of the 25th King's Own Borderers, of Montreal, who had the medical charge of the entire troops on board the Passport, many of whom were for Kingston, Toronto, and other places along the route.

Peterboro, September 24th, 1866.

Is health worth having? If it is, protect it—it is a jewel as easily lost as virtue, and in many cases as difficult to recover. In this climate, and more particularly at this season of the year people are very apt to take cold and suffer from sore throat, coughs, spitting of blood and pulmonary complaints generally, which if not checked immediately lead to serious consequences. The question arises—which is the quickest and most effectual remedy? Bryans Pulmonic wafers have been before the public for twenty years, and have always given perfect satisfaction, and invariably effect permanent cures when taken in season. Sold by all medicine dealers and country stores generally throughout the Province at 25cts. per box.

THE RAT HOLE FLEET.—The Yankees have send some 20 vessels loaded with stone at the mouth of Charleston Harbour, which will doubtless prevent any vessels drawing over a few feet of water, entering that port for all the time to come, this must prove a serious loss to the property owners there, but it will not at all interfere with the supplies of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" for the cure of rheumatism, Tic doloureux, neuralgia, toothache, and all complaints of that nature. Sold by Druggists everywhere, price 25cts. per bottle.

There has been a grasshopper plague in Kansas, which hid the sun and stopped the railroad cars.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY

IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

Links in the Chain.

The blast that drove the storm cloud over the heaven-shook the oak, and the acorn cup loosened from its fruit, fell on the pathway.

The cloud burst, and the rain drop filled the acorn cup.

A robin wearied by the sultry heat of an autumn day, and troubled by the fury of the storm, dropped on the path, when all was calm, and drank of the rain drop.

Refreshed and gladdened, he flew to his accustomed place in the ivy that overhung the poet's window, and there he thrilled his sweetest, happiest song.

The poet heard, and rising from his reverie, wrote a sheaf of grateful rejoicing.

The sheaf went forth into the great world, and entered its heart stirring accents by the touch of sickness.

There the sorrowful were comforted, the sick were cheered.

Many voices praised the poet. He said—'the sheaf was inspired by the robin's song—it is sweet.'

'I could not have sung so sweetly had I not been refreshed by the rain drop,' said the robin.

'I should have sunk in the earth had not the acorn cup been there to receive me,' said the rain drop.

'I had not been there to receive you, but for the angry blast,' said the acorn cup.

And so they that were comforted praised the blast; but the blast replied—

'Praise Him at whose word the stormy wind ariseth, and who from darkness can also bring light, making His mercies oftentimes to pass through unexpected channels, and bringing, in due time, by His own way, the grateful sheaf from the angry storm cloud.'

The Proof of Love.

The King of Armenia not fulfilling his engagement, Cyrus entered the country, and having taken him and all his family prisoners, ordered them instantly before him when the following conversation took place:—

'Armenius,' said he, 'you are free; for you are now sensible of your error. And what will you give me if I restore your wife to you?'

'All that I am able.'

'What if I restore your children?'

'All that I am able.'

'And you, Tigranes,' said he turning to the son, 'what would you do to save your wife from servitude?'

Now, Tigranes was but lately married, and had great love for his wife. 'Cyrus,' he replied, 'to save her from servitude, I would willingly lay down my own life.'

'Let each have his own again,' said Cyrus—and when he departed, one spoke of his clemency, another of his valor, another of his beauty and the graces of his person; upon which Tigranes asked his wife if she thought him handsome.

'Really,' said she, 'I did not look at him.'

'At whom, then, did you look?'

'At him who offered to lay down his life for me.'

Greater love as no man than this—that he should lay down his life for his friends. Tigranes was willing to die for his wife; but while we were yet enemies, Christ died for us. How far this love all earthly love excels!

Religious Orders.

According to a Roman Catholic journal published in Mayence, there are at present 310,000 monks and nuns connected with that Church, distributed as follows:—Monks, 50,000 Franciscans, 16,000 School Brethren, 8,000 Jesuits, 6,000 Congregations of Attendants on the Sick, 5,000 Benedictines, 1,000 Dominicans 4,000 Augustines, 4,000 Carmelites, 4,000 Cistercians and Trappists, 2,000 Regulated Choir-Masters 2,000 Lazarists, 2,000 Antonians, 2,000 Antonians, 2,000 Trinists, 1,500 Redemptorists, 1,000 Brazilians, 1,000 Theatines, 1,000 Eremite Congregations; all the rest number 1,000 with the exception of the institutions of secular priests with monastic arrangements, which comprise about 3,000 members. To these last belong the German Order priests, the Mary Priests or Marists, the Oetorians, and the Sulpicians. The female orders comprise about 190,000, of which 162,000 are in Europe alone. In France, 10,000; in Italy, 30,000; in Belgium, 10,000; in Germany, 8,000; in Spain 7,000; in England, 4,000; in Switzerland, 1,340; in Poland and Hungary respectively, 1,000; in America, 20,000; Asia, 4,000; and in Africa and Australia, 1,000. They are divided into the following orders:—Sisters of Mercy (Vincentian), 28,000; Franciscan Sisters, 22,000; School Sisters, 20,000; Sisters du Sacre Cœur, 10,000; Joseph Sisters, 8,000; Sisters of our Dear Lady, 8,000; of Notre Dame, 7,000; Ursulines, 7,000; Sisters of the Holy Cross, 6,000; Carlo Borromeo Sisters of Mercy, 5,000, Dominicans, 4,000; Carmelites, 3,000; Augustines, 3,200; Daughters of Wisdom, 2,500; Cistercians, 2,000 others, 2,000. Then some other institutions, such as the Beguines in Belgium, the Poor Servant-maids of Christ in Germany, the Daughters of the Holy Spirit, the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, the Dames of Mercy, in France and England, the Sisters of Nazareth in France, America and Nazareth itself, which comprise together about 44,000 members.

WEALTH OF THE ANCIENTS.—Crœsus possessed, in landed property, a fortune equal to £1,700,000, besides money, slaves, and furniture, amounting to an equal sum. He used to say that a citizen who had not sufficient to support an army or a legion did not deserve the title of a rich man.—The philosopher Seneca had a fortune of £3,500,000. Tiberius at his death left £19,624,000, which Caligula spent in twelve months. Vespasian, in ascending the throne, estimated all the expenses of the State at £35,000,000. The debts of Milo amounted to £680,000. Cæsar, before he entered upon any office, owed the sum of £2,500,000. He had purchased the friendship of Curio for £500, and that of Lucius Paulus for £300,000. At the time of the assassination of Julius Cæsar, Antony was in debt to the amount of £3,000,000; he owed the sum on the Ides of March, and it was paid by the Kalends of April. He spent £147,000,000. Appius spent in debauchery £500,000, and finding, on examination, of his affairs, that he had only £80,000, poisoned himself because he considered that sum insufficient for his maintenance. Cæsar gave Servilia, the mother of Brutus, a pearl of the value of £10,000. Cleopatra, at an entertainment she gave to Antony dissolved in some vinegar a pearl worth £80—not several hundred pounds, as is commonly stated—and he swallowed it.

At the celebration of a marriage, where there were a large number of young ladies present, the minister said, "those wishing to be joined in the holy bonds of matrimony, will please stand up," and nearly all the young ladies arose!

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to imbibe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jo! or I"—" Exactly I"—Helen Edwards said; they were there "every time." If he felt "low-key" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

For permanent cures any better authority; but as seems easy, just read the following:

* * * * I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y.

* * * * I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me.

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

* * * I had lost all appetite—was so weak and emaciated I could barely walk, and had a perfect dread of society. * * The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo.

* * * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 284 Broadway, N. Y.

MRS. O. M. DRYDE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as when people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have stood the test of years in every town, village, parish and climate, among civilized nations. Base imitators who counterfeit our name and style as they do all successful articles, cannot be safe for a poor one, they find some sensible, discriminating people who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Spavin of my drivers cable, contracted while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on men and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Featherstone Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top. An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

Helmstreit's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

Poetry.

There is no Death.

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore;
And bright in heaven's jewelled crown
They shine forevermore.

There is no death! The dust we tread
Shall change beneath the summers showers,
To golden grain or mellow fruit,
Or rainbow tinted flowers.

The granite rocks disorganize
To feed the hungry moss they bear,
The forest leaves drink daily life
From out the viewless air.

There is no death! the leaves may fall,
The flowers may fade and pass away—
They only wait, through wintry hours,
The coming of the May.

There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread,
He bears our best loved things, away,
And then we call them 'dead.'

He leaves our hearts all desolate—
He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers;
Transplanted into bliss, they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

The bird-like voice, whose joyous tones
Made glad this scene of sin and strife,
Sings now in everlasting song
Amid the tree of life.

And where he sees a smile too bright,
Or hears too pure for taint and vice,
He bears it to that world of light—
To dwell in Paradise.

Selections.

The Battle of Garscube.

A STORY OF THE LAST CENTURY.

(Concluded.)

The day was one of those more in unison with the climate of Italy than that of Scotland. There was not a single cloud in the visible horizon, nor a breath of wind to temper the rays of a scorching sun.—The soldiers, unaccustomed to the tight lacing of their scarlet jackets, and laden with heavy muskets and well-filled cartouch-boxes, had not proceeded far on their march before every individual felt himself in an unusually "melting mood;" and when at length the corps approached the spot which was to prove the field of its fame, every mouth was as parched as though it had been subjected to the sirocco of the Arabian desert, while every eye looked more eagerly for an engagement with a tavern or a rivulet than with a rebel or rioter. On approaching the bridge of Garscube, the colonel halted the regiment, and sent forward a detachment to reconnoitre. The light company to which I belonged, having been selected for this important duty, we immediately hurried on at double quick; and, in due conformity with the established rules of military tactics, took possession, though without opposition, of the bridge, as the key to a position on the right bank of the Kelvin. When the regiment had reached the tete du pont, the colonel looked on every hand for the enemy, but lo! not even the ghost of a rioter came within the range of his visional organs. A few idle women chattered in knots, and criticised with apparent delight our dusty and broiling condition, while a band of boys, seemingly just relieved from the ferula of the schoolmaster, hailed us with the reiterated and elegant salutation of "The brosey weavers."*

If what was to be done appeared an enigma to the corporal as well as the colonel, what ought to be done was to all abundantly evident. The hour, the walk and the heat of the day, all conspired in making a powerful appeal to the mind and the materialism of every volunteer. Exhausted nature loudly implored the assistance of the commissariat, while the incipient idea of laying the country under a general contribution flitted simultaneously athwart every brain, and demanded immediate realization. Whether the conception of this foraging foray was or was not strictly in accordance with the colonel's conduct at St. Hillier's, it is not necessary to inquire; but no sooner had we grounded arms at the bridge of Garscube, than a council of war was summoned to consider of ulterior proceedings, and particularly of the best means of defeating the annoying attacks of General Hunger, and combating the no less terific onsets of his fearful auxiliary, Thirst. The result of a conference was a resolution, carried nem. con., that while a small party should be left to keep the rallying position of the bridge, the remainder of the corps should be permitted to ferret out for themselves what was individually requisite. Three hundred soldiers, with stomachs like those of the cormorant, and throats as dry as a potsherd, would have required a land more celebrated for milk and honey than that around Garscube. As it was, however, each individual seemed determined to cater for himself; and no sooner was the order given for a general forage, than off flew the whole volunteers like locusts over the face of the country.—To sack a dairy and ransack a hen-roost became immediately the general occupation. At least a dozen of red coats were seen inlisting themselves on every farm-house, draining their churns, and stowing away their cheese and bannocks; while the few public houses scattered along the road-side were relieved on that memorable day of all their stale beer, sour porter, and humphed ham. Never had there been seen in the parish so urgent a demand for everything in the shape of meat or drink, nor more handsome payment known for what could be obtained; for though the volunteers bore bayonets, they likewise carried purses; and to their honor be it recorded, they testified an universal desire to make the people feel that they owed their entertainment to their silver, and not to their steel.

The foraging party to which I belonged consisted of two beside myself. One of these was an individual whose round rosy cheeks bore indubitable tokens of having takes regular toll of everything that had passed through his mouth; while the other had jaws so lank and skinny, that they might have served for a lantern. The former, hating an unconquerable propensity for breaking the third commandment, was an honest-hearted Christian, and an universal favorite; while the latter was a French emigre, with all the politesse and prejudices of the ancient regime. Besides being a Frenchman, my foraging companion also played the French-horn; on account of which accomplishment he had been admitted into the band. Having remarked some blue smoke curling through a thicket of trees, and judging wisely that a snug cottage would be there embosomed, we made a steeple chase for the spot, and soon found ourselves in the audience chamber of a bustling matron, actually engaged in freeing a large churn of its butter.

* Brosey weavers, in derision, they might be called; but most of them had both in their pockets and on their bones the wherewithals that showed significantly how well they were enabled at all times to march gallantly to the tune of Brose and Butter.

'Gude save us, gudewife,' exclaimed my punchy friend as we entered the apartment; 'I fin' we're just come in the nick o' time! Lord, woman, gie us a waught o' that sour milk as fast as you like, for we're a' on the point of choking. What a deevel of a bet day this has been for marching!'

'What brocht ye sae far frae hame on sic a day?' said the matron jestingly; 'and whan you left it what obleeged ye to bear sic a burden? We kintra folk are no sa taen up wi' sodgering—we would rather bide at hame and mind our wark. You're no come, I hope, to countenance thae dules that would tak our gudemen awa frae their hames, against their ain will and the will o' th' Almighty—that would mak our children fatherless and ourselves widows. It's a bonny like story, indeed; tak my word for it, nae gude can come o' this militia trade. Its quite contrar baith to the law and the gospel. If you're come to talk to the gudeman about that matter, I maun tell you he's nae at hame, nor winna be; so ye'll just tak your drap drink and gang your ways.'

'Pardonnez-moi, madame,' whispered my companion, Monsieur Collon, advancing towards the alarmed matron, kneeling down and kissing her hand; 'vous vous trompez assurement; you mak von grand mistake, madam. By gar, ve no come to dis house not like de voleurs to rob you of anything, far less of Monsieur votre mari. Oh mon Dieu! de tout, de tout. We no want your husband at all Ah, comme vous etes jolie, aimable! quels beaux yeux! By gar——'

'Tuts, man, gie up and dinna be fasbous,' interrupted the matron. 'Are ye daft or ghaikit? What in't ye're haverin about? I dinna understau' thae blethers at a'.—See and lay your lugs in that bicker. You look as tho' you were nea that ow'rften at hame at meal time; and since ye tell me that ye ha naithin to say to the gudeman, I maun e'en try to bring you something better, as I jalouse your walk will hae gien ye a drouth like the packman's.'

Having offered our best thanks for the dame's kindness, she placed before us a large kebbock, a basketfull of oaten cakes, and a bottle of mountain dew, to which my jolly companion and I paid our instant obeisance. The 'gudewife' seeing the Frenchman rather bashful and backward in partaking of the feast, turned towards him and said, 'Come, come, Maister Scantocreesh, just fa' tae, like your friend there, and dinna let your modesty wrang ye.'

'Ah Madame, vous me flattez trop,' said the musician. 'By gar, you do me infinite honour. This bottermilk'—taking a draught—'is beautiful—superbe magnifique—pretty well! Dis is your vin du pays, n'est-ce pas? Permit that I drink your got-o-hel!'

'Tuts, man, what are you gab-gabbling at!' said the matron, 'tak your pick and your drap, and keep your palavers for them that understan' them.'

Monsieur Collon immediately drew in a chair and commenced operations; and, in the true spirit of Dugald Dalgetty, tucked in what might at least serve him for the next twenty-four hours. Thinking that the repast on the musician's part merited a digester, I pointed to the bottle and suggested to him the propriety of taking some of the stomach-soothing elixir.

'Pardonnez-moi monsieur,' said the Frenchman, shrugging his shoulders. 'Dat blue ruin, as de Englishman call it, do always put my whole head tonjours into one flame. I vill rader take von oder drop of the Scottish vin du pays; so saying he approached the churn, which at that moment was standing at about an angle of seventy-five degrees, for the more effectually freeing it of its contents.

'What,' said my rosy cheeked companion, 'more of that stuff yet? Lord save us! That's awful!'

'Ne derangez-vous pas—I love dis ver much, and vil now tak von oder gran drink of it,' putting his head into the churn. The gude wife, seeing the Frenchman's powdered wig and jaundiced visage within the precincts of what she, of all things, considered as sacred to cleanliness, and hearing him lapping the buttermilk, ran towards him exclaiming, 'De'il's in the worriecow, is he gaun to pollute my bail kirn o' milk wi' his ill-faured greasy gab and moosty pash!' while she accompanied the exclamation with a smart blow on the musician's back. Monsieur Collon, eager at the draught, and about precisely poised on the churn, no sooner received the blow, than it threw him off his balance, and to the utter dismay of all present, he was instantly seen to pop head foremost into the gaping vessel. The Frenchman's heels were of course the next moment kicking in the air, while a loud gurgling noise issued from the churn that demanded instant attention. In the twinkling of an eye I dashed forward, seized the struggling musician by the limbs, and with one effort extricated the poor fellow from his wooden surtout. But what words can describe, or what pencil delineate, the absurd and ridiculous appearance of the half-drowned horn-blower! Gasping for breath and struggling for vision, he stood before us in all the insignia of this new order of the Bath, with a countenance whose yellow wrinkles poured down streams of buttermilk, while adown his long queue a torrent rushed from the well-soaked fountain of his wig. The matron was in the deepest distress for having been the innocent cause of such a mishap to the poor Frenchman; and to an infinity of apologies added every exertion in her power to restore his garb and his temper to their former propriety.

While Monsieur Collon was busily making up matters with the matron and her mirror, the roll of a distant drum awakened our attention, and warned us of the necessity of an immediate retreat. Having each pulled a piece from our purse, we pressed it on the gudewife; but it was not till we qualified the gift by telling her to lay it out on something for her daughter, that she would consent to touch our silver.

On regaining the bridge, we learnt that the troop of Glasgow volunteer cavalry had, previous to our arrival, dispersed the whole pitchfork beliggerent band of malcontents, who, after burning the parish records of Kilpatrick, had taken up a position on a neighboring hill. There being no further danger apprehended, the idea—a fearful one to those accustomed to feather-beds—of our corps bivouacking that night on the lawn of Garscube was abandoned. The colonel, after a lengthy tarangue, in which he declared that the regiment under his command had that day done immortal honour to itself, and, as usual, mixed up the sermon with what he had himself accomplished on the 6th of January, 1781, at last gave the welcome word of "Right about, face," and off marched the volunteers at a smart pace for the city.

As we trudged along the road, more occupied with the freaks of the foray than the freaks of our progress, a furious-looking dog was seen to rush down from a farm standing a little off the road, whose appearance gave strong and determined symptoms of combativeness. On observing it approaching, I instantly halted, and called out to my punchy foraging companion, 'Huzza! G——; there's an enemy at last for you—will you meet him?' 'By gom! that's an awfu' ill-faured neebour,' said my friend; 'shall it be blood?' And, without wasting a reply, up went the musket to his shoulder—off went the shot; but, alas! on came the mastiff. The danger was imminent; the dog looked as bold as a lion. 'Charge bayonets!' cried I;—'a la victoire!' blew M. Collon; and in a moment the supposed disseminator of hydrophobia received such a tickling of the steel as sent him to the right-about in a twinkling. My portly friend, however, was not to be satisfied with merely flanking the enemy. He had determined that no quarter should be given, and bent on signalizing himself, he made another fearful thrust at the retreating foe. Happily for the dog, but most unfortunately for the volunteer, the lunge missed its object, the steel pierced the earth, and over went my friend headforemost into the ditch, at the expense too, of his bayonet, which snapt asunder under the force and pressure of seventeen stone!

After this tulzie with the mastiff, nothing remarkable happened till we arrived within a mile of Glasgow. Here, however, a scene occurred that is yet fresh in my recollection, while it still occasions considerable merriment among the small knot of septuagenarians that gazed upon it then.—The rear-guard having telegraphed the approach of cavalry, the colonel instantly threw the battalion into a position to receive them, and sent out a few skirmishers to reconnoitre. On these falling back with the intelligence that the commander of the advancing corps (which was the Glasgow light horse) had given the countersign and parole, the colonel wheeled us into line, and when the dragoons were in the act of passing, ordered a general salute. The glittering of the fire-locks and the noise of the music created, as might be supposed, a very considerable confusion among individuals who were almost as ignorant of a cover as a campaign—a confusion which the captain, from having his charger burthened with a prisoner, who most unmilitarily occupied the front of the saddle, felt some difficulty to calm. But if the majority of this troop of classeurs felt rather uneasy in their saddles on this saluting occasion, there was one in particular in the rear whose position and countenance betokened anything but security and self-possession.—The gulloway which this awkward wight bestrode being as fiery as the proboscis of her rider, no sooner fixed her eye on so many new faces than she showed an evident disposition to dissolve immediately her present copartnery. The perilous prancings and curious curvettings that succeeded having attracted attention, what was the astonishment of all to find that the light dragoon was no other than the would-be Bailie Lawbroad, whose picture the barber had drawn so graphically in the morning. It was now evident that the poor deacon's desire for notoriety had led him a rather dangerous dance, since it was plain to all that his seat would not long remain either a secure or a sinecure. Guiltless alike of all the rules of Gamboda and of Pembroke, the tailor soon lost command of his steed, while the persuaders, from the early habit which the wearer had acquired of drawing up his legs when in danger, having been brought to bear rather unceremoniously on the flanks of the mare, made her an unceremoniously throw up her heels, and eject the dragoon from her saddle. The animal, finding the rider embracing her rather too kindly round the neck, and feeling the usual restrainers dangling about her ears, set off at full gallop, and it was now a hundred guineas to a goose that the cheesier would, ere a few minutes, be gazetted a field officer. To the fore-pads, as the volunteers were opprobriously designated by their brethren on horseback, the appearance of a trooper charging in the manner of the deacon was anything but gall and wormwood; and no sooner did the corps recognize the copper nose of the snip in a John Gilpin attitude, than they in defiance of all order, simultaneously roared out, 'There goes the tailor riding to Brentford!' The loud shout followed by a louder bang of the bass drum having put more metal into the gulloway's heels, she soon shot ahead of the troop, and having shyed and flung up her heels, at an abrupt turn of the road, off went the tailor over the hedge into a corn field, and on went the mare over the toll-bar to the corn chest, which she soon reached, to the utter consternation of the snip's anxious consort who awaited his arrival.

The deacon, though a little alarmed, was far more comfortable than he had been for many minutes before, on finding himself, like Commodore Trunnion, thus safely riding at anchor. The colonel, fearing, however, that some medical assistance might be requisite, and recollecting that the troop boasted only a farrier, instantly despatched his orderly for the volunteer surgeon, who rode in the rear of the corps. This son of Esculapius, though at the head of his profession, was a gentleman of a most somnolent disposition, and what is more singular, his steed partook of the poppy-juice qualities of his master. Yet there was this happy peculiarity about the horse and the rider, that both were never found in the arms of Morpheus together. On this occasion the surgeon having no gun-shot wounds to attend to, had given way to his usual propensity at leaving Garscube, while his horse continued so sharply awake, as to have carried his master through the whole manoeuvres which the regiment had performed on the march. The surgeon being roused from his snooze by the orderly, instantly galloped off to the assistance of the trooper, who had, however, previous to his reaching the ground, got fairly on his legs, and was taking considerable credit for throwing himself off so neatly. After putting a finger to the tailor's pulse, and passing his hand over his limbs, the doctor declared him free from blemish, and that there was no necessity for prescribing any other medicine than a walk to the city. Both having, then, taken their position in the rear of the regiment, it proceeded onward, and soon found itself within the precincts of Glasgow.

On entering the city the band immediately struck up "Caller Herring," the sound of which made every window fly open, and suggested to every cook the necessity of making instant preparation for the approach of her hungry master. Fearing, however, that the instructive melody might not altogether tell on the deaf ears of my old handmaid, Girzy, my fat friend, who had agreed to take a stouk with me, no sooner saw the housekeeper at the window than he bawled out at the top of his voice, "Girzy, my lass, you may put on the taties noo!" Scarcely had the pleasing sound reached the ears of old Girzy than I was accosted by the well-known Gaudeo to valere of Ritchie Falconer, who after sarcastically exclaiming 'Fortuna favet fortibus,' breathlessly inquired what had befallen his customer the deacon, and told us of the consternation of his wife. The story of the tailor's mishap satisfied the barber, while the appearance of Lawbroad himself quieted the prognostications of his anxious helpmate.

The corps, on reaching its usual place of rendezvous, was immediately dispersed, while the soldiers hurried home to calm the fears of their wives, mothers and sisters.—In the evening the club-rooms of the city rang with unusual mirth and jollity. Each roo' echoed back the scenes of the day and of the foray, but among them all none occasioned more fun and laughter than the tale of the churn and the promotion of the tailor.

Thus began and thus ended the ever-memorable day of the Battle of Garscube—a day unstained with blood, unsurpassed by heat, alike famous for its foray and for the capture of one prisoner—a day, in short which proved the brightest gem in the garland of Glasgow volunteer glory, and has afforded as noble a theme of conversation to the pig-tailed soldiers of the Scottish western metropolis as that of St. Hillier's did to their gallant commander.

The Glasgow corps of volunteers, which so eminently distinguished itself on that eventful occasion, scarcely survived the close of the century that gave it birth, while the generality of the happy faces that grinned with delight at the lugubrious plight of Deacon Lawbroad, have now, as Hamlet says, "a few left to mock their grinning;" and had I not, perhaps, been reminded the other day of the immortal action of this gallant corps, by perusing the equally deathless deed of its bounty, on the wall of the Royal Infirmary Hall,* I might possibly have never dreamt of becoming the humble annalist of its military glory.

* They gave the whole of the regimental stock-purse amounting to £1,200, to that valuable institution.

KISSING A BACHELOR.—A correspondent relates the following incident:—"We have a friend—a bachelor friend—very fond of the society of the ladies, but extremely modest and diffident withal. A few evenings since he went to make a call upon an acquaintance who had recently taken to himself a wife, young and beautiful, and, as a matter of course, overflowing with affection for her husband. Now this lovely wife of a week, like all other wives, could scarcely survive the brief absence of her husband for the discharge of his business, and always upon his return met him upon the threshold, and smothered him with kisses. It so happened, when our friend called, that the husband was absent, but was momentarily expected by the fond and anxious wife. She heard his footfall upon the step, and, supposing it to be her husband, rushed forth to meet him; and he has scarcely put his hand upon the bell-pull before the door flew open, and his neck was encircled by a pair of white arms, and burning kisses fell thick and fast upon his lips and cheeks—while a full and throbbing breast was strained to his. Here was a trying situation for a diffident man, and our friend came near to fainting on the spot; but, fortunately, the lady discovered her mistake in season to prevent such a melancholy event, and he escaped more dead than alive. The last we saw of him, he was leaning against a tree, fanning himself with his sombero, in order to recover strength to regain his lodgings.—N. Y. Home Journal.

A Persian philosopher being asked by what method he had acquired so much knowledge, replied, "By not being prevented by shame from asking questions respecting things of which I was ignorant."

A Memorable Month to Europe.

Peter Hayne, the London correspondent of the Watchman and Reflector, makes the following statement respecting the changes witnessed in Europe during the month of July:—

The July of 1866 will rank among the notable months of world history. It came in with the laying of the Atlantic Telegraph; and the Europe on which the sun of the [illegible] rose from that on which the sun of the first evening went down. On the first of July Napoleon III. was unquestionably the foremost man in Europe. He believed himself to be, and others believed him to be, the arbitrator in her disputes, the umpire against whose decisions none of her potentates would dare appeal. On the last of July Napoleon III. was by universal consent, the second man in Europe, eclipsed, thwarted, outmanœuvered by a Prussian minister, who, a few years ago, had been known only as the fanatically vehement and eccentrically absurd advocate of re-actionary notions in the Prussian Parliament. On the first of July, though already the swiftly advancing army of Prussia, converging from many points towards the great battle-field of Sadowa, had attracted the attention and won the respect of the European public, the general feeling throughout Germany was one of exasperation on account of Prussian arrogance and resolution to defy Prussian aggression. On the last of July a revolution had taken place in the thoughts of men throughout all the German countries. Bismark is no longer looked upon as an oppressor and a robber, but as the representative man of the German race, sympathizer with its deepest wants, the conquerer whose victories can be formidable only to the enemies of Germany, and must be for the honor and protection of all the children of Fatherland. On the first of July the German Confederation, the ultimate form of that old Roman and German Empire which for a thousand years imposed upon the imagination of mankind, was still in existence; on the last of July it had been swept from the face of the earth, its elements had been thrown into new combinations, and the very possibility of its resuscitation had apparently been annihilated. On the first of July that power which, in the modern system of European affairs, has been the main support of Popery,—that power to which, as he feels his temporal sovereignty slipping from his grasp, the Pope has looked wistfully and not without hope, as a refuge both from Italy and Prussia,—was in command of an army which though checked, had not been conquered, and which was still believed by many to be capable of trampling down the squadrons of Prussia, and of dictating conditions of peace in the streets of Berlin. On the last of July Austria had been vanquished and humiliated, forced to relinquish her place among the powers of Germany, compelled to give up Venetia, driven back, with all she represents of obstruction and sacerdotalism, into the east of Europe, so that free course may be left for the onward march of civilization in the west.

OIL VS. INSECTS.

Many years ago we were interested in some experiments made by some medical students on the destruction of insect life by oil. The slightest drop of sweet oil, put on the back of a hornet, beetle, bee, or similar thing, caused its instant destruction. We are told that the breathing pores are closed by the oil,—and life was literally smothered out. In after life, greasy water was always a favorite mode with us of destroying insects,—and we have repeatedly urged it upon the readers of this journal.—Yet we are astonished to find how little the hint has been acted upon. Almost every day we meet people who ask how to destroy this insect or that,—and our drawer is filled with similar inquiries; and to all the idea of grease or oil seems as new a one as if we had kept the matter a most profound secret.

Of the millions of people in the United States, how few are there who would not "give anything," as they say, to know how to keep away the cabbag-fly from their seed-beds,—yet about a tablespoonful of coal oil put in a common garden-pot of water, sprinkled over the seed bed, when the little jumping beetle is noticed as having appeared, will instantly destroy the whole brood.

A correspondent of this journal recently gave us an article on the virtues of coal oil as killing scale insects. We have repeated the experiment on some Daphnes with entire success.

In short we have no doubt that coal oil, well diluted with water, is death to all kinds of insects, and there is no reason why it should not be in as general use as tobacco is for killing aphides; it is more valuable in fact, because it can be applied in so many cases where smoke can not.

One great point in favor of coal oil is that it acts as a manure to vegetation, while dealing out death to insects. We have seen in cabbage beds nearly destroyed by the cabbage fly, the whole crop of beetles destroyed almost instantaneously, while in a few days afterwards the plants, as if by magic, would cover the bed with luxuriant leaves.

We do not believe that the undiluted oil would prove injurious to the leaves, but such extravagance is unnecessary, as the small quantity we have given is effectual.

No doubt the egg plant fly, and all insects that can be reached by the oil, can be destroyed.

We may add that any oil is as good as coal oil,—but that, being likely to be more easily obtained when wanted, is recommended, also care must be used to keep the water in the pot stirred when used, so that a portion of the oil gets out as the water runs,—otherwise the oil floating on the top of the water will stay there till all the water goes out, and only the oil be left for the last. For this reason, a syringe, in many cases, will be preferable to the water-pot re the oil and water will have a better chance of getting out.—Gardeners' Monthly.

The Mexican Finances.

There are circumstances under which communities may submit for a time without murmurs, but those conditions are not to be found in the case of governments originating in the schemes of alien speculators, political or pecuniary. The gentlemen who bought up the claims of Jecker at a liberal discount are not the parties to cling to the "country of their choice" at the sacrifice of their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honors. The political philosopher who has undertaken a conquest to enable the Latin race to make more money than the Teutonic, will hardly persevere when every soldier he sends forth is found to destroy more wealth than a whole commune can produce. On the question of the Mexican Empire, therefore, he may claim to speak by the card who speaks by the figures.

Before the expedition was undertaken the annual expenditures of the French government were about $300,000 000. In 1852 they reached $442,500,000; in 1863 $538,400,000; and in 1864, $534,000,000. The difference for three years is $152,400,000, while another $150,000,000 has been borrowed by Maximilian in France on the guarantee of his Imperial brother. American finances might bear such a strain without danger; Napoleon is compelled to look more closely to his safety rate.

The convention with France, adopted on the eve of Maximilian's accession, exacted from the latter an indemnity of one thousand francs per annum for every French soldier in the country, the number of which Napoleon was at liberty to reduce to 25,000 at once, and then to withdraw at any time, binding himself only to leave the foreign legion of 8,000 troops in Mexico for three years to come.

With these "guarantees" the archduke took charge of the independence of a country which had just extinguished the last dollar of its domestic debts by the sale of the ecclesiastical domains, and which acknowledged a debt to Spanish, English and French subjects (including $1,984,000 to the Swiss Jean B. Jecker) of $81,632,560, bearing an interest of $2,760 020 per annum, including which its yearly expenses amounted to $11,078,438. For this country he has "adjusted" the Jecker claim at $5,000,000, and has contracted, all in all, an additional burden of $190,103,040, bearing $10,236,182 interest.

While the salary of Juarez was $30,000, the civil list of Maximilian, paid monthly is $1,500,000 per annum, including which the total expenditures have risen to $49,929,336 a year. Of the first eighty millions of additional debt, the bonds of which were issued at 63, and have since sunk to 46, so much was absorbed in advance reservations, differences, brokers' commissions, payments to the French army and navy, and foreign interest, that but $8,000,000 ever reached the country.—The Nation.

An Attrocious Attempt to Assassinate a Young Lady.

(From the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle, Sept. 10.)

A very mysterious and fiendish assault was made upon a young lady in this city at the home of her parents, a well-known and esteemed family, on Friday night. Her parents had gone out to spend the evening leaving their daughter, a young miss, scarcely sixteen years old, with an old trusty colored servant to keep her company. The young lady seated herself in the parlor, reading, and after a while fell asleep. The old woman was in the next room, which communicated tho' a folding door which was open, and she also fell asleep. The young lady thinks she may have slept a half-hour, when she was awoke by a severe blow on her left breast. She shrieked for help, which awoke the old woman, and brought the neighbors to her relief, when she found her dress cut and the blood flowing from a wound just below the region of the heart. Medical assistance was called, and it was found that she had been stabbed by a sharp instrument, the blade penetrated a little more than a half-inch, and inflicting an ugly but not dangerous wound.

When she awoke, her sight and the glare of the light prevented her from seeing her assailant, and no clue was left as to how the fiendish perpetrator of the act entered the house or escaped. The front door was fastened with a night latch, and the back door, leading into the yard, was open. It is altogether one of the most singular and fiendish attempts at murder that we have ever heard of.

We forbear any allusion to the surmises as to who the author of the outrage can be, as they are at least very vague and unsatisfactory. The young lady has no knowledge of having given offence to any being on earth, and it is not likely that the author of the deed will ever be discovered.

A Fatal Quarrel about a Bust of Ristori.

A dreadful tragedy occurred in Elm street, New York, on Saturday, the particulars of which are as follows:

With little or no provocation an Italian named Urania deliberately shot his employer, Funari, causing his death soon after, and then blew out his own brains, surviving the self-inflicted wound but a few seconds. The affair creates much excitement. Evidence before the coroner's jury shows Urania has been in the employ of Funari on and off for eight years—his special business being an artist. Funari wanted a bust of Ristori, telling Urania he wanted it as soon as possible, and if it sold well it would be good for them both.

Urania commenced Monday or Tuesday, and worked on it up to last night. Urania did not progress as rapidly as Funari thought he ought, and when he came this morning they had a dispute, resulting in Funari threatening to break it, as it would be no use to him if not soon finished.—Urania replied, "You will?" at the same time putting his hand in his pocket and pulling out a pistol, when Funari made a grab for him. They fell together, the pistol going off at the same time.—After that they fell down the stairs.—Urania got up and ran away. When he got to the corner of Grand and Crosby, streets, seeing so many after him, he drew his pistol and shot himself in the head.—The deceased has been in the habit of carrying a pistol and knife. He had not been thought sane at all times. He has lost a good deal of property lately, which occasioned his state of mind. The jury gave a verdict of suicide.

FAMINE IN BRITISH INDIA.—A dispatch from Calcutta, dated August 3rd, gives intelligence of a terrible famine which is raging in the districts of Orissa and Midnapore.—3,000 deaths reported from starvation in one week, and during the six weeks previous the average number of deaths from the same causes is stated to have been 2,500. It is said to be owing to the decrease in the demand for brass, gold, and silver work, and the failure of the salt manufacturers. 75,000 persons are supported entirely and fed daily by public charity; but a correspondent states that no diminution in the weekly mortality has taken place, and that gross mismanagement has been displayed throughout by the officials of the famine-stricken districts.

HOME GUARDS.

The Independent Company of Peterboro has been gazetted. Their Captain, Col. Haultain, is also in communication with the government in reference to obtaining arms and clothing. The object is to find what efficient arm can be most easily obtained, and where it can be got, also in reference to some kind of uniform. Each member will be expected to purchase his own gun and clothing and, in consequence, these things will be private property. There must, however, be some kind of order and system about the management of the company; the drill requires to be regularly and punctually attended to, if the Independents wish to compare favorably with the Volunteer Companies. Individuals joining should also understand that they require to give three months notice before withdrawing; and there should be some understanding about the arms, if another wishes to purchase with the intent of joining the independents. Hence there should be rules and regulations; but this will, no doubt, be attended to as soon as other preliminaries are settled. Drill now is the general order; Tuesday and Friday evenings are, at present, appointed for that purpose, at 8.15 punctually, and it would be well if our civilian soldiers would remember the word punctual. It would save each man a half-hour's time twice a week. The exercise is pleasant and healthful; every able-bodied man, yea every man not already a Volunteer should join the Company and make it a strong one. This now lies with the people, the government has done its part.

Silver Nuisance.

We have been requested to state that there will be a meeting of merchants and others, on Friday evening, at 7.30 p. m., in the Council Chamber, to take steps to abate the abominable nuisance of taking silver at anything but its real value. For some time this silver question has been agitated in the towns and cities, and an effort was made here to bring the silver to its proper value, but it failed because of a few holding out.—We hope that this time those who have taken the matter in hand will be more successful. Every merchant and dealer in town should attend the meeting on Friday evening and unite most heartily in the work. The evil has been borne long enough, and the cure of it can effect no one disadvantageously. The proposal is to take silver at 4 per cent. discount, just as the banks do. That will make the quarter-dollar worth about 1s 2½d, and there will be no injustice when it is both received and paid at that rate.—For some time there has been a regular speculation in silver. Parties have gone or sent to Montreal and other places, and bought it; on every $1,000 a discount of $10 was obtained, and lately 5 per cent. These then paid the silver in small sums at par.—Thus in large transactions of $10,000 the speculator clears $100 to $500, while those in small business have to take it at par, and in banking it, loose as much as the others gain. It is now proposed to make silver, like bills, pass for its value, both in receipts and payments. The farmer, the trader, the broker, and dealers of all kinds would then receive the quarter-dollar at 1s 2½d., and would be allowed the same for it. There would be perfect justice in the transaction: the trader would not be the loser, as he very often is now, and no one but the unjust speculator would forego anything. By all means let there be a full meeting. The whole thing is founded on justice, and surely justice, simple justice, will prevail. Other towns are moving in the matter.

SCHOOL PIC-NIC IN OTONABEE

A union Sabbath and day school pic-nic came off at a place called Campbelltown, in Otonabee, on Friday last. About seventy children sat down to the first table, and about twice as many full grown children, so to speak, afterward. The place was the most delightful that could have been chosen. It consisted of a beautiful spot, on the banks of the Otonabee, nicely interspersed with small pines, so that a natural covering of branches defended all from the effects of the sun, whose genial rays, for almost the first time in several days, made themselves felt. Mr. White, teacher of the children in both Sabbath and day schools, assisted by the presence and liberality of the people of the neighbourhood, certainly succeeded in affording a pleasant evening to all who attended. All present appeared to enjoy themselves very well at the tables, as the demolition of good things testified, parties feeling that the fair cooks had provided liberally for that purpose. After eating and swinging to full contentment, the children assembled under some over-hanging branches and sung several very appropriate pieces in a very happy manner. Between the pieces, Rev. Mr. Wilson, Wesleyan Minister of Keene, Rev. Mr. Cantlon, of Peterboro, and Local Superintendent of Otonabee, and Mr. Stratton, of Peterboro, offered a few remarks on the advantages Canadian children now enjoy, and what would be expected of them, in consequence, in the future; also referring to the duties of parents and teachers in reference to preparing the Canadian youth for the extended field of usefulness that presents itself to young Canadians. Dr. Macrea, of Keene was also present but had to leave a little earlier than the people desired. A most pleasant evening was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem, when all dispersed pleased with the weather, for it was fine; with the cooking, for it was excellent; with the singing, for it was melodious; and, we hope, with everything else. And if Mr. White should get up another pic-nic he will, no doubt, find numerous assistants.

Coal Oil.

For some time our coal oil men have been resting on their oars, the drill having stuck, last fall, in the bore, the directors stood quiet also. A meeting, however, was held on Tuesday evening to take into consideration what should be done, and as some representation had been made that Lakefield Oil Company would in all probability unite with the Peterboro Company for the purpose of more fully and satisfactorily testing the existence of oil in this locality, a deputation was appointed to wait on the directors of the Lakefield Company and ascertain what could be done in the matter. As soon as this is understood there will be a meeting of shareholders to carry out some scheme for the completion of the intended work of testing the existence of coal oil here. Both Companies are in a favorable position; the Lakefield Company has money on hand, the Peterboro Company has all the necessary implements for boring and pumping, and only owes about $20 or $30, to meet which there is stock uncollected to the amount of $700. We understand that Mr. Kimball, formerly of the P. H. Railway, offers to sink at the rate of $2.40 or $2.50 per foot, and find everything; but nothing will be done until it is seen what Lakefield Company will do in the matter.

Church Opening.

A friend from North Smith informs us that the meetings in connection with the opening of the Presbyterian Church in North Smith were very successful, notwithstanding the uncertain state of the weather at the time, which hindered many from attending. The meetings realized nearly $100. This sum is to be applied to pay off a small debt, part of the cost of erection. It is gratifying to learn that the remaining debt is very trifling, and no doubt will soon be paid off. This Church is a new station in connection with the labours of the Rev. Mr. Thom, of Lakefield, who now labours there. It is a healthy sign to find the work extending.

Missionary.

On Thursday evening last, as announced, the Rev. Messrs. Sims and Chance, accompanied by two Indian Chiefs from Manitoulin Island, held a missionary meeting in the Victoria Hall. Rev. Mr. Beck occupied the chair. The speeches were very interesting indeed, and instructive. Messrs. Sims and Chance assert that their labours extend over 250 miles of territory, and that they are the only protestant missionaries for over 1000 miles of the west. We had intended to give the speeches in full, but space forbids it. The audience was very small on the occasion, a sign of a not very missionary spirit in the people.

The Lectures.

Mr. McMurray, of the United Canadian Alliance has delivered two lectures here this week—one in the Wesleyan Sabbath School Room, and one in the basement of the First Presbyterian Church. The lecturer understands the subjects of temperance and intemperance well, and treated them in a masterly manner. Both lectures were eloquent and entertaining, and well repaid those who heard them for their time in attending. The attendance on Tuesday evening was small, which is to be regretted. There were several other meetings the same evening and this accounts for it.

Personal.

The members of the Volunteer Company in Norwood, and the citizens of that enterprizing little village intend entertaining T. M. Grover, Esq., Lieutenant of the Company, at a dinner, on Monday evening next; and the Company intend presenting him with a sword the same evening, in appreciation of his services as drill instructor.

Peterboro Literary Club.

The first meeting of the Season will be held in the firemen's Hall, this evening, at 8 o'clock. Subject for debate—"Is Ambition a Vice or a Virtue." Members of the Club only admitted.

Ashburnham.

There was no meeting of this Council on Monday evening. Only the Reeve present.

Town Council.

There was no meeting of this Council on Monday. Cause; no quorum.

The Committe of the Protestant Home beg to thank the following friends for contributions, during the past month:—Captain Rutbridge, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Romaine, Mrs. R. Hamilton, Mrs. W. Hamilton, Mr. Giles, Mr. Chambers, Mrs. Haultain.

In the far West, 150 whites have been killed by the Indians on the Big Horn River.

Fall Meeting of Peterboro Turf Club.

The first days' races commenced on Wednesday, 3rd October, at the course. The day was cool but fine; the ground was in good order, considering the immense amount of rain which has fallen during the last month. But a small number of spectators were present considering the length of time the races were published, the reason of this is in part accounted for by the long spell of wet weather, which has left farmers behind in their operations; and also on account of five companies of volunteers having gone from this county to the front last Saturday.

1st. RACE, PURSE OF $25.

L. McGreggor. Minie Gray, 1, 1, 1.
C. Leary, Clip, 3, 3, out.
J. Simpson, Maggie Simpson, 2, 2, 2.
H. Morgan, Fly, 4, 4, out.
Time, 1.58, 1.57, 2.00.

This race was well contested by Minie Gray and Maggie Simpson, but was won by the former in three straight heats. Clip and Fly were withdrawn on the last heat.

2ND. RACE, PURSE OF $100.

This race did not come off, owing to objections made by the backers of the Cumberland Maid as to weight.

3RD.—TROTTING-RACE, PURSE OF $30.

J. Hughston, Miller's Maid, 4, 3, 4.
A. Morton, John Moore, 1, 1, 1.
J. Jaynes, Racker, 3, 2, 3.
H. Morgan, Jennie Lind, 2, 4, 2.
Time, 2.53, 2.52, 2.51.

This closed the first day's proceedings.

SECOND DAY.

The first race advertized for to-day did not come off; but one horse entered and was afterwards withdrawn.

The next was for a purse of $100 for trotting horses. The following horses were entered:—

Mr. Gilbert, Harry Doyle, 1, 1.
J. Jaynes, Fenian, 2, 2, 1, 2, 1, 1.
A. Morton, John Moore, 3, 3, 1, 2.
Time, 2.45, 2.45, 2.59, 2.56.

Between the 2nd and 3rd heats a race against time was got up, Jack the Barber and Maggie Simpson running; the time made was 1.52. It was well contested by Maggie, but was won by Jack.

At the third heat several false starts were made, but at last they got off, Harry Doyle leading, closely followed by Fenian, John Moore behind considerably. This was a closely contested heat, both horses breaking more than once. It was decided by the Judges, on account of foul play on the part of the driver of Harry Doyle, the heat should be given to Fenian. The owner of Harry Doyle, not agreeing with the decision of the Judges, withdrew the horse, and the balance of the race was run by Fenian and John Moore.

The next race was for a purse of $16; entries added.

Maggie Simpson, 1, 1.
Fly, 2, 2.
Unknown Maid, 3, 3.
Time, 2.03, 2.00

$25 PURSE, TROTTERS AND RACKERS.

Gushaw, Racker, 1, 2, 1, 2.
J. Jaynes, Lady Florence, 3, 3, out.
H. Morgan, Jennie Lind, 4, 4, 3, out.
J. Huston Miller's Maid, 2, 2, 1, 1.
Time, 2.59, 2.58, 3.00, and 2.57.

The two horses having 2 heats each the other heat will be run to-morrow. There will be three other races to come off to-morrow also.

CAMP THOROLD.

(From our own special Correspondent.)

On Saturday last, the Peterborough Battalion left Port Hope, on board the steamer Rochester, for Port Dalhousie. We were joined by Col. Williams, of Port Hope, Capt. Williams' Infantry Company, and the Brass Band from Port, who are under Prof. Chalaupka, Sergt. Major of the Cobourg Band. Brigade Major Patterson was also present and distributed the ammunition to the men on their arrival by train from Peterborough, and accompanied them to the boat. A large number of spectators was present to see the Volunteers off, and gave several cheers as the vessel moved away, the band playing "The Girl I left behind me."

The weather was all that could be desired, hence the lake was very smooth and pleasant, affording the Volunteers a fine view of the country as they passed along. When about half way up the lake a heavy fog set in, which shut the land out from view altogether, and it was not seen again until we came within a short distance of Port Dalhousie. On the way up, because of the fog, the whistle of the boat had to be kept sounding most of the time, as the danger of running against other vessels was great.

On board I noticed that Major Poole had with him the fine horse that had been presented to him by the inhabitants of Peterboro, on Friday.

When the dinner hour arrived all were eager to obtain a place at the table; no doubt from the early hour that the Volunteers had to leave home their appetites were sharpened for the good things provided by the obliging captain; but the tables not being very large it took a long time to get all served; by three o'clock, however, about 300 men had taken dinner.

At five o'clock the steamer arrived at Port Dalhousie, where a train of cars was in waiting, a welcome sight to the Volunteers, as every one expected to have to walk to the camp, a distance of nine miles, which would not be a very pleasant undertaking to perform after dark. After some little delay in getting the horses, ammunition, &c. on board the train started and in the course of half an hour we arrived at the Thorold station, which is a distance of one mile and a half from the camp. We then got into line and after a little marching and countermarching, started for the camp. The night being very dark and from what we had heard of the road, we expected to have a rough time in reaching the camp; but the fine weather lately has had the effect of making the roads very good. As we neared the camp grounds the roads began to get rather bad, as there was a great deal of mud and very tough at that. In a short time we came to our tents which are situated on the side of a large field and owing to our being the last battalion that came in we got a very good position. The next thing was to arrange the tents and receive bed clothes which were handed out in a very short time. After getting supper we turned in and went to the land of dreams, with a picket on duty outside our tent, every half hour calling out at the top of his voice, "No. 4 and all right."

Early on Sunday morning the bugle called the whole camp to their feet; breakfast over, church parade was sounded when the whole camp assembled on a large green, where they listened to a very fine sermon delivered by an Episcopal clergyman. Subject—the two besetting sins of a British soldier: namely, Drunkenness and Swearing. If the sermon does any good to the soldiers there will be little drinking and less swearing. The Band of the 16th performed the part of a choir; the sermon over, the men were dismissed and spent the day in a very becoming manner.

Monday morning at half-past six every one was on his feet; and, before breakfast, had two hours hard drill. The drill was thoroughly efficient, and whatever it may have been during the late stormy weather, no one can now complain of it.

Seldom have a pleasanter lot of officers appeared in Camp. The most friendly feeling everywhere prevails and from the Colonel and Major, to the youngest subaltern all seem idolized by the force. The officers of the Artillery mess are most hospital, and their camp is well worth a visit. Their horses, to the number of 80, are in splendid order; among their number we saw an old stager "Johnie Russ"—a very old horse captured from the Russians during the Crimean War. We wish some of your readers were present to see some of the tents at this moment, and to hear Captain B. detailing some of his experiences, which are only equaled, but not surpassed, by the doctor's description of the Volunteers at target practice.

The Volunteers have a very soldierly appearance, though it is not difficult to see a considerable difference between their appearance whilst on drill and that of the Regular soldier; their performances with the musket and bayonet are certainly grand. The men when off drill enjoy themselves exceedingly, though some of them must be pretty tired. The officers, too, appear to enjoy themselves immensely. Dr. Dewar, of Port Hope, does all he can to keep them, not only in good health but in excellent spirits.

Two or three Companies are daily called out for ball practice, and if the vivid descriptions of our jovial doctor, who is in attendance be true, some ludicrous scenes take place. If the twisting and trimming the firing party are subjected to by the instructor, are not very conducive to correct firing, they have the advantage at least of knocking the men considerably about. There are three drills daily, each of two hours duration.

In the camp, besides the Peterboro battalion, is the Simcoe battalion.

BARNIE RIFLE.

THE FENIANS.

The Montreal Review cautions its readers against giving undue credence to the many rumours that are daily circulated in reference to the Fenians. Of course no one can say that the misguided men who compose the rank and file of the Fenian organization will not attempt an invasion of our soil, yet it is very doubtful that they will, and for the following reasons:—1. Stephens, the great Head Centre, is opposed to the invasion of Canada, and has denounced such an attempt in the strongest terms. 2. Sweeny, who was the prime mover in the attack upon our Province, has been removed from the position which he held at the time of the late raid, and although he still retains a number of followers, his power to do harm is not such as it was in June. 3. The Fenian exchequer is almost exhausted, and the brethren do not appear to be contributing so liberally as heretofore. 4. There is every reason to believe that the President of the United States will, should another raid be made, enforce the neutrality laws of his country. Other and perhaps more cogent reasons might be adduced why we should incline to the opinion that no invasion will be attempted; nevertheless, it would be folly on our part not to be prepared for the worst, and then the worst can never happen.

EX-GOVERNOR EYRE.—The part in public which Mr. Eyre, the ex-Governor of Jamaica, has consented to play excites a good deal of comment in England, and that pretty much of an unfavorable character too. The European Times has the following observation:—"The dinner to Mr. ex-Governor Eyre, took place at Southampton on the 21st. There were 120 gentlemen present, and four noblemen—the Earls of Harwickie, Shrewsbury, and Cardigan, and Lord Royston and one baronet, Sir W. Bram; but it is a little remarkable that every member in the House of Commons absented himself, a significant fact, which shows that those who belong to that assembly felt unwilling to risk their popularity by giving their countenance to an ex-official, who, whether rightly or wrongly, labours at the present moment under a considerable share of obloquy. Indeed, the unpopularity of Mr. Eyre was made manifest in Southampton during the progress of the entertainment, for on leaving it he was hissed by the surrounding multitude, and a counter demonstration took place, attended by great numbers, at which speeches were strongly condemnatory of the policy which he had pursued in Jamaica. A riot was apprehended, but happily the peace of the town was not disturbed. The task of proposing the health of Mr. Eyre devolved on the Earl of Hardwicke, who did not shrink from warmly defending the conduct of his protege, which a peer could do without loss of prestige, but a member of the other house dare not. Lord Hardwicke's great and distinguished man' made a very modest justificatory reply, which few will feel disposed to criticise ungenerously."

A London paper gives the following changes in the House of Lords:—Nineteen peers have died. They are the Marquises Camden, 67; Lansdowne, 50; Earl Gainsborough, 84; Kinnoul, 81; Bathurst, 76; Lanesborough, 74; Rosslyn, 64; Chesterfield, 61; Limerick, 53; Donoughmore, 43; Beauchamp, 37; Harrington, 21; Viscount Clifden, 41; Barons Glenelg, 83; Monteagle, 76; Clinton, 74; Bayning, 69; Vernon, 62; Rivers, 56. Two peerages have become extinct, the baronies of Bayning and Glenelg; while the successor to the titles of Montcagle, Clifden, Donoughmore, and Rivers, are minors. In addition to these it may be mentioned that the Duke of Hamilton has attained his majority, and that the Marquis of Ormonde has taken the oaths and his seat. Fourteen peers have been created, viz:—The Duke of Edinburgh, Viscount Halifax, Barons Barrogil, Clermont, Hartismere, Hylton, Kenry, Lytton, Meledyth, Monck, Northbrook, Penrhyn, Strathnairn, and Romilly. Two barons of the United Kingdom, Lord Dartrey and Lord Wodehouse, have been promoted to a higher order in the peerage. The former now sits as Earl of Dartrey and the latter as Earl of Kimberley.

THE FENIAN TRIALS.—It is apprehended that in the matter of these trials the astute counsel for the defence will take exception to the venue being laid in the United counties of York and Peel, when the offences were committed in the county of Welland. This is the point we understand, that the Fenian prisoners are relying on for an acquittal.—And if the venue be laid either in the United Counties or in the city of Toronto, the indictments, as a matter of course, cannot hold water and must fall to the ground. To obviate this legal embarrassment a special session to the Court of Queen's Bench may be held, which has plenary jurisdiction over the whole Province. Let the venue in each indictment then be laid for the Province of Canada, and all difficulties will be overcome, and the miscreants will meet with their merited punishment.—Leader.

A correspondent writing from Newbury says that within the last two days a couple of individuals have been observed wandering about the neighbourhood—one soliciting charity, the other peddling nostrums—but who appeared more anxious to ascertain the lay of the country towards the St. Clair River and from thence along the Canadian frontier to Sandwich, than in prosecuting their respective callings. Our correspondent asks: Would it not be well for the rural districts, whose duty it would be, to look after such characters at the present time.—London Advertiser.

MOB LAW.—A portion of the citizens of Quebec feeling aggrieved at an old wooden fence being permitted to remain on Durham Terrace, repaired thither a. midnight on Saturday, and tore it down. It was afterwards thrown over the Terrace, and smashed to pieces on the rocks below. The citizens claim the land as public property, and resisted the obstruction.

New Municipal Act.

Through the kindness of Col. Haultain, we have received a copy of the late Municipal Act, and we lay before our readers those sections which refer to the changes that take effect immediately. We have given the words of the Act, so that our readers may fully understand the very wording of the parts thereof. The sections omitted are of no great importance to the general readers.

QUALIFICATIONS OF MAYORS, &c.

70. The persons qualified to be elected Mayors, Aldermen, Reeves, Deputy Reeves and Councillors, or Police Trustees, are such residents of the Municipality within which, or within two miles of which, the Municipality or Police Village is situate, as are not disqualified under this Act, and have, at the time of the election, in their own right or in the right of their wives, as proprietors or tenants, a legal or equitable freehold or leasehold, rated in their own names on the last revised Assessment Roll of such Municipality or Police Village to at least the value following:

In Townships—Freehold to four hundred dollars, or leasehold to eight hundred dollars;

In Police Villages—Freehold or leasehold to four hundred dollars;

In Incorporated Villages—Freehold to six hundred dollars, or leasehold to twelve hundred dollars;

In Towns—Freehold to eight hundred dollars, or leasehold to sixteen hundred dollars;

And in Cities—for Mayor and Aldermen—Freehold to four thousand dollars, or leasehold to eight thousand dollars.

And so in the same proportions in all Municipalities and Police Villages in case the property is partly freehold and partly leasehold.

The term "Leasehold" in this section shall not include a term less than a tenancy for a year, or from year to year.

And the qualification of all persons, where a qualification is required under this Act, may be of an estate either legal or equitable.

71. In case of a new Township erected by proclamation for which there has been no Assessment Roll, every person who at the time of the first election has such an interest in real property and to such an amount as hereinbefore mentioned, shall be deemed to be possessed of a sufficient property qualification.

72. In case in a Municipality there are not at least two persons qualified to be elected for each seat in the Council, no qualification beyond the qualification of an elector shall be necessary in the persons to be elected.

ELECTORS.

73. The electors of every Municipality for which there is an Assessment Roll, and the electors of every Police Village, shall be the male freeholders thereof, whether resident or not, and such of the householders thereof as have been resident therein for one month next before the election, who are natural-born or naturalized subjects of Her Majesty, and of the full age of twenty-one years, and who were severally but not jointly rated on the then last revised Assessment Rolls, for real property in the Municipality or Police Village, held in their own right or that of their wives as proprietors or tenants, and who had paid all Municipal taxes due by them on or before the sixteenth day of December next preceding the election; and such rating shall be absolute and final, and not be questioned either by any Returning Officer, or on any application to set aside any election under this or any other Act respecting the Municipal Institutions of Upper Canada.

76. In Cities, Towns, Townships and Incorporated Villages, such real property, whether freehold or leasehold, or partly each, must have been so rated as of at least the actual value following:—

In Cities—Six hundred dollars.
In Towns—Four hundred dollars.
In Incorporated Villages—Three hundred dollars.
In Townships—One hundred dollars.
In Police Villages—One hundred dollars.

77.—At the first election for a newly erected Municipality for which there is no separate Assessment Roll, every resident male inhabitant though not previously assessed, shall be entitled to vote if he possesses the other qualifications above mentioned, and has at the time of the election sufficient property to have entitled him to vote if he had been rated for such property, and every person so claiming to vote shall name the property on which he votes, and the Returning Officer at the request of any candidate or voter shall note the property in his Poll Book opposite the voter's name.

78. In Towns and Cities, every elector may vote in each Ward in which he has been rated for the necessary property qualification.

In Townships and Incorporated Villages divided into electoral divisions, no elector shall vote in more than one electoral division.

79. In case both the owner and occupant of any real property are rated severally but not jointly therefor, both shall be deemed rated within this Act.

80. When any real property is owned or occupied jointly by two or more persons, and is rated severally but not jointly at an amount sufficient to give a qualification to each, then each shall be deemed rated within this Act, otherwise none of them shall be deemed so rated.

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTORS.

81. Every male person entered on the then last revised Assessment Roll for every City, Town, Village and Township, as the owner or occupant of real property of the actual value: in Cities, of six hundred dollars; in Towns of four hundred dollars; in Incorporated Villages, of three hundred dollars; and in Townships, of two hundred dollars, shall be entitled to vote at all Parliamentary elections, subject to the provisions of the Act chapter six of the Consolidated Statutes of Canada, except sub-sections numbered 1 and 2 of section four of the said Act, which are hereby repealed, in so far as they relate to Upper Canada.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

82. No election of Township Councillors shall be held within any City, Town, or Incorporated Village, nor shall any election for a Municipality or any Ward thereof be held in a tavern or house of public entertainment licensed to sell spirituous liquors.

85. The Council of every City, Town and Village Municipality (including a Village newly erected into a Town newly erected into a City) shall, from time to time, by By-law, appoint the place or places for holding the next ensuing Municipal election, otherwise the election shall be held at the place or places at which the last election for the Municipality or Wards or Electoral Divisions was held.

87. The electors of every City shall elect three Alderman for every Ward, in the first Monday in January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, one of whom shall retire annually, in rotation, and on the first Monday of January in each year thereafter, shall elect one Alderman for each Ward, in the room of the retiring member, unless chosen by acclamation on the day of nomination.

88. In Incorporated Towns having five Wards there shall be two Councillors elected for each Ward, on the first Monday in January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, one of whom shall retire annually, in rotation; and on the first Monday in January in each year thereafter, there shall be three Councillors elected for each Ward, on the first Monday in January, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, one of whom shall retire annually in rotation, and on the first Monday in January in each year thereafter the e shall be one Councillor elected for each Ward in all Towns.

89. The electors of every Township and Incorporated Village Municipality shall elect annually, on the first Monday in January, the members of the Council of the said Municipality, and on the second Monday in January the elector of every Police Village shall annually elect the Police Trustees of the Village, and the persons so elected shall hold office until their successors are elected or appointed and sworn into office and the new Council or Police Trustees is or are organized.

90. At the first meeting of the Council of every City and Town, elected after the passing of this Act, it shall be determined by ballot, under the direction of the Clerk, which of the members shall retire in the first, second and third year respectively, and the term of office of each Councillor or Alderman shall cease, according to the result of such ballot.

92. In case of the separation of a Union of Townships, the existing division into Wards, if any, shall cease, as if the same had been duly abolished By-law, and the elections of Councillors shall be by general vote until the Township or Townships are divided into electoral divisions under the provisions of this Act.

93. The election in Townships and Incorporated Villages of Reeves, Deputy Reeves, and Councillors, shall be by general vote, and shall be held at the place or places where the last meeting of the Council was held, or in such other place or places where the last meeting of the Council was held, or in such other place or places as may be from time to time fixed by By-law.

96. In the case of a Municipality in which the election is not to be by Wards or electoral divisions, the Clerk shall be the Returning Officer at all elections after the first.

PROCEEDINGS AT ELECTIONS.

100. A meeting of the electors shall take place for the nomination of candidates for the offices of Reeve, Deputy Reeves, Councillors and Police Trustees, in Townships, Incorporated Villages Police Villages, at noon on last Monday but one in December annually, at such place therein as shall from time to time by fixed by By-law;

The Clerk (or in his absence a Chairman to be chosen) shall preside at such meeting, of which he shall give at least six days' notice;

If only the necessary number of candidates to fill the vacant offices shall be proposed and seconded, the Clerk or Chairman shall adjourn the proceedings until the first Monday in January, when a poll or polls shall be opened in each Electoral Division or of the Municipality be not divided into Electoral Divisions, then at such place as the Council shall by By-law determine, for the election, at nine of the clock in the morning and shall continue open until five of the clock in the afternoon, and no longer;

The Clerk or Chairman of the meeting shall, on the day following that of the nomination, post up in the office of the Municipality, the names of the persons proposed for the respective offices, and the Clerk shall provide the Returning Officer in case of Electoral Divisions, with a certified list of the names of such candidates, specifying the offices for which they are respectively candidates;

The Clerk shall, before the poll is opened, deliver to the Returning Officer for every Electoral Division, or Police Village, a list of the names, arranged alphabetically, of all male freeholders and householders rated upon the then last revised Assessment Roll for real property, lying in that Electoral Division or Village, to the amount required to qualify them to vote at such election, and shall attest the said list by his solemn declaration;

In Townships Incorporated Villages and Police Villages, every Returning Officer shall, on the day after the close of the poll, return the Poll-Book to the Township Clerk, verified under oath before the said Clerk or any Justice of the Peace for the County or Union of Counties in which the said Township, Incorporated or Police Village may lie, as to the due and correct taking of the votes;

The Clerk of the Township, Incorporated Village or Police Village, (or person so appointed Chairman, as aforesaid,) shall add up the votes set down for each candidate in the respective Poll-Books, and ascertain the aggregate number of votes, and shall, at the Town Hall, or other place at which the nomination was held, at noon of the day following the return of the Poll-Book, publicly declare the Reeves and Councillors, or Reeve, Deputy Reeve and Councillors, as the case may be, who have been elected;

In case two or more candidates have an equal number of votes, the said Clerk, whether otherwise qualified or not, shall give a casting vote or one or more of such candidates, so as to decide the election and except in such case the Clerk shall not vote at any such election.

PROCEEDINGS AT ELECTIONS OF ALDERMEN IN CITIES AND COUNCILLORS IN TOWN.

101. The proceedings of such elections shall be as follows:—

A meeting of the electors shall take place for the nomination of candidates for the offices of Aldermen in Cities, and of Councillors in Towns, at noon, on the last Monday but one in December, annually, in each Ward or Electoral Division thereof, at such places therein as shall from time to time be fixed by By-law of the said City or Town Councils;

The Returning Officer for each Ward or Electoral Division in Cities and Towns, or in his absence the Chairman to be chose by the meeting, shall preside, and the Returning Officer shall give at least six days' notice of such meeting;

If only the necessary number of candidates to fill the vacant offices shall be proposed and seconded, the Returning Officer or Chairman shall after the lapse of one hour, declare such candidates duly elected;

If more than the necessary number of candidates be proposed, and a poll is demanded by any candidate or elector, the Returning Officer or Chairman shall keep the poll open for the full time required by law for taking the votes, though there may be no contest for the other offices for which he holds the election.

113. Every Returning Officer shall enter in his Poll-Book, in separate columns, the names of the candidates for the office of Mayor, Reeve or Deputy Reeve, and of Councillor in Towns, and shall, in the column in which is entered the name of a candidate for Mayor, Reeve, Deputy Reeve or Councillor, voted for by any voter, set the number "1" opposite the voter's name.

114. Every Returning Officer shall, on the day after the close of the poll, return the Poll-Book to the City or Town Clerk, verified by his solemn declaration.

115. The Town clerk shall add up the number of votes set down for each candidate for Mayor, Reeve and Deputy Reeve (as the case may be) in the respective Poll-Books so returned, and ascertain the aggregate number of such votes, and in case a poll has been taken and the Poll-Books have been returned for every Ward or Electoral Division, the Clerk shall, at the Town Hall, at noon of the day following the return of the Poll-Books, declare elected the candidate or candidates having the largest number of votes polled.

116. In case two or more candidates for Mayor, *Reeve or De

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. E. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN CANADA.

The following testimony from a well known and highly respected Merchant of Prescott, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY:

PRESCOTT, C. W., Dec. 8th, 1859.

Messrs. S. W. Fowle & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen:—

Being solicited by your Travelling Agent, for an expression of opinion of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I with pleasure assert that it is, in my belief, the best remedy before the public for coughs and pulmonary complaints.

Having tested the article with myself and family, in case of severe coughs and colds, for years, with uniform and unexceptionable success, I unhesitatingly recommend it with full confidence in its merits.

Yours truly,
ALFRED HOOKER.

Swearing Alone.

A gentleman once heard a laboring man swearing dreadfully in the presence of companions. He told him it was a cowardly thing to swear in company with others, when he dared not do it by himself. The man said he was not afraid to swear at any place. The following conversation between them took place:—

'I'll give you ten dollars,' said the gentleman, 'if you will go to the village grave yard at twelve o'clock to-night, and swear the oaths you have uttered here, when you are alone with God.

'Agreed,' said the man, 'it's an easy way of earning ten dollars.'

'Well, you come to me to-morrow and say you have done it, and the money will be yours.'

The time passed on; midnight came.—The man went to the graveyard. It was a night of pitchy darkness.

As he entered the graveyard not a sound was heard; all was still as death. Then the gentleman's words, 'alone with God,' came over him with wonderful power. The very thought of the wickedness of what he had been doing, and what he had come to do darted across his mind like a flash of lightning. He trembled at his folly.—Afraid to take another step, he fell upon his knees, and instead of the dreadful oaths he came to utter, he asked forgiveness for the wicked act!'

The next day he went to the gentleman and thanked him for what he had done, and said he had resolved not to swear another oath as long as he lived.

Couldn't get his Baggage.

A contemporary states that a gentleman who holds a responsible position under the Government, concluded to change his place of lodgings. He sent one of the waiters of the hotel where he had selected apartments after his baggage. Meeting the waiter he said:—

'Well, John, did you bring my baggage down?'

'No, sar,' blandly responded the sable gentleman.

'Why, what is the reason?'

'Case, sar, the gentleman in the office say you did not pay your bill.'

'Not paid my bill? Why that's very singular; he knew me very well when he kept the Girard House in Philadelphia.',

'Well, mebbee,' rejoined John, 'dat was the reason he wouldn't gib me de baggage.'

The bill was paid and the gentleman took his departure.

WIFE.—There is no combination of letters in the English language which excites more pleasing and interesting associations than the word wife. It presents to the mind's eye a cheerful companion, a disinterested adviser, a nurse in sickness, a comforter in misfortune, and an ever affectionate companion. It conjures up the image of a lovely woman, who cheerfully undertakes to contribute to your happiness, to partake with you the cup of weal or woe, which destiny may offer. The word wife is synonymous with the greatest blessing, and we pity the unfortunate wight who is compelled, by fate's severe decree, to trudge along through life's dull pilgrimage without one.

Some young men marry dimples; some noses; the contest, however, generally lies between the eyes and hair. The mouth too is occasionally married; the chin not so often. Poor partners, these, you will own. But young men do marry all these, and many other bits and scraps of a wife, instead of the true thing. Such as the marriage is such is the after-life. He that would have a wife must marry a woman. If he can meet with one of equal social position, like education, similar disposition, kindred sympathies, and habits congenial to his own, let him marry. But let him beware of marrying a curl, or a voice, however melodious. Young ladies do also make queer matches, and unite themselves to whiskers.

YIELD A LITTLE.—It is better to yield a little than quarrel a great deal. The habit of standing up, as people call it, for their little rights, is one of the most disagreeable and undignified in the world.—Life is too short for the perpetual bickerings which attend such a disposition; and, unless a very momentous affair indeed, where other people's claims and interests are involved, we question if it is not wiser, happier, and more prudent to yield somewhat of our precious rights than squabble to maintain them. The wisdom is first pure then peaceable, then gentle.

THE STOLEN APPLE.—A prisoner, who was sentenced to be transported for housebreaking, was spoken to by a friend, relative to his first theft. 'The poor fellow pointed to the mark of a severe scar on his left hand and said. 'That was done, sir, when I was a boy. I fell from an apple tree into which I had climbed for the purpose of stealing an apple. An apple was my first theft.' So beware, young reader, of the first step in an evil course.

WHAT YOU CAN NEVER CATCH.—Boys and girls, what is it that you can never catch, though you chase after it as on the wings of the wind? You can never catch the word that has once gone out of your lips. Once spoken, it is out of your reach; do your best, you can never recall it. Therefore, take care what you say. Never speak an unkind word, an impure word a lying word, a profane word.

An associate judge in one of our country courts, in speaking of the important and honorable office he had held for several years, said the presiding judge never consulted with him except on one question, and that was after listening to three or four windy pleas of an hour's length each, when he turned and whispered, "Isn't this bench made of hardwood?" I told him I thought it was!

"Can you see anything in my eye—it feels very sore?" asked a lazy good-for-nothing student of Oliver Wendell Holmes. "I can see a very bad pupil," was the reply of the Professor, who never likes to be funny when he has his professional garments on.

Mrs. Loode, of Chicago, took arsenic and died the day after her wedding from grief at her husband's expressing his regret at having married her.

A rich and beautiful young lady in Brooklyn, N. Y., devoted herself to nursing the cholera patients there, and recently died a victim to the disease.

The reason why people know not their duty on great occasions, is that they will not take the trouble of doing their duty on little occasions.

A man in Randolf, Ill., was fined $42 for pretending to be an unmarried man and so gaining a damsel's affections.

Fusion sisterhoods, says a writer are much nicer things than brotherhoods, and far better armed for conquest.

One hundred and sixty different kinds of riches are now on trial in the French camp at Chalons.

AQUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jee' so?"—"Exactly?"—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "cowley" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" " " I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" " " I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

" " " I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. " " The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" " " The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. BEKLY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER—for Indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c., where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity makes it a handy and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bottle. Ask for "Lyon's" Pure Extract. Take no other.

A SONG OF PROVERBS.

AIR—"Pack about the Jorum."

In ancient days, tradition says,
When few could teach, and fewer preach,
And books were not thus printed—
What wise men thought, by prudence taught;
They pithily expounded;
And proverbs sage, from age to age
In every mouth abounded.

O blessing on the men of yore,
Who wisdom thus augmented,
And left a store of easy lore
For human use invented.

Two of a trade, 'twas early said,
Do very ill agree, sir;
A beggar baits at rich man's gates
A beggar's face to see, sir,
Yet trades there are, though rather rare,
Where men are not so jealous;
Two lawyers know the coal to blow,
Just like a pair of bellows.

Birds of a feather flock together,
Like fain with like would dwell, sir,
Yet things un like the fancy strike,
And answer pretty well, sir,
You know Jack Sprat, he eat no fat,
His wife could eat no lean, sir;
So 'twixt the two, with small ado,
They licked the platter clean, sir.

The man who would Charybdis shun,
Must take a cautious movement,
Or else he'll into Scylla run—
Which would be no improvement.
The fish that left the frying pan,
On feeling that desire, sir,
Made little by their change of plan,
When floundering in the fire, sir.

A man of sense, from a glass house,
Will not be throwing stones, sir,
A mountain may bring forth a mouse,
With many throes and groans, sir.
A friend in need's a friend indeed,
And prize I as such should be, sir,
But summer friends, when summer ends,
Are off, and o'er the sea, sir.

Sour grapes, we cry, of things too high,
Which gives our pride relief, sir;
Between two stools the bones of fools,
Are apt to come to grief, sir;
Truth, some folks tell, lies in a well,
Though why, I ne'er could see, sir;
But some opine 'tis found in wine,
Which better pleases me, sir.

Your toil and pain will all be vain,
To try to milk the bull, sir;
If forth you jog to shear the hog,
You'll get more ery than wool, sir;
'Twould task your hand to row the sand,
Or shave a chin that's bare, sir;
You cannot strip a highland hip
Of what it does not wear, sir.

Selections.

A Horrible Joke at College

Harry Shirley, the captain of the St. Valence's College boat, Cambridge, was dreadfully annoyed when, owing to the unexplained absence of Manton, his stroke-oar the Trinity men deprived him of his honors. All the under-graduates at the boating supper inveighed in bitter terms against Manton—Shirley, however, was the most generous of them all. It was determined to pay 'off' Manton.

'Screw him in,' said one.

'Break his windows,' said a thick voice.

'No, no!' said Shirley. 'Not that.' He saw they were resolved upon doing something, and as he could not prevent their carrying out their plan of punishing their late stroke, he strove to change their direction and modify the action of their schemes.

'If you must have a joke, let it be a harmless one. Remember the last boating-supper and the broken windows.'

'Confound the windows!' said Blackford.

'Screw the beggar in, and we'll take care he shall not get out in a hurry to-morrow.'

'Is old Fernley in bed?' asked one.

'Yes, his light has been out for some time.'

'Let us go to work then,' said several voices.

'Mind he does not serve you as Blackford did,' said Shirley, 'and throw his coals down on your heads.'

'We'll take care of that.'

We quitted the supper-room, and descended quietly into the court. The moon was shining brilliantly, and the old ivy covered buildings looked still and peaceful beneath its rays. There was an old legend attaching to the tower-staircase, up which Manton slept. And as I stood in the angle of the court, gazing upon the gloomy side containing his windows, which were lighted up the moonbeams, I thought if the hard-working under-graduate who was said to have hanged himself from one of those very windows, in bitter despair at his future in the tripos on the previous day. As I stood thus musing, and only half listening to the conversation, of my companions, an idea suddenly struck me, and hardly thinking what I was saying, I called out to Blackford—

'Hang him in effigy!'

'Bravo!' said he, instantly catching up my words. 'Hang him in effigy! A capital idea! By Jove it will look quite ghastly in the moonlight, and when the bed-makers come in the morning, they will think it is the ghost of the tower-staircase.'

I felt immediately sorry for what I had said. It was uttered on the spur of the moment, and before I had reflected on what I was about. But there was no drawing back now; everybody eagerly seized the idea, and Blackford determined that it should be carried into execution.

Harry Shirley cast a reproachful glance at me. 'You should not have suggested that,' said he.

'I am sorry for it, Shirley. Upon my word, I don't know what made me do so, but I spoke almost thoughtlessly; I don't quite like it.'

'I shall stop to see that no injury is done to Manton; I could not trust them in their present mood; they are all rather flushed, and there is no knowing what they will do with Blackford to lead them.'

Supposing as far as possible all noise, we mounted the staircase to Manton's rooms. Our task was rendered somewhat more easy from the fact that the door was not 'spotted,' so that we entered without risk of waking him.

'Let us see if the fellow is in bed,' said Blackford. And he was about to open the bedroom door, when Shirley darted forward and, just peeping in, instantly closed the door again, and so prevented any one from going in. He at once put the first screw in, and then Blackford and Walton drove each another, and so the door was made fast. It was utterly impossible that he should not rouse us in our further task—We then set about the more important part of the work of this night of revelry and riot. Manton was safely screwed into his bedroom, after several weak and unavailing remonstrances on his part, and was thereby effectually prevented from interfering with our plans. Blackford now enthusiastically took up the suggestion which, in a moment of thoughtless impulse, I had made. He determined that the idea should be carried into execution, and becoming more excited, by the part of the joke which had already been played, persistently urged us to complete our purpose. But the men apparently required little of this exhortation, for they were as eager as he to hang our renegade stroke in effigy, and they all immediately called upon me to further the design which I had suggested.

'Come!' said Blackford addressing himself somewhat roughly to me, 'now let us carry out your part of the programme.—Hang the fellow in effigy! By Jove! it will be grand fun. It will look like the ghost of the haunted tower.'

I did not like the way in which he spoke. There was something repugnant to my feelings in mention of the fate of poor H—— and I thought we had done enough.—In fact I heartily repented of my suggestion. The eye of Harry Shirley was continually and reproachfully fixed upon me, but he did not anticipate that any positive harm could come from our joke, and therefore to a certain extent, he gave is assent to it. Table-cloths sheets, dusters, papers and in fact everything upon which we could lay our hands upon, and carefully thrust into Manton's flannel trousers: a bolster was then taken from the sofa, and being welled to a convenient size by the application of a sufficient number of sheets and table-cloths, was invested in his boating jersey; a pair of socks properly stuffed, with his rowing shoes on them, were fastened where the feet should be; and then the top of the bolster, being drawn tight by means of a piece of cord, was surmounted by a rowing cap; and in a few moments a perfect effigy of the invader of the St. Valenceboat was swinging from the window in the haunted tower; and then, when we were all leaving the room to screw up the outer door, Manton, in a somewhat louder tone of voice, said.—

'Blackford! Blackford! do open the door!'

But it was worse than useless to appeal to men in such a frame of mind: and we descended the staircase somewhat more quickly than we had gone up, and then slowly and gradually dispersed to our several rooms, utterly regardless of Manton's objections, to being screwed in.

I got but little sleep that night. Why I felt that vague and restless uneasiness I cannot exactly say, but certain it is that for more than an hour I lay awake thinking on the night's work and the part which I had played in it. However, weariness at length got the better of the indefinite anxiety that oppressed me, and sleep came to my rescue when I was almost despairing of rest; and though I slept but a short time, I awoke in the morning considerably refreshed by the brief interval of repose that I had enjoyed.

The recollection of the joke of the previous night immediately returned to me, and I was eager to know how far the bed-makers had been affected by the sight that must have met them on entering the college gates. However, my suspense on that score was but short-lived, for Mrs. Brown rushed breathless into my keeping-room, and commenced a vigorous attack on my bedroom door.

'Sir! sir!' she called out in excited tones.

I feigned drowsiness, and answered in a voice that seemed to rebuke her for waking me—

'Yes! what is the matter Mrs. Brown?'

'Oh, sir! what did you gentlemen do last night? Oh dear! oh dear!

And then she stopped, and it seemed as if she were crying.

I could scarcely keep from laughing; she evidently heard that I was treating it as a joke, but I said—

'Why, what is the matter, Mrs. Brown? What have you called me so early for?'

'Oh, sir, it is dreadful, and the tower-case too!'

'What is dreadful?'

'Oh! Mr. Manton has hanged himself.'

'Nonsensense!' I said calmly.

'I wish it was nonsense. It is dreadful!'

'Mr. Manton has not hanged himself.—What rubbish are you talking about?'

'Oh! come and see for yourself. And then her emotion seemed to overcome her, for I could hear her sobbing and crying bitterly.

There was something in her manner, in spite of my laughter, that impressed me; and I hastily dressed myself, and, leaving Mrs. Brown sobbing in my room, I went down into the court. A group of undergraduates was collected under Manton's window, and from the window was still swinging a figure. But—a shudder instantly passed through my whole frame as I looked—the figure was dressed, not in boating uniform, but in ordinary costume. There was no cap on the head; the hair was blowing about loosely in the wind on the ground, close to where I was standing, was the effigy that we had suspended on the previous night. What did it mean?—What could it mean? The first man I saw was Blackford; I seized him by the arm.

'Blackford!' I said, in hoarse tones, 'what is the meaning of this?'

He turned quickly upon me,

'You should know as well as Wilford,' he answered, in a voice that I scarcely recognized as belonging to him, 'perhaps better.'

I felt stung to the quick, I made no reply.

'Manton has hanged himself.'

I believe that I knew perfectly well before he spoke the real state of the case, but I felt as if I wanted some one to tell me plainly.

It was but too true; there was Manton hanging from the window from which we had hanged him in effigy after the supper.

Blackford and I exchanged glances. I shall never forget the look of utter dismay upon his face, and I am sure it was fully reflected in mine. All the men who had been sharers in the screwing-in were gathered in that group, and each man's face betrayed the bitter thoughts that were harassing his mind. Fernley, the tutor, was there too, with a severe and stern countenance. Presently we roused ourselves from our apathy, and slowly and solemnly mounted the tower-staircase. Of course the door was screwed. Fernley turned around gravely upon us.

'Gentlemen,' he said, 'I shall require some explanation. Last night you had your boating-supper. Was it not so, Mr. Wilford?' he said, turning upon me.

I muttered an indistinctive affirmative, and then the screws were drawn, and we went into the inner room. The bedroom door was still screwed. This seemed for a moment a mystery. But on entering this room everything was explained. Manton had got out of the window and gone along the parapet to the spot where the effigy had been suspended, and after cutting down the figure had hanged himself in its place.

It would be utterly impossible to describe the feelings that rushed through the mind on this discovery, and my conscience smote me bitterly when I reflected that I had been the one who had suggested the mock hanging, which had been carried out.

Some vague idea of the responsibility involved by the result of our practical joke passed through my mind, and before I had time for much reflection on the matter I felt the grip of the officers of the law upon my arm, to arrest me on the charge of the murder. With a shriek I awoke, and found Shirley standing by my bedside, shaking me.

'What are you going to wake?' he said.

'I thought I should never rouse you.'

'Thank God, it is only a dream,' I said.

'What do you mean? Get up. Fernley want- you about the Manton business.

'Where is Manton?' I asked.

'In his room. He has been suffering from heart disease for the last two days; that was why he would not row; but he would not tell me. He is rather nervous about it as the doctor thinks its a bad case.

But I could not shake off the impression made upon me by my dream for some time, and the censure that I received from Fernley seemed nothing as compared with the relief experienced, that the result of the practical joke was but what might have been expected.

However, the whole thing taught me a lesson; and being gated for a week for my share in the work, I became more shy of practical jokes.

When Manton's reason for not rowing became known in the college, the men repented of their harsh remarks about his conduct, though it would have been much better for him to have given his reason at the time. He has lived to conquer the disease; but the doctor has often declared that had he, in his dangerous condition, rowed the last night of the races, result must have been fatal.

Be Honest.—An Incident at a Recent Fire.

A few days after one of the large fires, which have been so frequent in our land during the past few months, a gentleman who had kept a hat store, which had been burned, was accosted in the street by a boy, who said—"Mr. H.——, I have got a whole armful of hats that belong to you. I carried them home the day of the fire so that no one should steal them. If you would tell me where to bring them I will go right home and get them."

The gentleman appointed a place, and the boy ran away towards his home.

Soon he appeared with his hats, and sure enough, he had all that his two arms could hold.

When he had laid them down, the gentleman began to try first one then another on his head. When he found one that fitted him he said, "There my little man, that is yours."

He was a poor boy, and a nice new hat that was just a fit was a greater treat to him than to many boys.

When the little fellow fully realized that the hat was his own he began to caper about and cried, "See, see, I've got a new hat, and I didn't steal it either. I know another boy that has got an armful of hats, and I won't think he means to bring them back at all."

The boy that wears that hat can hold his head up straight, and look every one in the face, because he is an honest boy.

But O that other boy! there must be a hard spot somewhere in his heart, that must feel very heavy when he thinks of those hats. Man may not know, but God sees; and when he looks down on that heart he sees thief written there.

My little readers, which boy will you be like? Remember "Thou God seest me," and do not let him ever see thief written on your heart.

TO PRESERVE POTATOES.—The potato crop is too valuable this season to be lost by rot if it can be saved. A correspondent of the Scientific American, says he has tried the following plan for keeping potatoes for four years, and not lost a bushel in that time after they were harvested, though they were half diseased when taken out of the ground:—"Dust over the floor of the bin with lime, and put in about six or seven inches deep of potatoes, and dust with lime as before. Put in six or seven inches more of potatoes, and lime again; repeat the operation till all are stored in that way.—One bushel of lime will do forty bushels of potatoes, though more will not hurt them, the lime rather improving the flavour than otherwise."

Life Too Short for Strife.

Charles Dickens relates the following of Douglas Jerrold:—

"Of his generosity I had a proof within these two or three years, which it saddens me to think of now. There had been estrangement between us—not on any personal subject, and not involving angry words and a good many months had passed without my ever seeing him in the streets, when it fell out that we dined, each with his own separate party, in the Stranger's Room of the Club. Our chairs were almost back to back, and I took mine after he was seated and at dinner, (I am sorry to remember) and did not look that way. Before we had sat long, he openly wheeled his chair round, stretched out both hands in an engaging manner, and said aloud, with a bright and loving face, that I can see as I write to you: 'Let us be friends, again. A life is not long enough for this.'"

Jerrold was not a Christian, but his conduct in this case was worthy of the Christian character. On a dying bed, how insignificant will appear many things about which we contend in bitterness and wrath. Life is too short, inevitable sorrows so many, its responsibilities so vast and solemn, that there is indeed no time to spare in abusing and maligning one another. Let not the sun go down on your wrath. Never close your eyes to sleep with a heart angry towards your brother and fellow sufferer. See him and be reconciled to him if you can. If you cannot see him, write to him. If he is a true man and a Christian, he will listen. If he is not, you will have done right, and your soul will be bright with the sunshine of Heaven.

A Few Facts About London.

The population of London is now something considerably over three millions, and it is computed that before the close of the present century it will increase to 4,000,000.

Annually 5,000 houses are in course of erect on for upwards of 40 000 new comers.

The continuous line of buildings stretching from Holloway to Camberwell is twelve miles long.

London has 11,000 distinct streets, squares, avenues, crescents, terraces, places, rows, lanes, courts, alleys, mews and yards.

London contains 1,900 miles of gas pipes, with a capital of nearly £4,500,000 spent in the preparation of gas.

The cost of gas lighting is half a million. It has 360 000 lights; and 13,000,000 cubic feet of gas are burned every night.

Last year along those streets the enormous quantity of upwards of 800,000,000 gallons of water rushed for the supply of the inhabitants, being nearly double what it was in 1845.

To accommodate the crowd, 125,000 vehicles pass through the thoroughfares in the course of twelve hours; 3,000 cabs, 1,000 omnibuses, 10,000 private job carriages and carts, ply daily in the streets; 3,000 conveyances enter the metropolis daily from the surrounding country.

A Boat's Crew Eaten by Cannibals.

The Union Company's Cape Royal Mail Steamship Norseman, which arrived at Plymouth, England, on the 15th of August, with the Cape mail, has news of a frightful tragedy recently perpetrated in New Caledonia in the Pacific, employed as a French convict establishment. His Imperial French Majesty's war steamer Fulton, that put into Algoa Bay on June 27th, and left on July 6th for Brest, reported that while she had been cruising round New Caledonia, a boat was despatched into one of the rivers out of sight of the ship for some purpose, and not returning, much anxiety was felt respecting it. The steamer then went up the river in search, and upon a small island discovered remains, which left no possibility of doubt that the unfortunate seamen had been captured, and then killed and eaten by the natives. The Fulton then proceeded further inland, and some natives who were taken admitted that the conjectures of the ship's crew were correct; that they had come suddenly upon the boat's crew, taken them to an island, killed them there by splitting their skulls with axes, and had then cooked and eaten them. The officers and crew of the ship, highly exasperated at these horrible details, proceeded to take summary vengance upon the savages, and killed every one they came in contact with, and set fire to their villages. In addition to those who were burned, no less than one hundred and fifty were either shot or bayoneted.

A CURIOUS PLATE.

There is a curious plate in the South Kensington Museum which deserves some attention from the strange circumstances which took it there. Mrs. Hall, the owner of the plate possessed two precisely alike. One got broken, beyond repairing; but liking the rococca pattern of the china, she thought she would try and have it matched, and accordingly went to her chinaman for that purpose. This honest tradesman told her it could not be matched, nor could another be made like it, but if she wished to sell it he would give her £5 for it.—Before Mrs. Hall recovered her surprise from this offer, a stranger who had entered the shop and examined the plate offered her £10 for it. On her declining to sell it he doubled the amount, and finally made it £25. Naturally interested now, Mrs. Hall refused to sell it any price, but took it to a connoisseur in curiosities who offered her £ 00 on the spot. She still resists; and determined to ascertain the real value of it if possible, takes it to the South Kensington Museum. There she hears that her little china plate, for, which she always felt an instinctive love even in its unknown retreat, was priceless. "You may set any price you choose upon it," the Secretary said, "and it will be given to you. We cannot afford to give you half its value, but we should be happy to purchase it at £250." Mrs. Hall left the plate with him to be exhibited. She still retains possession. But there it is for all to see.

The Polar Sea.

In modern times geographers have discussed with great ardor the question of the existence of an open northern polar sea.—In regard to this matter the opinions of the members of the Swedish exploring expedition, which recently visited Spitzbergen, are worthy of note. They pronounce against the theory of an open sea, and give in learned reasons their reasons. They declare that all the fishermen and hunters of Spitzbergen declare the polar sea is covered with ice and utterly inaccessible to ships. Several Swedish voyagers have ascended peaks in the extreme north without being able to see anything but one long stretch of ice. The report of the expedition says:—"We ourselves saw from the summit of the White Mountain, in the rear of the Wyde-Jan-Water, — a peak three thousand feet in height,—on the 22nd of August 1863, nothing but ice between Giles Land and Spitzbergen. Some ship which attempted the same year to sail around North-west Land were entangled in the ice, and their crews were obliged to desert them. Before the vessels were deserted an attempt was made to penetrate to the North, in order to return in that direction to Amsterdam Island, but without success. Impenetrable fields of ice were found in every direction. Large sums of money have been offered to the whalers to induce them to go beyond the points which hitherto formed the limit of human observation. They are a race which does not shrink from danger, but none of them have ever been able to win the offered prizes. All the sea captains who visit the coast of Spitzbergen, are unanimous in the belief that not far to the North, a region of unbroken ice begins and continues till it reaches the northern coasts of North America on the other side of the Pole." For these and other weighty reasons the Swedish investigators believe that the whole polar basin is covered with ice. Some of the German naturalists, however, cling to the idea of an open polar sea;—an idea which our own Kane supported to the day of his death.—Am. Paper.

BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.

The following beautiful tribute to woman was written several years ago. It occurs in a tale of touching interest, entitled "The Broken Heart,"—its author, Dr. F. J. Straton:—

'Oh, the priceless value of the love of a PURE woman! Gold cannot purchase a gem so precious! Titles and honors confer upon the heart no such serene happiness. In our darkest moments, when disappointment and ingratitude, with corroding care, gather thick around, and even the gaunt form of poverty menaces with his skeleton fingers it gleams around the soul with an angel's smile. Time cannot mar its brilliancy; distance will not strengthen its influence; bolts and bars cannot limit its progress; it follows the prisoner into his dark cell, and sweetens the hard morsel that appeased his hunger, and in the silence of midnight it plays around his heart, and in his dreams he folds to his bosom the form of her who loses on still, though the world has turned coldly from him. The couch made by the hand of the loved one is soft to the weary sufferer and the potion administered by the same hand, loses half its bitterness. The pillow carefully adjusted by her brings repose to the fevered brain, and her words of kind encouragement revive the sinking spirit. It would seem that God, compassionating woman's first great frailty, had planted this jewel in her breast, whose heavenlike influence should cast into forgetfulness man's remembrance of the Fall, by building up in his heart another Eden, where perennial flowers forever bloom and crystal waters gush from exhaustless fountains.

The Scot at Home and Abroad.

One of the most conspicuous features of the Scot at home as distinct from the Scot abroad is the absurdly undue prominence which ecclesiastical matters occupy in his life. Abroad, the Scot takes these things as easily as his neighbors. He may have been a Presbyterian in his native country, if only from a kindly feeling of association with his progenitors. He knows that his grandfather was baptized in the parlor with an extemporary prayer, being held by his dad over the family punch bowl. He knows that his great-grandfather was laid in the bleak Scottish churchyard with a silence as dead as that of the grave itself; with no rites except a prayer (also extemporary) in the dining room—and a consumption of six dozen of the best claret at the funeral feast, or "dredgie." He knows, too, if he is a man of sense, that there was much more feeling and meaning in all this simplicity than a hasty tinker might fancy; and he pardons a somewhat rough style of praying and preaching for the sake of its influence on the humble part of the congregation. But once out of his own country, he finds his Presbyterianism sit lightly upon him. In London for instance, Presbyterianism has no influence commensurate with that of the masses of Scotsmen here.—Cornhill Magazine.

HOW TO SPOIL A GIRL.—Tell her she is a lady, and must not run, and make her a sun-bonnet a yard deep, to keep her from tanning. Do not let her play with her boy cousins "they are so rude." Tell her not to speak loud, it is so masculine; and that loud laughing is quite ungenteel. Teach her music, but never mind her spelling,—Give her ear-rings at six years of age.—Teach her to set her cap for the beaux at eleven. And after your piano-taking, if she does not grow up a simpering, unreflecting nobody, that cannot answer a love-letter without some smart old aunt to help her, she is past all remedy.

"Married couples resemble a pair of scissors," said Sidney Smith, "so joined that they cannot be separated, often moving in opposite directions, yet always punishing any one who comes between them."

Stores for Canada.

The hired steam transport Thames, belonging to the British and Colonial Steamship Company, laden with a heavy cargo of war stores and passengers for Quebec and Montreal, under orders to sail from Woolwich Arsenal pier, as stated in The Times yesterday, was detained until this morning, on account of an additional amount of ammunition to be shipped at Gravesend, and an enlargement of her magazine having been found necessary for that purpose. Her boiler fires were consequently banked up last night, and the ship was ordered to be detained at Woolwich until this morning, to sail by the five o'clock tide, when she will ship at Gravesend about 100 tons of ammunition, and sail direct for Canada.—The Thames sailed from Woolwich last year, on the 29th of October, with a somewhat similar freight, and reached her destination after a passage of less than 14 days. The sister ship, St. Lawerence, in embarking in the Victoria dock a cargo of stores for the same destination, and under orders to sail on the 19th of October next.—Through the medium of the hydraulic cranes and the other facilities afforded at the Tipper in Woolwich Arsenal, the cargo of the Thames was hoisted on board and carefully stowed in the hold at the rate of nearly 400 tons per day. The hydraulic lifting apparatus is now in course of being fitted with auxiliary cylinders, so as to stop, without risk of danger, the heavy guns about to be issued for the fleet—namely, the new class 12½-ton gun shipped only by means hitherto of the shears in the lower part of the Arsenal.—London times, Sept. 2.

THE EUROPEAN CROPS.

Our advices from Europe with regard to the condition of the crops are quite unfavorable. In nearly every part of the Continent, and also in England and Ireland, general complaint is heard, and fears are entertained that much suffering will ensue among the poorer classes. The effect of this failure will be felt in our country. It will cause a heavy foreign demand for our breadstuffs, and an increase in prices here will naturally follow. We are hopeful that the crops will turn out better than is anticipated, as was the case with our own crops this year; but the present prospect is certainly discouraging:—An account says:

"In nearly all parts of Europe the Summer weather has been unusually damp and cold, and the crops are for the most part below an average. In France the grain crops is estimated at from a quarter to one third deficient. In Italy the prospects are no more favorable. Throughout all southern Europe the vines have suffered much, and the approaching vintage will be unusually short. In Germany the war and wet weather have greatly diminished the crops of grain. The only countries that seem exempt from the general visitation are Russia and Spain. The growing crops of England and Ireland have been seriously injured by heavy rains. To add to all this gloomy prospect, it appears that the potato rot has again appeared in Ireland, under the most threatening symptoms."—Whig.

An Ecclesiastical Council.—A plenary council of the archbishops, bishops and other dignitaries of the Roman catholic church in the United States is now being held at Baltimore. It met first on Sunday morning, the occasion being made one for the display of all that gorgeous and imposing ceremonial which distinguishes the Roman church. There was a procession from the residence of the archbishop of Baltimore to the cathedral, in which seven archbishops, thirty-eight bishops, one hundred and twenty-two priests, heads of orders and doctors of divinity, seventy-four ecclesiastics, four monks, and three mitred abbots took part. The streets through which the procession passed were densely crowded with people, as was also the cathedral, where high mass was performed with great pomp.

Announcements in the Official Gazette.—A regulation appears in Saturday's Canada Gazette for the establishment of claims to pensioners, or gratuity, arising out of the death or wounds of Volunteer officers or men, or on disability from illness contracted while on actual service. The claims are to be divided into three classes—namely, on the part of relatives of volunteers who may have been killed in action or died of wounds or disease contracted on actual services; second, on the part of volunteers who incapacitated, by wounds or disease from following their former trade or profession; third, volunteers partially incapacitated from wounds or disease received on actual service.

Alleged finding of relics.—We learn from a French paper that the shroud in which Joseph of Arimathea wrapped the body of Christ has been discovered in the Church of Cadouin, diocese of Perigueux, in France. Mgr. Dabert, the Bishop of the diocese, has addressed to his clergy and to the faithful a pastoral letter, in which he gives his proofs of the authenticity of the shroud, which, he says, was captured by the French at the time of the crusades, and has since performed a great many miracles. On the 5th Sept. the relic was to be transferred to a new magnificent shrine. Truly, if there is not much faith in France, there is at least much credulity.—Montreal Witness.

Fenian Designs.—The Minerve states that one of our citizens received yesterday a letter from Troy which announces that the Fenians, having given up the plan of a formal invasion, propose to spread in the leading cities of Canada and set them on fire. They are especially incensed against Montreal, and speak of blowing up the reservoir, setting the city on fire at several points at the same time, and during the confusion plundering. Supposing these designs to be really intended, they are quite insane, and can be easily prevented by a little vigilance on the part of the police.

An Attempt to Assassinate the President.—Gen. Grant expresses the opinion that there was a deliberate purpose to assassinate the President at Indianapolis. The Herald of that city says:—Gen. Grant said that the first shot fired came from the second story window on the opposite side of the street; that the ball struck one of the Chinese lanterns suspended from the window of the President's room, and, entering the room, passed within three feet of his own head. He expresses the opinion that it was a deliberate attempt to assassinate Mr. Johnson.

Missionary Ship.—A vessel called the Morning Star was launched at Boston on Saturday, which cost $20,000, and was paid for entirely from the contributions of Sunday school children in about two thousand Sunday schools in different parts of the world. This vessel is to be fitted out by the Missionary Board at Honolulu, in the Sandwich Island, and is to be engaged wholly in missionary work.

Money makes the Mare go.—This is an old and true saying, and it is equally true that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" will make all pains go from the body, and cures Bowel complaints, Tooth Ache, Head Ache, Sprains, Bruises, &c., sooner than anything else discovered. Price 25 cents a Bottle.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1866.

The Examinations.

The Examination for the prizes obtained through the liberality of the Hon. Billa Flint, came off in Monaghan on Thursday last. The schools were all well represented, and the parents came out also to see how the little ones would do. The reading was very good, and the answering in all the classes, creditable. These examinations keep the teachers awake.

The Extmination came off on the following day in Smith. Eight of the ten schools were represented; Nos. 4, 6 and 7 largely; Nos. 2, 3, 5, 8 and 9, only by a few pupils. The different schools carried off prizes, so that no one was in the shade. The people of Smith took a lively interest in the whole proceedings. The number of pupils competing was greater than we had expected, and the answering was reasonably good. If these examinations be kept up, and made a little stricter each year a marked improvement would soon be evident. We do not intend to particularize, when all did so well. But we may tell Smith, that the reading was best in Monaghan, and arithmetic best in Smith. The pupils in Smith, however, were larger than those in Monaghan. We make these remarks to stimulate, not to create jealousy, and we trust that all honest rivalry will be maintained with good will. The teachers at both examinations behaved most honorably and becomingly, not one interfering unduly; only one teacher, (and he was was an outsider) seemed not to know his place.

At the close of the proceedings in Smith, it was moved by M. S. Dean, Esq., Reeve of Smith, and seconded by I. Garbut, Esq.,—"That a vote of thanks be tendered to the Hon. Billa Flint for the amount of ten dollars given by him for purchasing prizes for the schools in Smith;" which was carried unanimously.

Personal.

It is with pleasure that we record the fact that at the matriculant examinations at Toronto University, held on the 20th of September, Master Burrit Edwards obtained first Honors in Mathematics and French, he also stood first in classics and English; not having read the additional books required for honors in classics, he could not compete for honors in these, but he ranks highest amongst the non-honor candidates in classics. Master William Coulter and Frederick Clurton also matriculated very creditably in medicine. By the alteration lately made by the medical Council in the curriculum of studies for matriculants in medicine, they were unable to read the additional books required for honors in medicine, still their names rank high in the class of medical matriculants. These add three more to the names of successful pupils from our Grammar School.

Church Opening at Lakefield.

The Episcopal church, of which the Rev. V. Clementi is Incumbent, will be opened on Tuesday next. The newly elected Co-adjutor Bishop will be the preacher on the occasion. A collection will be taken up after the Services.

Quick Work.

The other day Mr. Samuel Peeples, of Asphodel, raised 60 bushels of potatoes in 53 hours. The potatoes belonged to Mr Wright, Principal Norwood Grammar School. Beat this, who can.

Cattle Drowned.—On Saturday evening, while a large drove of cattle, intended for the supply of the military authorities at Quebec, was driven on board the Grand Trunk Ferry, at the depot Levis, a stampede ensued among them, and some eighteen or twenty of the animals went over the wharf and were drowned.

There is a good deal of food for the thoughtful mind in the following extract from an American paper:

Mortality Amongst Federal and Confederate Prisoners.—In reply to a resolution of the House of Representatives, says the Washington Union of Tuesday, calling upon the Secretary of War for the number of prisoners of either side held, and that died during the war, he makes the following report: Number of the Union prisoners South, 261,000; number of Confederate prisoners North, 200,000; number of Union prisoners died, 22,576; number of Confederate prisoners died, 26,535. Out of 261,000 Union prisoners 22,500 died. The Union prisoners exceeded the Confederate prisoners 61,000; yet the deaths of the Union prisoners fell below those of Confederate prisoners six thousand. The Yankee prisoners died out of every twenty-three in Southern pens. Two Confederate prisoners died out of every fifteen in Northern pens

Dinner and Sword Presentation to Lieut. Grover, of the Norwood Volunteer Company.

On Monday evening, as we previously announced, the Norwood Volunteer Company entertained T. M. Grover, Esq., Lieutenant of the Company, at a sumptuous repast.—The spread was arrayed in the Norwood Town Hall. P. Pearce, Esq., Reeve of Belmont, occupied the Chair, and the Vice Chairs were filled by P. M. Grover, Reeve of Asphodel; A. Kidd, Reeve of Dummer; and Joseph Pearce, Esq. On the right of the Chairman sat Captain Tice, of the Campbellford Volunteers; and Lieut Grover. On the left, Dr. Rutherfurd, of Dundas; and Mr. Patterson, Deputy Reeve of Asphodel. We also noticed Doctors Ford and Scott, of Norwood; Dr. Fife, of Hastings; Capt. Robt. Wigmore, and about 70 other gentlemen present.

Presentation.

Immediately after supplying the inner man with the substantial things provided, the Volunteers stood in File while Col. Sergt. Riggs Presented the following address, accompanied by the Sword:—

Lieutenant Grover,—The energetic and successful manner in which you have acted in organizing and instructing the men of this Company in their discipline and duties as soldiers, fully entitle you to the high esteem in which you are held by all of us.

When it came to our knowledge that you were about to leave us to attend to your collegiate duties, a desire was at once manifested that you should not depart from amongst us without taking with you a token of our esteem and friendship. We all feel that we are about to lose the service of a most valuable Officer. I therefore in the name of the non-commissioned officers and privates of the company, ask you to accept this sword accompanied with our hearts felt wishes that you may live long to wear it, to your own honour and the glory of our Queen and country.

To which Lieut. Grover replied:—

Colour Sergt. Riggs, Non-Commissioned officers and men of the Norwood Volunteer Company,—It is with feelings of the deepest gratitude that I receive such a mark of your kind regard as I take it of you for a few months, and I cannot but feel that the success which has attended the practice of the company in military exercise is due not more to my instructions than to your attention and intelligence; and I can assure you I feel as much pleasure in teaching those willing to learn as you experience in advancing to the higher branches of military instruction, and I though I hope and trust our country may never require us to take the field in her defence, I shall endeavour to keep this sword ready when wanted.

After the presentation, the Chairman remarked that although he occupied the very honorable position of Chairman of so respectable an assemblage, yet he felt the awkwardness of his position. He expected that the Reeve of Asphodel would have occupied the Chair, but delicacy forbade it, as the honored guest of the evening was so near a relative to that gentleman. He (Mr. Pearce) felt honored in being present at the banquet, and being a modest man, this might be considered enough for him to say; but as the oldest resident of Norwood and vicinity, he could scarcely refrain from saying a few words more. He had long acted as the agent of the gentleman, Mr. Keeler, who once owned all the land on which the flourishing village of Norwood now stands, and having come into that locality about thirty years ago, he had seen the growth as well as the difficulties of the settlement. He was proud, however, to be present to do honor to a direct descendant of Mr. Keeler, a gentleman who cared much for the well-being of every one who settled on his land. Mr. Keeler not only brought in settlers, but fed them when they were in, as many could not easily provide food thirty years ago. He (Mr. Pearce) had also been intimately acquainted with P. M. Grover, Esq., and his family, and he felt to-night that this tribute to a member of Mr. Grover's family, and direct descendant of Mr. Keeler, was a well merited one. But the guest of the evening was more than a mere descendant of worthy ancestors; he had proved himself also a hero; he had faced the foe at Lime Ridge; he had dared to enter the battle field, and had shown himself ready to lay down his life in defence of his Queen and Country. With such men as Lieut Grover we, as Canadians, had nothing to fear. We need not fear the Fenians, for our Volunteers had made them afraid; nor need we fear the American power, for even they would dare to arouse the ire of our Volunteers, aided by the regular soldiers of Great Britain. Lieut. Grover had said he would keep his sword ready when wanted, of which we feel no doubts. The past warrants us to believe the best for the future. Mr. Pearce then remarked that the Government had made the liberal offer of $250 towards building a drill shed in Norwood, and he hoped that Asphodel, Dummer and Belmont would come forward and assist, so that ere long Norwood might also boast of a place to drill her Volunteers in. Norwood had progressed rapidly, and he hoped, you knew it would continue to do so. It was now the chief village in the East Riding of the County, and he trusted that no effort would be spared to make it a suitable place for everything connected with the Riding.

Mr. Pearce then gave "The Queen" which was received with tremendous cheers.

Dr. Rutherford, of Dundas, then sung "Here's a health to the Queen, God bless her," joined in by all.

The next toast was "The Governor General and Members of the Government."

Song—"For they are jolly good fellows."

Next came "The Army and Navy," followed by "The Red, White and Blue" by Dr. Ford,

Capt. Tice, of Campbellford, responded in behalf of the army, remarking that he had been 20 years a captain in Her Majesty's service, five of which years he had been Captain of a Volunteer Company. He (Capt. Tice) felt great pleasure in being present, and he would avail himself of offering a word of advice to the Volunteers. Before resigning, the law required six months' notice, such a law should never have been made, and he trusted that no Volunteer would ever avail himself of it. When they donned the Red Coat it was to fight for their Queen and Country, and both deserved their best efforts, and he trusted they would never take it off. The Red Coat was an honor to its wearer, and every volunteer should be like the ladies, ever fond of Red Coats.—They should be slow to take offence, and quick to forgive one; by so doing, many difficulties are removed and harmony and happiness maintained. In reference to Lieut. Grover, he (Captain Tice) felt it a favor to be present at this banquet to his honor; and he knew that as he was at Ridgeway, so would he ever be,—Aye ready to do his duty.

The chairman then gave: "Our Guest"—Lieut. Grover.

Lieut. Grover rose, amidst prolonged cheering, and said, he thanked them most heartily for the manner in which his name had been received, and hoped that his simply thanking them, would be taken for a speech. His friends, he knew, would feel his position, a mere stripling, and not expect too much from him to-night. In regard to what he had done, it was merely a duty.—He loved his drill and loved to instruct others as far as his abilities would permit him; the men also appeared to like the drill, and hence the easy work he had had. When he returned from Toronto, where he had received his instruction, he did not think of raising a company. His Captain and he had raised one, but not without difficulties, and he hoped that the men would stick together. Although about to leave them they would receive another drill instructor, and would no doubt continue to improve as they had all along. The erection of a drill shed would also be an advantage to them in rainy and stormy weather, and he trusted it would not be lost sight of. He, however, did not think that the Volunteers' services would be required for a long time, yet, nevertheless, it was best to be ready; but if the company should be called out it would not be long till he (Lieut. Grover) would be with it, and try to do what he could for his country, side by side with the Volunteers of Norwood. As he hoped to see them again he would not detain them longer; he thanked them heartily for the honor conferred on him, and sat down amidst great cheering.

"The Volunteers of Canada" was then given.

Dr. Rutherford, of Dundas, responded.—The Doctor is one of those fine jovial fellows whose very presence seems to have the effect of cheering up every one around him. He remarked that it required the eloquence of a Cicero to do justice to this toast, nor even then would justice be done. All praise was due the Volunteers. To Canada they were what the soldiers and wooden walls of old England were to that sea girt isle. They were our defence, and nobly had they shown themselves able and willing. He would remark that in Dundas a company had been raised in 24 hours. A young lawyer mounted the rostrum when danger appeared to threaten, and obtained the requisite number in a few hours. Those brave fellows had gone to the front, to Thorold and wherever ordered, and never yet had a word of complaint been raised concerning them, never had one of them been drunk, nor yet disorderly. Our Volunteers were an honor to our country and would be to any country. The doctor was highly applauded throughout.

"Canada, our Home," was next on the list. In giving which, Mr. Peafce remarked, that although cold, it was dear to us, and prized by the United States, as their desire, have it annexed showed, and as the return of all who left us testified.

P. M. Grover, Esq., responded, saying that as a native Canadian, it gav him pleasure to speak it, and as the oldest Canadian in the house he could boast that we had the finest country in the world; all true Canadians loved their country and their Queen; not a man in Canada was found bold enough to make a speech in favor of the Fenians, or traitor, or to speak in favor of annexation. We enjoyed such liberty as only Britons enjoy, and privileges only possessed by Canadians. We were a free people, in a free country, rich in fertility and produce; all we wanted was to work and we would reap the reward, and there was no one to rob us of our possessions unless out-throat Fenians; but if ever they return they will come to grief; the people are now ready for them, and he trusted that they would always be ready.

Robert Morrison, Esq., also spoke to this toast, in the most perfect burst of native eloquence, and, although, assuring his audience that half of his pulmonary organs was gone, he made himself heard and delighted the whole house. He was particularly pleased to be present, to be honored in being a guest. He was delighted to do honor to the noble hero of Ridgeway. This battle at Ridgeway had been lightly spoken of, but to do so was a token of ignorance of its magnitude and results. Many deeds of daring had been performed by British soldiers—Wellington had led them victorious through the peninsula. At Bourossa a few Englishmen hurled back the columns of the enemy, and maintained the honor of the soldier and of the nation. But this was nothing to the daring at Lime Ridge, when a few school boys faced the veterans of the great rebellion and drove them from our country in two or three hours. Let the Fenians remember, if the children did so well, what would the fathers do?

A. Kidd, Reeve of Dummer, also replied, in which he referred to the difficulties of early settlement; but now we had homes and we would, as we had ever done, defend them again at all who dare assail us. In '37 all the men of Dummer had gone, but one old man, who was left to cut wood for the wives and little ones. This they would do again, if required.

"Our Municipal Institutions" was ably spoken to by Mr. Patterson, Deputy Reeve of Asphodel. After giving his meed of praise to the loyalty of all Canadians, he upheld the action of the Reeves and Deputy Reeves of the eastern section of the county in the local and also in the county council, referred to the fact that they were placed on all important committees, had something to do in all the business of the county, and labored to get things done in a satisfactory and just manner, as did all the members of the County Council. He hoped they would get a drill shed at Norwood; true, he was not a Volunteer, but he was glad he had a son who was, and he hoped he would be worthy of the training he had received in loyalty to the crown of Great Britain and the liberty of all men. Being pleased with everything he saw he hoped all would be pleased to allow him to sit down.

Dr. Rutherford remarked on being called, that he was not a Canadian, and doubted whether any present could tell what countryman he was, born in Alexanderia, of Scotch and Irish parents he hardly knew what he was, but he loved Canada, British freedom, and hoped to enjoy it for life.

Drs. Ford, Scott and Fyfe all spoke to the toast. We regret that space forbids giving their speeches in extenso. They all liked Canada, their country, their homes, and would do what they could to defend them.

Dr. Rutherford sung "Dr. Brown."

"The Mercantile Interests" was responded to by Messrs. Roxburgh, Buck, Reynolds, Cannoo and Smith. The intervals were occupied by songs from Corporal Morrison and Mr. Jas. Nicoll,

"The Press" was next given, and was responded to by Mr. Stratton of the Examiner.

"Our School System," by Mr. Wright, Principal of the Norwood Grammar School.

"The Agricultural Interests" was ably responded to by Wm. Sargent, Esq., of Seymour, and we regret that this speech cannot find a place; it certainly was full of wit.

Then came a number of impromptu toasts and Volunteer songs, occupying the night till almost light, when, after singing "God Save the Queen," led by Dr. Rutherford, all dispersed. The evening was really a pleasant one, one that will not soon be forgotten in Norwood or by those who were present.

Asphodel, Belmont and Dummer Fall Show.

The Annual Exhibition of the above Society was held at the Village of Norwood, on Tuesday last. The number of entries was 418, but in the hurry of making entries several farmers and others who exhibited two or more articles of the same sort, received but one ticket for the whole. Had tickets been given for each article or animal exhibited, and also a separate entry made, the number would have been nearly 450. The ladies work, domestic manufactures, dairy and farm produce, &c., were arranged in the Town Hall, which was very small for the occasion; but, as Norwood is about to have a Drill Shed, there will be better accommodations for such exhibitions in future.

The show of horses was reasonably good; not, however, up to our expectations, considering the advanced state of some of the townships in the east of the county.

The show of cattle was not large, and there which animals not of a superior quality.—This, however, can be accounted for from the fact that the American buyers have drained at section of the county of all the cattle they could induce the owners to part with. Mr. James McFee, of Dummer, took the first prize for aged bull, and it will be seen that Messrs. Dinsdale and Clysdale carried of the other prizes. Some of the Judges informed us that there is a marked improvement in the young stock during the last year or two, hence, another year may entirely change the record under this head.

In dairy and farm produce there was not very great competition, only a few entries in any of the articles.

There were but two tubs and about four crocks of butter to be seen, and, in consequence, it might be unfair to pass judgment on the butter makers of the eastern section of the county from the quantity and samples shown. There were, however, a few nice lots; the parcel obtaining the first prize, in the opinion of others as well as the Judges, really deserved it.

The grain shown was very good, but there were very few competitors.

The entries in garden and field roots were not numerous, but those shown were good, especially turnips and carrots.

Sheep were better represented than the horses or cattle. Messrs. A. R. Kidd, Jas. McFee, F. Bird-all and others exhibited some good animals, principally of the Leicester breed.

In farming implements, it might be said, there was no competition. We only saw three ploughs on the ground. Two of these were exhibited by Joseph Pearce, Esq., of Norwood. One was a wooden plough, and one had an iron beam. These were the favorites with the Judges and Farmers present; and Mr. Pearce, who has a foundry and machine shop in the Village of Norwood, will, no doubt, find a ready sale for them. Mr. A. R. Kidd, of Dummer, exhibited an iron plough that has been imported from England. It was certainly a neat looking article, it had wheels and register for regulating depth of soil and breath of furrow, and Mr. Kidd assured us that it is a superior plough. Yet, as few of those present had seen it work, and, therefore, could not judge for themselves, they feared its quality in stony soil. It obtained a prize, however.

The ladies' work was all fancy, very little, if any, plain needle work was to be seen.—The fancy work, we were assured by a gentleman from Western Canada, would compare favorably with anything shown in the cities. The worsted work, raised work, netting, tatting, knitting, cone work, feather, hair, seed, wreaths, &c., &c., manifest the interest the ladies take in these things. But not a plain shirt, dress, or other article of permanent utility was to be seen. Yet we cannot persuade ourselves but that the fingers that formed the fancy work of such excellence, could do neat, plain stitching.—Will the ladies forgive us for intimating that while husbands require shirts they also require some one who can make them. The ladies' department was more extensively represented than any other single division.

The concourse of people was immense; between 300 and 400 tickets were sold, and the rush to the interior of the Hall, after admittance was granted, was enough to try the muscle of the throng.

The Fall Cattle Fair took place the same day, and several cattle were disposed of.—The usual business in horse flesh was apparent, very few good horses, however, changed hands.

About 2 o'clock the volunteers made their appearance on the ground, and certainly they are fine looking fellows; a credit to Norwood and the Surrounding Country.

The day was very fine until evening, when a heavy shower, accompanied by thunder and lightning, induced all who could, to provide shelter from the storm.

Immediately after completing the examination of articles about 40 sat down to an excellent dinner prepared by "mine host" Johnston where all right heartily discussed the viands in noble style.

The storm and consequent hurry prevented the prize list being read. The following is the list compiled with great care from the various reports of the Judges:—

Horses.

Stallion: 1st John Clysdale, 2nd Robert Johnston.

Team of Horses in Harness and Wagon: 1st Robert Fyfe, 2nd John W. Fyfe, 3rd John Crawford.

There were several specimens of the ore of lead, and one of bitumen exhibited; these were all dug out of the Townships of Belmont or Methuen, and judging from weight they were evidently rich specimens, and afford ample proof of the mineral wealth of that section of country.

Plowing Match.

The Otonabee Ploughing Match came off on the farm of Thos. Blizard, on Saturday last. A considerable number of plows was on the ground; after drawing tickets each man and boy went to work. The day was fine, and the work of all was very creditable, although some had the advantage of better plows than others. The Judges after a careful inspection awarded the prizes as follows:—

Men's Class.

1st David Henderson, 2nd Robert Renwick, 3rd James Cameron, 4th Francis Elmhirst, 5th Joseph Taylor.

Boy's Class.

1st Thomas Stewart, 2nd John Cameron, 3rd Richard Elmhirst, 4th Thomas Miller.

After all was done the plowmen and Judges sat down to an excellent dinner prepared by Mrs. Thomas Blizard, after which each one went to his respective home.—Com.

TORONTO MARKETS.

Tuesday, Oct. 9, 1866.

The favorable change in the weather has caused a dullness in all departments of trade.

Barley continues to pour into our market in large quantities, but owing to the unfavourable news received from Oswego of the decline in that market on account of the large receipts, buyers would not pay within five or seven cents of yesterday's prices. The receipts of wheat by cars are very considerable; very little is, however, at present offering on Change the grain being all stored for shipment. The flour market is rather lower; a sale of No. 1 superfine having been made to-day at $7 00. Provisions are moving off slowly at rates current last week.

Corn Exchange Report.

The Great English Remedy!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heariness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

A FORTUNATE KISS.

The following pretty little story is narrated by Frederika Bremer, who vouches for its truthfulness:

In the University of Upsala, in Sweden lived a young student, a noble youth, with great love for studies, but without means for pursuing them. He was poor, without connections. Still he studied, living in great poverty, but keeping a cheerful heart, and trying to look at the future which looked so grim to him, his good humor and excellent qualities made him be cared by his comrades. One day he was standing at the square with some of them, prattling away an hour of leisure, when the attention of the young men became arrested by a young and elegant lady, who, by the side of an elder one, was slowly walking over the place. It was the daughter of the Governor of Upsala, living in this city, and the lady was her governess. She was generally known for her goodness and gentleness of character, and looked at with admiration by all the students. As the young men stood gazing at her as she passed, like a graceful vision, one of them suddenly exclaimed.

"Well, it would be worth something to have a kiss from such a mouth."

The poor student, the hero of our story, who looked on that pure angelic face, exclaimed, as if by inspiration:—

"Well, I think I could have it."

"Well!" cried his friends in a chorus, "are you crazy? Do you know her?"

"Not at all," he answered, "but I think she would kiss me if I asked her."

"What, in this place, and before all our eyes?"

"Yes."

"Freely?"

"Yes, freely."

"Well, if she would give you a kiss in that manner, I will give you a thousand dollars!" exclaimed one of the party.

"And I, and I," exclaimed three or four others, for it happened that several rich men were in a group and the bets ran high as so improbable an event. The challenge was made and received in less time than we have taken to tell it to the public.

Our hero (my authority tells not whether he was plain or handsome; I have my peculiar reason for believing that he was rather plain, but singularly good looking at the same time) immediately walked up to the young lady and said:—

"Mine fraulien, my fortune is now in your hands."

She looked at him in astonishment, but arrested her steps. He proceeded to state his name and condition, his aspiration, and related simply what had just now occurred between him and his comrades.

The young lady listened attentively, and at his ceasing to speak, she said, blushingly, but with great sweetness:—

"If by so little a thing so much good can be effected, it would be foolish of me to refuse your request," and publicly, in the open square, she kissed him.

Next day the student was sent for by the Governor. He wanted to see the man who dared to seek a kiss from his daughter in that way, and whom she consented to kiss.

He received him with a scrutinising bow, but after an hour's conversation was so pleased with him that he ordered him to dine at his table during his studies at Upsala.

Our young friend pursued his studies in such a manner that it soon made him regarded as the most promising student in the University.

Three years were now passed since the first kiss, when the young man was allowed to give a second kiss to the daughter of the Governor as his wife.

He became, later, one the most noted scholars in Sweden, and was much respected for his character. His works will endure while time lasts among the works of science; and from this happy union sprang a family well known in Sweden at the present time, whose wealth and high position in society are regarded as trifles in comparison with its goodness and love.

STAGE NONSENSE.

We were speaking to a friend the other day, respecting the merits of a "celebrated tragedian," when he had occasion to comment on the rant of the stage—the loud mouthing, the outrageous gestures, the furious rolling of the eye, the stride, swords that rattle in the hilt, and all the "pomp and circumstances" of the modern drama.

Fancy this style carried into real life.—On being introduced to a lady you would say, throwing yourself into a splendid attitude:

"Most gracious madame, on my knees I greet you," impressively placing your right hand upon your heart.

To a creditor who would not pay: "Fraudulent knave! payest thou me not? By yonder sun that blazes in the zenith, thee will I sue, and thou shalt see thy impious name flaming the streets on posters huge."

At dinner:—"Now, by me soul, and all my highest hopes, those beans are royal. Were I Jupiter, beans should grace each kingly banquet. What ho! waiter, bring hither more beans!"

To your wife: "Madam, beware thou dost excite me not; else being too hot with wrath I do myself some harm. A needle—a button on that shirt—and see it instantly performed. Do it! Nor leave the task to me."

To your butcher: "Thou ensanguined destroyer of bovines, send me some mutton and some beef; and mark you let it be tenderer than love and sweeter than the bee's rare burden. I would dine to-day."

To a friend: "Excuse a rash intrusion on your grace, but hast thou in thy box a portion of that plant ranked by the botanist among the genus nicotiana?" Or, "Most noble friend wilt thou partake with me some strong libation? Thou lookest dull to-day; 'twill cheer thy aching heart."

Reply: "Oh, noble soul! alas, not all the wine of Bacchanalian revels could ease the sorrow here—here! here! (Left arm struck several times.) Oh, whata fool and arrant knave am I, the very sport of fortune."

This is scarcely more ridiculous than three quarters of the stage nonsense.

A Persian merchant complaining heavily of some unjust sentence, was told by the judge to go to the cadi. "Bet the cadi is your uncle," urged the plaintiff. "Then you can go to the Grand Vicar." "But his secretary is your cousin." "Then you may go to the Sultan." But his favorite sultana is your niece." "Well, then, go to the devil!" "Ah that is a still closer family connexion," said the merchant, as he left the court.

A Missouri paper announced a short time ago that "the wife crop in Gasconade county yielded 15,000 gallons." The next week the editor came out with an erratum —"for wife read wine."

Prentice says of an editor who "smelled a rat" that if he did, and the rat smelled him, the rat had the worst of it.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jeff" to P—"Exactly P—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "owley" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or manfully oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins again, sure and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"* * * I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"* * * I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"* * * I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. * * * The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"* * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

MRS. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SHEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

C. HEIMSTREET, Chemist.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER—for Indigestion, Nausea, Heart-burn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c, where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity makes it a cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bott'e. Ask for "Lyon's" Pure Extract. Take no other.

Poetry.

AUTUMN DAYS.

BY ALICE CARY.

Now time has brought the season round
Of russet morns and eves,
Of stubble, stead of flowery ground,
Of frosts and fading leaves.

But though the days come up so late
And walk in shadows drear,
I watch and watch, and watch and wait,
To greet them yea! by year.

For well I love the wind that shakes
The fading branches bare,
And love the thistle down that makes
The dasies of the air.

And love to hear the schoolboy's call,
While raves he at his will,
And love to hear the ripe nuts fall
When all beside is still.

I love to see the birds take flight,
As silently they rise,
And wheel and turn from left to right,
Like armies in the skies.

I love to see the maples high
To crimson colors run,
And love to see the flocks that lie
So lazy in the sun.

I love the quiet of the air
That charms the wood and world,
And makes the landscape everywhere,
So pleasant to behold.

But more than any pleasant sight
The outward world can show,
I love at coming on of night
To see the hearth-fire glow;

And love to see the circle there—
The child with rosy face,
The sturdy boys, the girls so fair
And full of gentle grace;

The mother in the chimney nook,
Her work upon her knees,
The father, with his pipe or book,
And in his chair of ease.

For still when autumn's chilly airs
Begin to blast and blight
The fields and flowers, the household gains
The vanished warmth and light.

Selections.

REMEMBER.

1st.—That before food can be of any benefit to the body, it must be dissolved in the stomach, so that it can be absorbed into the blood in a liquid state, and be thus carried to the parts of the body needing to be nourished or strengthened, or renewed by it.—Remember.

2nd.—That the human stomach is not like the gizzard of a fowl—a hard, tough membrane filled with gravel stones, to break or grind up the food—but that it is a soft bag, so to speak, which merely holds the food and shakes it about, so that the gastric juice can better dissolve and work into a liquid state; therefore—Remember.

3rd.—That nothing should go into the stomach which has not been first masticated (chewed) very fine, or cut or mashed line before it is taken into the mouth, so it can be easily dissolved. Lumps of potatoe, and of fruit not well ripened and mellow, pieces of meat as large as chesnuts, lumps of dough or new bread, small fruits with skin unbroken, etc.—anything that will be slowly dissolved—causes an uneasy feeling and often irritates and inflames the stomach itself. Further, if they are not dissolved, these things pass down through the whole twenty-five feet or more of the alimentary canal, causing pain, colic, diarrhœa, and often dysentery.—Remember.

4th.—That the saliva of the mouth mixed with the food, greatly aids the dissolving or digestion of the food in the stomach, and that even soft food should be chewed or worked over in the mouth, until well mixed with saliva.—Remember.

5th.—That children cannot appreciate the importance of masticating food, and that great care should be taken, either to see that they masticate it well, or that it be so thoroughly prepared for them that it cannot pass into the stomach in an undigestible form. Proper care in this single thing would save the lives of half the children that now die young, and a very large proportion of all "pains under the apron," the diarrhœas, and bowel complaints that children, and grown people as well, suffer.—Remember.

6th.—That, as all food after going into the stomach must either be properly digested, or produce injurious results, it is the height of folly, to crowd down into the stomach two or three quarts of food and drink, and expect that organ to work it up readily. Suppose for every article you eat at a meal, you put or imagine you put, precisely a similar amount into a dish—the meat, bread, potatoes, vegetables, tea, coffee or water, and the pie or pudding—what a mixture you would have both in kind and bulk; yet that is what is given to the stomach to dissolve or try to dissolve.—Remember,

7th.—That the stomach keeps at work while it has any undissolved food in it, and if you lunch or piece between meals you give that organ no time to rest, and it will in time be weakened if it does not give out.—Remember.

8th.—That sleep is far more quiet and refreshing, if the stomach sleeps with the rest of the body, and that it is better to eat nothing that cannot be digested before retiring to rest. Children, who retire early, or ought to, should have only light suppers of simple, digestible food.

LUCK AND LABOR.—Luck is ever waiting for something to turn up.

Labor, with keen eyes and strong will, will turn up something.

Luck lies in bed, and wishes the postman would bring him news of a legacy.

Labor turns out at six o'clock, and with busy pen or ringing hammer, lays the foundation of a competence.

Luck relies on chances.

Labor, on character.

Luck slips downward to indulgence.

Labor strides upward, and to independence.

Death Scenes of Remarkable Persons.

Mary, Scotland's great beauty, met the "gloomy king" with a degree of resolution not to be expected from her misfortunes, so numerous were they—deserted by every friend, except her faithful little dog. Sir Thomas More remarked to the executioner, by whose hands he was about to perish, that the scaffold was extremely weak: "I pray you see me up safe," said he; "and for my coming down let me shift for myself." Chaucer breathed his last when composing a ballad; his last production is called "A ballad made by Geoffrey Chaucer on his deathbed, lying in great pain." "I could wish this tragic scene was over," said Quin, the actor; "but to go through it with becoming dignity." Petrarch was found dead in his library leaning on a book. Rousseau, when dying, ordered his attendants to remove him, and place him before the window, that he might look upon his garden, and gladden his eyes with the sight of nature; how ardent an admirer he was of nature is most poetically told in Zimmerman's "Solitude." Pope tells us he found Godfrey Kneller (when visited him a few days prior to his bed) sitting up forming the plans for the erection of his own monument; his vanity was conspicuous even in death. Warren has observed that Chesterfield's good breeding only left him with death: "Give Drysdale a chair," said he to his valet, when that person was announced. Bayle, when dying, pointed to where his proof-sheet was deposited. Clarendon's pen dropped from his head when seized with palsy which put an end to his existence. Bede died in the act of dictating. Boscommon, when expiring, quotted from his own translation of the "Dies Irae." Haller, feeling his pulse, said "The artery ceases to beat," and immediately died. When the priest, whom Alfieri had been prevailed on to see, came, he requested him to call to-morrow.—'Death, I trust, will tarry four-and-twenty hours." Nelson's last words were, "Tell Collingwood to bring the fleet to an anchor." —Illuminated Magazine.

LOVERS IN A FIX.

Night before last, as the moon rose over the hill and treetop, gilding the spires of our beautiful city with her silvery rays, there might have been seen upon the roof of an Egyptain cottage, which is flat and covered with pure white gravel and pith, a couple of lovers seated, enjoying the beauty of the scene.

The sun during the day had been very warm, and thus they met to spend the fading hours of twilight, enjoying the pleasant breeze that floated up from the magnolia garden beneath, and interchanging their soul-longings and warm affections. Near each other the lovers sat—with one arm he encircled the waist of the beautiful creature at his side, and all passed quietly and lovingly until the bell tolled the midnight hour.

The tolling of the bell reminded them that "tired nature's sweet restorer" was requisite for lovers as well as others. Still seated near each other, the plighted vows were again and again exchanged, and sealed with kisses, like "linked sweetness long drawn out."

At length, after many vain attempts to sever these pleasant pleasures, the transported lovers found that they were bound to each other by more sticking bonds than lover's vows. The hot sun had melted the pitch, and after sitting so long, and the night having cooled the resinous matter, they found they were both "stuck fast." The young gentleman first attempted to disengage himself, but found like Aunt Jemima's plaster, "the more you try to pull it off the more it sticks the faster." The young lady then attempted to get up, which she did, minus the skirt of her dress, and all her underclothes as far as the "litters." In this plight she tried to relieve her disconsolate partner, but it was of no use—he couldn't come. After some parley, he came to the conclusion that he could manage it by slipping out of his pants. Accordingly he asked of his companion if she could lend him a pair of pants until he could go home.—She thought her pa's would do if they were not too long. With this information he slipped off his boots, and loosening his suspenders, drew himself out of his pants as easily as possible, and the disconsolate couple took themselves down stairs in a very blushing manner, and looking very much like our first parents when they discovered that they were human. A pair of pa's pants were procured as quickly as possible, and run into pretty suddenly and the Adonis decamped with his pants rolled up about six inches. The joke was too good to keep; by little and little it leaked out until the truth had to come to exculpate the happy innocents.—Memphis Appeal.

A (W)HOLE SHIRT.—An Irish barrister, when he first took up his abode in Liverpool, was troubled with "never a brass farthing," and he "onst upon a time" described his poverty as follows: "When I first came to Liverpool I was in perfect rags; the smallest hole in my shirt was the one I stuck my head through; and I had to have that, my only shirt, washed by the dozen, for it was in twelve pieces."

"What is the future state?" said a clergyman to a sprightly little girl. "Illinois, Sir."

"No, no," said the clergyman. "I mean what is the real future condition of men and women?" "Why," replied she, after some hesitation, "I suppose they are to be married."

HOW THEY DO IN MAINE.—Quaker young ladies in the Maine Law State, it is said, still continues to kiss the lips of the young temperence men to see if they have been tampering with liquor.

An old woman lately fell off a house in Limerick. On being taken up she applied her hand to her pocket, with the romantic observation, "Musha, I wonder is me pipe broke!"

There is frequently more pleasure in giving a thing than receiving it. This applies more especially to medicine, advice and kicks.

HINTS FOR OCTOBER.

Perhaps there is no more important thing for a farmer to think of at this time, after he has harvested his crops for the most part, and begins to see his way clear through his fall work, than his BUILDINGS.—A little labor upon them now will tell. A board here and a nail there, and a few shingles newly set, will save many dollars' worth of loss or expense later in the season, when storms and winds do their work, and rain and snow penetrate. Warm close stables, with good ventilation, should be looked to. Make sheds to shelter manure if it is thrown out of barn windows and doors. No matter how good the barn-yard, the manure is a great deal better under cover. Even the hog yard ought to be thus covered, though there should be space for the sun to shine in, and make a warm place during a good part of the day. Painting may be done in October to excellent advantage. Take time after a rain when surfaces are clean and when there will be no dust flying. And in connection with putting the buildings in order for winter above ground, do not forget the.

CELLARS.—Both house cellars and root cellars should be cleaned out, and well limed. If there is time, put in grouted cement bottoms, proof against rats and mice and water. Cement the walls also, first chinking them up, that is, filling in between the stones with smaller ones. A good cellar is not only acomfort, but if frost proof and rat proof, a great economy. Make cellars frost proof by banking up outside against the walls, if they are exposed, and by double doors and windows.

LIVE STOCK at this season require the careful attention of the farmer, for it is now that the question of profits is really settled. The weather is not severe, yet bracing enough to give animals an appetite. There is an abundance to eat, and it is not difficult to get stock in good condition.—The careful husbandman will husband those things which will keep best, and feed out those which are of a perishable nature.—Soft corn, nubbins, grown grain, green pumpkins, and the fruits of the orchard, which are liable to decay, may be fed to cattle, or cooked for swine, and help to get them in first-rate order for winter, before the grass fails, and while it begins to afford not quite as good food as desirable. It is ruinous policy to neglect

CALVES AND COLTS at any time, but especially give them a good start, and let them face the winter with a coat of fat on their ribs, and if they look better than your neighbour's, you will be very apt to keep them growing by grooming them now and then, and providing at least warm sheds for them.

Cows ought to be yarded at night at all seasons, but at no time is it more important than now. The nights are long, the cows need some extra feed, which is best given in racks or troughs, or in the proper stalls, and the verdure they crop consists largely of old leaves, which are full of inorganic or ash constituents, hence their dung is of more value than usual. Keep up the flow of milk by feeding pumpkins (without the seeds,) roots, soft corn, etc. Practice the same course of feeding for

BEEVES, for they lay on flesh very fast now, and will do as well on grass and the articles mentioned in liberal quantity, as on much richer food later in the winter. Leave only the finishing to be done by and by, and secure the foundation of fat in this month and next. With

HOGS the case is different. They should be putting on fat now for good, and have all they can eat of thoroughly cooked rich food. Keep them clean giving them warm nests and plenty of litter. Most farmers lose half the hog manure—the most valuable of all made on the farm except that of fowls. Hogs thrive so much better for being clean that it pays to wash them. A watering-can, aquarius, or springe will make short work of it. Clean the troughs daily; have separate troughs for water and feed, and let there be a full supply of water at all times. A little salt in the food is good, perhaps essential. Let hogs have ashes and charcoal. They even like to root among coal ashes; and superphosphate and ashes, Mr. Harris says, they eat with avidity. Should any scour, give powdered chalk mixed in their feed.

SHEEP.—For butchers' early lambs (March) use if possible South Down, Leicester or Cotswold rams this month. The better the sire, the better the stock. Yard the sheep on frosty nights, as grass fails give extra feed. Those intended for fattening during the winter should have a little grain while still on grass; they will fatten much quicker for it when shut up for feeding—and will gain more this month than at any other period. Check scours by isolating those ailing, and feeding milk porridge made with fine wheaten flour.

Parlour Amusements.

THE MAGIC STICK.—To do this trick properly you need a pearl handled knife and a stout hardwood stick, about two inches in length. Sharpen the two ends of the stick and then try to crush it endways between your hands, or by sitting upon it. This, to your astonishment you will find it impossible to do.

THE FLYING HEN.—Select a large, well fed hen—the color is immaterial, though black is the best—and place her in a sitting position on some smooth surface. Then cover her place a pasteboard box, eighteen by twenty inches. Pound smartly upon the top of the box with a bone handled knife for three minutes, and then suddenly raise it, when the hen will suddenly fly away. This trick can be performed by any person of average intelligence, who gives his whole mind to it.

THE NAIL TRICK.—Take two large wrought iron nails, and wire them together in the form of a cross. It will then be found impossible to swallow them. There is no deception about this trick.

These are only a few of the tricks in his repertoire, but they will suffice for the present. They are calculated not only to amuse, but to inculcate a love of science among the young.

HOUSE PLANTS.

In spite of the many practical duties in the way of complete success, those who really love in-door gardening will contrive to have some growing things around them. Beginners in this work desire nothing so much as good advice; and we now propose to offer a little. First, then, in regard to air. So long as we warmed our houses by fire-places or open wood stoves, and did not make our rooms air-tight, it was comparatively easy to raise house plants; but with air-tight coal-stoves and furnaces, and with hot, unventilated rooms, it is very difficult. Some measures must be taken to counteract this excessive dryness of air. One method is to keep a pan of water in the hot-air chamber of the furnace; another to keep such a vessel on the stove in the apartment devoted to plants. And these pans of water should be so placed that they will evaporate several quarts per day. In addition to this some persons adopt the following plan: Let the table for plants be as wide as the window sill. Around the edge of this table fasted cleats about three inches wide, making a sort of sink or basin. Cover the whole of the wood-work with two coats of paint. Put into this basin two inches of sand, and cover the sand with one inch of fresh green moss. Set the pots on the top of this moss, slightly imbedded in it. Any one can see that this will serve to diffuse moisture through the atmosphere, for the moss and sand will be saturated as often as the plants are watered. This is only one method for securing a healthy state of the air; let others be tried, which are practicable, for this is a very important matter. Of course, the room should be ventilated as often as possible, without injury to the plants from frost.

Secondly, as to soil. Different plants require different kinds of soil, for their highest health and vigor, but for the majority, the following answers as excellent purpose: A compost made of sand, leaf-mold, old manure, and earth from an old pasture, in equal parts, well mixed.

Then a few words to watering, temperature, etc. It is a good rule only to give water when the ground is dry, and then to give it thoroughly, so that it will run through the ball of earth. No universal rule can be given, however. The African Lily, for example, needs water to saturation, while the Cactus family need's but little. Watch the foliage and never allow it to flag. Examine the soil, and never allow it to become dry. Experience will teach one when to water, by noting the sound of the pot when rapped with the knuckles, or by its weight when lifting it. Of course, the leaves should be sprinkled as well as the soil.

There is ordinarily more danger to our plants from heat than cold. As a general rule, 60° to 70° by day, and 45° to 50° by night, is high enough. The exceptions to this must be learned by experience.

A Young Lady's Reasons for not Dancing.

1. Dancing would lead me into crowded rooms and late hours, which are injurious to health and usefulness.

2. Dancing would lead me into close contact with very promiscuous company, and "evil communications corrupt good manners."

3. Dancing would require me to use and permit freedom with the other sex, which I believe to be wrong.

4. My parents and friends would be anxious about me if I were out late, keeping company with they knew not whom.

5. Ministers and good people in general disapprove of dancing, and I think it is not safe to set myself against them; if a thing be even doubtful, I wish to be on the safe side.

6. Dancing has a bad name, and I mean to study things that are pure, lovely, and of good report.

7. Dancing is generally accompanied with drinking, and I see drinking produces a great deal of evil.

8. Dancing unfits the mind for serious reflection and prayer, and I mean to do nothing that will enstrange me from my God and Saviour.

There are plenty of graceful exercises and cheerful amusements, which have none of the objections connected with them that lie against dancing.—American paper.

A clerk in a mercantile establishment writes to a friend: "I have a nice time of it now-a-days—very little work to do—our firm don't advertise,

A friend of ours was congratulating himself upon having recently taken a pleasant trip. Upon enquiry, we found that he had tripped and fell into a young lady's lap.

Somebody having said to Jerrold, "I have just had some calf's-tail soup," the wit replied, "Well, estremes do meet sometimes."

The anti-spiritualists deride the idea that a chair can move, and tip, and dance, but we have been at many a public meeting where the chair made a speech.

A young man advertised for a wife, and received eight hundred answers from husbands saying he could have theirs. This shows the value of advertising.

A Quaker once hearing a person tell how much he felt for another who was suffering and needed assistance, drily asked him "Friend hast thou felt in thy pocket for him?"

HOT FIRE ON A COLD DAY.—Sir Walter Scott tells a story of a Scotch minister, who, on an icy winter Sabbath, threatened his congregation with everlasting torments in thick-ribbed ice. Being taxed with the heretical tendencies of such a version, the crafty Scot replied, "I'd no try to scare sinners this could day by making 'em think of a hot fire!"

FASHIONABLE TALK.—"Mary, relieve that burning luminary of the superincumbent dress that bears upon it."—"Ma'am" said Mary, confused as to what her mistress could mean. "Take," said the lady, "from that luminous body its superincumbent weight of consumed carbon."—"Ma'am," repeated Mary. "Snuff that candle, you fool!" exclaimed the lady.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

For some time the people of the United States have had their own share of trouble; but not satisfied with this, they did all they could to embroil Canadians with Americans, by urging on the Fenians to annoy and plunder us. This game, however, is played out, and the F. B's. are turning their attention to Mexico. Poor down-trodden Ireland is to be left out in the cold a few years longer, until Mexican affairs be settled. What patriots these Irish and Yankee Fenians must be—what a love of country they manifest? Perfidious Britain may still rule the Irish serf with a rod of iron. The American demagogue has not yet beholed poor Pat even enough. The last movement of the Brotherhood demonstrates that the whole Fenian fizzle was the work of designing Americans, rather than Irish patriots. Our cousins wanted Canada; Canadians did not care, however, to cast their lot with such people. The Americans then thought we would be frightened into annexation; but no, Canadians wish to remain attached to the British crown. Now that none of these ruses will have the effect, they turn their attention to another quarter; Mexico must be freed.—The cause of all this appears to be this: They fear another civil war, and they are using the precautionary measures of sending off the unsettled portion of their citizens, so as to distract their attention from the internal weakness and disordered body politic of the Union.

The opinion prevails that ere long the United States will be called upon to endure the evils of another civil war. We trust they may be able to avert it, and that they will succeed in restoring the Union in an amicable and peaceable manner. But from the present excited state of political parties, it is feared that the country is likely to suffer.

The New York Evening Post says:—"The great mass of our population, excited almost to the same degree as when the rebel guns bombarded Fort Sumpter, will listen to no project of reconstruction short of the acceptance of the amendments to the Constitution"—the Congressional policy. The Times of the same city says:—"The same feeling prevailed six years ago. Few then attached importance to the threats of the fire-eaters or realized the crisis which was imminent. So it is to-day. The explosive force of the elements which are at work is underestimated. The possibility of collision, of conflict, of civil war, is not acknowledged. The causes which operate in that direction are passed over as of no immediate importance, and the influences that are most like ly to bring it about are persistently disregarded."

These indications of trouble are perceived by the people, but so far are unheeded. After the fall elections the excitement may abate, and the demands of the parties become less exacting, when they may return to their right minds. All lovers of order and good government would deplore another bloody and suicidal struggle, which would retard the prosperity of the country and disarrange its whole trade relations for many years to come. We trust that reason will ere long assume control of their affairs and put an end to their hostility towards each other.

THE OLD "ALABAMA."

By latest news we are informed that several persons interested in the settlement of the Alabama claims have called on President Johnston and urged him to make demands for immediate settlement of the claims, or otherwise the United States will seize Canada and hold it as security for the payment of them. It is also said that the President is about to concede to the demands, and that a large army will be sent forward to the Canadian frontier at once. This is, no doubt, manufactured to some extent.—The President will not unnecessarily provoke a war with Great Britain just now. Canadians may feel easy on this score at present, notwithstanding the utterly demoralized state of the great body of the American people. They are too deep in debt.

Great Fire in Quebec.

A fire occurred in Quebec on Sunday morning last, which raged for 13 hours, consuming 2 500 houses and about $3,000,000 worth of property, and left 18,000 persons homeless; several lives were also lost.—This is no doubt the greatest fire that has occurred for many years, and the amount of suffering that it entails on those who have been thus left without houses and in many instances without property or means can hardly be estimated. Subscriptions have already been opened, for the sufferers, in Montreal; other cities will no doubt follow; notwithstanding all this much suffering must ensue during the approaching winter. The fire originated in the premises of one Trudel, a grocer, where rowdies were accustomed to meet to carouse and play cards, at which they had been engaged to 4 o'clock on Sunday morning when the fire was discovered. The scene during Sunday must have been dreadful, as during 13 hours every effort proved unavailing to stop the devouring element—it only ceased when it had nothing to feed on. What a conclusion to the wicked revelry of those curses of towns and cities, those gamblers; and what a warning is this to other places to put down those low dens of infamy where the dregs of society are allowed to congregate at unlawful and unhallowed hours.

Proposed Freight Tariff of the P. H., L. & B. Railway.

By report of last meeting of Town Council it will be seen that there is a movement on foot to have the old rate of Freight changed. This, we understand, has been asked for by the merchants of Peterboro, as Mr. Stevenson explained in the Council room. From what we can learn the old rates were the 'same on every kind and quality of goods, viz: 15 cents per cwt. Some of the merchants feel this rate unjust and unequal, as the merchant who brings a cwt. of silks or costly articles over the road will pay no more freight per cwt. than the merchant who brings a cwt. of iron, or any other goods of even less value. These have asked the Company to revise the tariff, and the Directors have sent in a proposed revised rate, and ask the Council to sanction it. This appears necessary from the conditions of agreement entered into at first between the Town and Railway authorities. The company now proposes to divide goods into classes and charge according to the class. Below will be found a copy of proposed Tariff.

We, with our limited knowledge of Railway accounts and freights, cannot even form an opinion on the subject. The great considerations however are: will it be just to all the merchants? This we suppose they considered before they asked for the change. Will it increase or decrease the earnings of the road? This the Directors considered no doubt before they arranged it. And next: will it effect the Lease or agreement between the Town and the Railroad authorities? This the Council should now consider.

Child Burned to Death.

During last week, Mrs. James Armstrong, in the front of the township of Cavan, left two children alone in the house for a few minutes, to attend to something in the field. On her return she heard some moans and on search, found the largest one with its clothes on fire and itself badly burned. The clothing was extinguished as soon as possible, but we learn that the child did not survive the effects. It is believed that the child's clothing took fire while it was endeavouring to light some straw and shavings in the stove so as to make a fire.

Fire in Ottawa.

On Saturday morning last a destructive fire broke out in Ottawa, which continued for 3 hours; twenty buildings were consumed and twenty-five families were left houseless. The total loss is estimated at about $30.000. Very few of the parties were insured. It is supposed to have originated from sparks from a Chimney.

Insurance.

We would direct the attention of any of our readers who desire to insure their property or lives, to the advertisement of Mr. Cluxton, in another column. Mr. Cluxton represents some of the best Companies in England and Canada, and will no doubt transact all his business in a satisfactory manner.

Literary Club.

This evening there will be Readings and Recitations by different members of the Club. Also a debate—Subject, "Is universal suffrage desirable." Leaders, Messrs. John Burnham and J. A. Hall. Open to the public, to commence at 8 o'clock.

Potatoe Rot.

Accounts reach us from all quarters of the evil effect of the wet weather on the potatoe crop. Not a great deal over one half of the crop is likely to be saved in this part, but more especially where they have been grown on heavy clay soil.

The electioneering movements in the various parts of England are reported to be looking towards a possible dissolution of Parliament next spring.

COUNTY FALL SHOW.

We are forced to omit any remarks on the above Show from want of space.—In our desire to give the prize lists of this Show and also of the Dummer and Douro Show, we find our remarks and other reading matter necessarily crowded out. The County Show did not come up to our anticipations, however; but this is in some degree accounted for from its being held so far back. The arrangements and accommodations were satisfactory, but the Town evidently is the most suitable place for such exhibitions. We hope next year to have suitable accommodations; the new Drill Shed will be ready by that, although at present we do not hear much stir about it.

The following is the prize list for the County Show:—

East Durham and Cavan Show.

On Thursday and Friday last the united Agricultural Exhibition of East Durham and Township of Cavan was held at the Village of Millbrook. The weather, which was really delightful, assisted materially in collecting a large number of visitors from the neighboring villages and surrounding country, as well as from Peterboro, Port Hope, Cobourg, &c. This Village is well adapted for these exhibitions, being situated in the centre of one of the finest agricultural portions of Canada, and surrounded by an industrious, intelligent and wealthy community, who live in magnificent dwellings, drive splendid carriages and live in "luxurious ease." The exhibition was highly creditable and in every way worthy of the farmer and the soil. One thing we could not help remarking, and that is the difference in attendance at those shows now, and a few years ago, which shows the increased interest taken in them by the public generally. The first day was confined principally to making entries and arranging the articles in the Drill Shed. The second day was the principal day, a large display of cattle, hogs, sheep, poultry, agricultural implements and the different cereals was made, also a heavy waggon and light buggy made in Port Hope, which was universally acknowledged to be as nicely got up as those imported from the States. There was an excellent display of horses, all of the classes being well represented: the driving square, used to exhibit to the judges their action and proportions, was continually crowded by admiring spectators. The most attractive part of the exhibition was in the Drill Shed; we do not intend to particularize, because it is out of our power, but will mention a few of the articles which took our attention. On entering the building the first was a few sets of heavy and carriage harness, manufactured by Mr. E. Kells, of Millbrook, they were finished in a superior style to what is generally shewn at ordinary exhibitions and would compare favorably with what is manufactured for the Provincial exhibitions. The next was a good display of vegetables, consisting of cabbage of different kinds, cauliflower, beets, turnips, celery, &c. The fine arts collection was really a credit to a much larger place and consisted of oil paintings, crayon and pencil drawings, engravings and a good collection of photographs, by the local artist, a case of drugs and medicines belonging to Mr. Turner, specimens of fancy printing and book binding from Port Hope also formed a prominent part. Two tables in the centre of the room contained ladies' work in great quantities, such as needle work, netting, knitting, fancy embroidery, quilts, sofa cushions, chairs, ottomans, wax work flowers, &c., for which prizes were taken by the Misses Thexton, Maharry, Armstrong, Dawson, of Cavan, and Miss Black, of Port Hope. We are sorry not to be able to give the names of all the ladies who took prizes, and would gladly have done it if we had been in receipt of the necessary information. The first evening the proceedings were enlivened by the presence of the Millbrook band, who performed some choice and excellent music; a Glee Club also attracted considerable attention by their singing, accompanied on the melodeon. A bazaar and refreshment room provided by the ladies of the English Church, and situated nearly opposite the hall, appeared to be well patronized and was a great convenience to strangers, especially ladies, as it was utterly impossible to get any refreshments at a hotel, so great was the crowd. This place was under the management of the ladies of the congregation and for the purpose of raising money to finish the church. In church matters, as well as in every good thing, the ladies exhibit a great deal of zeal, and we are glad to hear that on this occasion their undertaking was of a profitable nature.

The two days ended without an accident of any kind, or any displayes of the manly art. The business portion appeared particularly pleased with the days, as they were kept busy and received a good deal of money for their trouble. On the last day between four and five in the afternoon, large crowds could be seen wending their way homeward, filling every road leading from the village and at dark scarcely any trace of the day's bustle and confusion was left, hardly anything could be heard but the village bell tolling the hour of six, and at midnight the whole place was wrapped in slumber, peace and perfect security.

The Committee of the Protestant Home beg to thank the Protection Fire Company No. 1, of Peterboro, for their very handsome donation of Twenty Dollars, received on the 17th instant.

Colonial and Continental Church Society—A public meeting, in aid of the Mission to the French speaking population in Lower Canada, will be held in the Victoria Hall, on Tuesday evening, the 23rd inst., at half past seven o'clock, when addresses will be delivered by several gentlemen, members of the Deputation from Montreal.

RIFLE MATCH.

Thursday, the first day of November next, at ten o'clock, a.m., at the rifle range, Peterborough, has been the time and place appointed to shoot for the Medal presented by Canadians residing at New York to the Volunteer Companies of Peterborough, Ashburnham and Lakefield. The Medal is to be retained by the winner thereof for one year, and the Volunteer winning the Medal for three years in succession to be entitled to retain the same absolutely. In order to make the match more interesting an endeavour will be made to procure other prizes to be awarded to the competitors upon the same occasion, of which due notice will be given.

W. H. SCOTT,
Mayor.

The following communication from Mr. Reid we received about a week since, but mislaid it some way for a day or two until too late for last week's issue. Although we intimated our intention to publish no more on the matter, we will insert this one in order that both parties may have an equal chance of being heard on the subject:—

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—I find in your issue of September 27th, another communication from the same party on Sabbath desecration, which is so unmistakably of a bitter and personal character, that I think it beneath me to take any further notice of it, than to state that all he asserts other than I have already given through your columns is wilfully false. I had hoped that having published an anonymous communication condemning my conduct, and my reply stating facts, you would have deemed it right to exclude any further such scurrilous articles from your paper.—Requesting, Mr. Editor, insertion of these few lines, and assuring you I shall not be induced by any number of falsehoods from such a source to trouble you any further, I subscribe myself

HENRY REID.

Douro, October 2nd, 1866.

The Pope—Remarkable Statement.

[From the Cor. (Sept. 15) Pall-Mall Gazette.]

According to the present temper of the Vatican, the departure of the Holy Father is more probable than his continuance at Rome in the event of the French withdrawing in December. It is persistently said that the will either go to Malta or to England. There is a talk of the approaching arrival of Mr. Gladstone, and it is thought that this statesman's visit to Rome is not without relation to the Pope's departure. The British Government is credited with encouraging the Holy Father in his resistance to the counsels of France, and with promising his assistance—assertions which, I need not say, are wholly devoid of foundation. Indeed, I have reason to believe that Mr. Odo Russel has distinctly told Cardinal Antonelli that England will not meddle in the Roman question.—While preparing for the eventuality of flight, the Pope is also contemplating the possibility of his being detained a captive at Rome, and, as a precaution has drawn up a secret bull, delegating his full powers to a cardinal, whom certain reasons prevent my naming at present. Directly the Holy Father is taken captive, or deprived of his 'apostolic' liberty, the said cardinal will repair to Vienna or London, and there publish the bull, which is now in his possession. In this document Pius IX. names him as his alter ego ad tempus, vicar of the Universal Church—that is Pope ad interim. All Catholic bishops, all priests, and all the faithful are, during the captivity of the Sovereign Pontiff to address themselves to this organ of the Pope reduced to silence, and who will be the interpreter of Peter in bonds, Petrus in vinculis. The revolutionists would thus hold the Pope in their own hands rather as an old man week and dumb, than as a hostage; the Papacy would save its independence, and be personally represented by the Cardinal Vicar Apostolic oracle of the Church and the Catholic world until the revocation of his power. Such is the provision made against the determination of the Roman Secret Committee to oppose the departure of the Pope by every means in their power. This Committee which is very powerful and possesses great resources, does not confine its action to Rome, but has just sent out a crowd of Romans to Venice, to secure, by their participation in the universal vote, the union of Venetia with the kingdom of Italy. The other day 1,500 persons started at once for Venice by the Ancona Railway. The Liberal party are in great fear that Venetia will not pronounce in favor of autonomy.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

The latest intelligence from Mexico is to the effect that the Emperor Maximilian has sought and obtained the support of the Church party, in that unfortunate country, as a means of strengthening his somewhat uncertain and precarious position. As the price of their adherence he has been compelled, as the dispatch says, "virtually to turn over the power into their hands," and to reorganize his ministry—the newly appointed members of his cabinet belonging to the Church party. This step, while it has gained him the support of the Church, appears to have shaken public confidence in his government to a me extent.

It will be remembered that when Maximilian first ascended the throne he made great professions of liberalism, and took measures to restrict the power of the priests and Bishops in consequence the Church, fearful of losing the position and influence she had previously enjoyed in Mexico, refused him their countenance. Now, however, the difficulties of his situation have compelled him to recede from the ground he formerly took, and to effect an arrangement by which the priests will again be placed in power, and direct the measures of the Government. Already we hear that they are using their influence to destroy the liberty of the press. There is evidently little hope for the regeneration of Mexico under the present regime.—Ex.

At a banquet in honour of the Cable layers, a message was read from the Queen, conferring knighthood upon Capt. Anderson, Prof. Thomson, Messrs. Glass and Canning, and a baronetcy upon Mr. Sampson and Mr. Gooch. The Queen says that her reason for not conferring a distinguishing mark of her favour upon Mr. Cyrus W. Field, is an apprehension that it might encroach on the province of his own Government.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, October 15th, 1866.

The Council met. His Worship the Mayor presiding.

Present—Messrs. Chamberlen, Toole, Ormond, Stevenson, Doherty, Ewing, Miller, Cox, Hamilton.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Petitions were read from John Gamble, asking remission of taxes for a dog. From Widow Hurley, praying for a remission of her taxes. From James Howson and Peter Hamilton, asking for a reduction of taxes, owing to property assessed to them respectively, having been destroyed by fire. They were all referred to the Court of Revision. Accounts from Jos. Lundy, for work, $5.00. From B. Green, for work, $14.934. For several men's work, $21.86. All were referred to the Committee on Streets and Bridges.

Mr. Ormond, Chairman of the Finance Committee, read a report which was adopted recommending the account of John English, for $33.70, to be paid.

Mr. Hamilton, Chairman of the Fire Committe, read a report, recommending the payment of $30, for repairs done to Fire Engine, as per order of Council.

The Mayor submitted a revised or proposed tariff of freights on the Railroad, from the Lessee of the Road. After some discussion it was decided that the Mayor should take advice as to the legality of the Council approving or in any way sanctioning the said tariff.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, a By-law was introduced and read a first time, to approve the proposed revised tariff of the Railway.

The Council adjourned for one week.

It is stated that the recent wet weather in England has destroyed a tenth part of the whole wheat crop.

Speculation still continues as to the personnel of the Delegation to England. The Ottawa Post has the following on the subject:—"We believe we may safely announce that the Delegates from Canada will sail on the Chiene on the 7th of next month. We may also state that the Hon. J. A. Macdonald and the Hon. Wm. McDougall will represent Upper, and the Hon. Mr Cartier and the Hon. Mr. Langevin, or the Hon. Mr. Chapais, Lower Canada. It is possible that the Hon. Mr. Howland may make a fifth member of the Delegation:—These arrangements, however, are still open to revision.

The inundations in France were subsiding. Great damage has been done by the floods. The Emperor had headed a subscription with 100,000 francs.

Artemus Ward at Birmingham.

A[illegible] I am getting [illegible] me [illegible] to admit the fact. A man is a ass who disputes it. That's all that ails him. I know there is sum people who cum over here and snap and snarl bout the sun and that; I know one man who says it is a shame and a disgrace that St. Paul's Church isn't a older edifice; he said I should be years and even ages older than it is; but I decline to hold myself responsible for the conduck of this idyit simply because he's my countryman. I s'pose every civilized land is endowed with its full share of gibberin idyits, and it can't be helpt—leastways I can't think of any affectooal plan of helpin' it. I'm a little sorry you've got politics over her, but I shall not distuss 'em with nobody. Tear me to pieces with wild omnibus horses, and I won't distuss 'em. I've cuffed 'em at home, thank you. I was at Birmingham t'other night, and went to the great meetin for a few minits. I hadn't been in the hall long when a stern-lookin' artizan said to me, "You ar from Wales?" No! I told him I didn't think I was. A bidgris thot flashed over me, and I said, "Has my clothis a Welchy appearance?" "Not by no means," he answered, and then he said, "and what is your opinyin of the present crisis?" "I don't zackly know. Have you got it very bad?" He replied. "Sir, it is sweepin' over England like the Cymoon of the Desert!" "Well," I said, 'let it sweep!" He ceased me by the arm and said, "Let us glance at histry. It is now some two thousand years——" "Is it, indeed?" I replied. "Listin!" he fiercely cried, "it is only a little over two thousand years since——" 'Oh, brother!" I remarkt, "let us go out and get some beer." "No, sir. I want no gross and sensual beer, I'll not move from this spot, till I can vote.—Who ar you?" I handed him my card, which, in addition to name, contains an elabrit description of my show. "Now, sir," I proudly said, "you know me!" "I solumnly swear," he sternly replied, "that I never heard of you, or your show, in my life!" "And this man," I cried bitterly, "cails himself a intelligent man, and thinks he otter be allowed to vote. What a hollor mockery!" I'se no objection to ev'ry entelligent man, votin if he wants to. It's a pleasant amoosement, no doubt; but there is those whose ignrance is so dense and loathsom that they shouldn't be trusted with a ballit any more'n one is my trained serpunts should be trusted with a child to play with. I went to the station with a view to returnin' to town on the cars.—"This way, sir," said the guard; "here you are," and he pinted to a first-class carriage, the sole okepant of which was a raythur preposses'n female of about 30 summers. "No, thank you." I earnestly replied, "I prefer to walk."—Punch.

AT THE CIRCUS.

BY KORN COBB, JUN.

Went to the circus last night, Mr. Editor. Before going inside took a stroll about the grounds to see a little of human nature. Met a gentleman in slouched hat, who asked me to drink. Drank. Gentleman in slouched hat offered to bet me two dollars that I couldn't name a card out of three he had in his hand. Took the bet. Gentleman in slouch took the money. Took himself off. Took me in—I think. Met another party in light summer suit, who wanted to borrow two dollars and a half until he heard from home. Was very sorry. Couldn't accommodate him. Thought probably the police magistrate might. Asked him if his mamma was aware of his absence. Advised him to hear from home soon as possible. Went into the show. Took a seat in the pit. Always go into the pit. Cheaper, besides allowing greater freedom of expression. Stood up to have a good view. Party behind said, "Sit down." Told party to be hanged. Party wouldn't be hanged. Gave me a punch in the ribs. Smashed my hat down over my eyes. Turned a back somersault, and landed between a fat woman and a gentleman from Africa. Fat woman had a baby, and had been eating onions for tea. Gentleman from Africa was perspiring profusely. Situation very nice. Baby wanted to stick its fingers in my eyes, and insisted on calling me daddy. Fat woman gave her umbrella to hold. Asked me to take charge of her reticule. Invited me to kiss the baby.—Gave the youngster a good ely pinch. Youngster set up a howl. Band played. Show commenced. Enter Knights and Knightesses on horseback. Horses dance a quadrille. Right and left; balance four; ladies' chain; promenade all. Exit all. Enter clown. Audience laugh. Clown says something vulgar. Audience clap their hands. Says something yet more vulgar still. Audience cheer. Very funny. Champion jumper comes in. Jumps over twenty horses. Jumps over fifty horses. Jumps over a hundred horses. Jumps over two hundred horses, and turns over sixteen times, and drinks a glass of whiskey and water before touching ground. Turns a handspring through the roof, and comes in at the door. Jumps over three hundred horses and retires. Enter man without bones. Puts his head under his arm, and he feet into his waistcoat pocket. Balances himself on which about like a wheel of fortune. Cuts off his head and swallows it. Swallows the rest of his body and disappears. Trained horse comes in. Stands on his head and dances Juba. Takes a cigar out of his waistcoat pocket and lights it. Asks conundrums. Asks the clown to drink. Sings a comic song and turns a somersault. Trained mule comes in. Gives a temperance lecture. Quotes the Globe. Goes in for Confederation and no Fenians. Plays 'Old Dog Trey' on the fiddle, and retires. Band plays 'National Anthem,' and every one goes home.—London Free Press.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said; they were there "every time." If he felt "owly" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"• • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"• • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me.

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"• • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"• • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1865.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic.'

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do.
It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its utmost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

C. HELMSTREET, Chemist.

The Loss of the "Evening Star."

Full Particulars of the Disaster.

SCENES ON THE SINKING SHIP.

The particulars of the loss of the steamship Evening Star have been received in New York by the Vergo, which brought the surviving officers and crew of the ill-fated vessel to that city.

OUTWARD BOUND.

On the evening of September 29th the steamer Evening Star left her dock in New York bound for New Orleans. She had on board 172 cabin passengers and nearly as many more in the steerage. It was a fine clear afternoon, and the vessel steamed down the Bay the upper deck was crowded with passengers admiring the scenery, waving adieus to their friends and taking a last parting look upon the land which so few of them were destined to see again. There was on board a large company of French actors and actresses, who were going to begin a theatrical engagement in New Orleans. They soon became acquainted with their fellow-voyagers and it was impossible to resist their vivacity and contagious loveliness, which were rendered more amusing by the difficulty they had to express themselves in English. There were also on board ninety-three unfortunate women destined for a life of shame in New Orleans, the celebrated Flora Burdell alias Coun*ingham, among the number.* Some of these women expressed great delight in the scenery which they thus saw for the first time as they sailed below the Narrows, and saw the shores of Staten Island and New Jersey on the one hand, and Long Island on the other, gradually fade as the sunlight died away. They said they had never been out of New York in their lives before, and if they had known what a beautiful scene the harbor afforded they would have made the trip many times before this one when they were leaving it for good. They talked a good deal of a good-bye banquet that had been given them by their friends the night before, and several of them were laughing and crying by turns at having to go away from New York. Whenever any one of them would begin to chide and cheer them, and they said they were glad they were going to a climate where it was warm all the year round, for they hated cold weather so. One poor creature seemed to be much troubled, and appeared either to have an apprehension or a presentment of what danger was ahead, for she said she didn't believe that they would ever get through the voyage safe. When she first came to New York she went to see a woman who told fortunes up in Sixth avenue, and she told her never to go to sea, because if she did it would be the death of h-r, and she had dreamt of that very woman the night before. This superstition made all her acquaintances laugh very heartily, and they began to run the girl on her fears, saying that when she got to New Orleans she would snap her fingers at such nonsense and be better pleased than at that dreary, muddy old New York.

A little after six o'clock on the evening of the 29th, the bar was reached and the pilot shipped, a number of the passengers sending back letters by him to their friends in the city announcing their safe arrival at this stage of the journey.

The wind was now blowing fresh from the eastward, making the vessel roll quite heavily, and driving the larger portion of the passengers below.

So passed away the first night of that brief voyage, the end of which was death!

THE DAYS BEFORE THE LAST.

During the night of Saturday the sea was very rough, and the crowded cabins presented few instances of sleepfullness, and many of rolling sickness and misery.

On the morning of Sunday, however, the roughness of the sea materially moderated. The sun shone quite brightly, progress became smoother, and most of the tormented ones had got over their sickness, nausea, and consequent despondency. The day passed in comparative comfort. It was quite cool, however, and shawls and great coats were brought into appreciated requisition. The passengers had by this time, by general option, filed off into separate sets, and were becoming acquainted with that informality which a common situation and a mutual wish to occupy time pleasantly, effected. The dramatic troupe gathered on the upper deck and amused themselves with songs, repartee, and conversation in their own language. They brought out one or two of their own orchestra, and had a dance and one or two mimic rehersals.—The females, whose habits and character and wishes led them no more to desire to mingle with the general passengers than did they attempt or desire to mix with them, got together and talked away the morning in reference to acquaintances left behind, the novelty and vastness of the scene before them, while others brought up opera glasses and peered over the expanse, fancying they could descry sails here and there, and laughing at the attempts. After noon a large number brought out cards and arranged games, while reading, sleeping, promenading, smoking, and with improvised other occupations, that could kill time, exhausted the day until bed time. The ship in the meanwhile kept on rather more steadily, it was thought, than the night before, but really barely more so, as those on board were only getting more used to the motion, the sea being yet quite heavy, and so continuing during the night.

On Monday morning, however, there was a decided improvement in the weather. The roughness of the wind was lessening very sensibly. The Evening Star ceased the pitching to a considerable degree, which had been a discomfort to all, and an apprehension to many during the prior time. Between 7 and 8 o'clock the few that were stirring among the passengers saw the light station off Cape Hatteras just abeam. The tidings brought many on board hastily, and glasses were levelled to try and make out the object beyond.—Much gratification was felt that that proverbially dangerous point had been rounded and no more danger was apprehended. By noon a brilliant scene met the eye. The sea shone on the waves brightly and greetingly. The wind toned down to a freshening breeze. The ship spread sail, as well as sailed along." Everything appeared clean, cheerful and taut. Officers and passengers mingled in frequent conversation. The air was brightened here and there with shoals of dolphins that rose over the waves, pursued by their flying finny enemies. There was less exclusiveness noticeable among the passengers. At sunset the atmospherical indications were favorable, and so continued throughout the evening, all retiring in the hope that many miles would be accomplished before the dawn. Towards morning, however, it was evident that the wind and swell of the sea had increased considerably, the vessel lurching so violently at times as to cause a great deal of anxiety. Throughout Tuesday the 2nd of October, the wind continued very stiff and sharp from east to southeast, and through the day constantly increased.—From the apprehensive appearance and incessant consultation of the officers and from the tremendous working of the crew began to spread among the passengers,—Families gathered in seperate groups, and clung in agony of terror to each other.—Trunks were ransacked. Whatever was most prized or needed was hastily put together. Some tried to pray. Many of the men showed less courage than the women. They became some frantic, some maudlin. Here and there were brave hearts and cool heads that would go out and assist if they could, and would send back the most assuring messages possible. Others were belting gold around their waists, which proved only a quicker weighting toward the depths of the sea. Now and then a cross sea would come which would veer the vessel round and round, she the while sideways on her beam ends.—Ere long window after window would be broken in by the waves. The occupants of the cabin would become drenched through and through; cold, wet, hopeless, hungry, in darkness, beyond the dim flicker of the occasional covered lanterns here and there carried, the confusion was indiscribable, the agony terrific, the fright terrible. Everyone questioned him or her next what he or she thought. Strangers became friends and colaborers from the supreme necessity of peril. Women fell down in hysterics, children, too young to appreciate the position, scrambled in the darkness after their parents, and cried frantically.—Here and there could be found some, sublimely forgetful of self, trying to sustain and encourage. Sounds of remembered prayer or scripture came now and then, barely distinguishable among the noise of motion, calling cursing and crying. The actresses were completely helpless. Their despondency, their fright, their agony were terrible. They wrung their hands, called on each other for the assistance and information which all were too scared and too ignorant to give. English prayers, German petitions, French exclamations intermingled in a heterogenous vocal varaty! Some counted their beeds, some their money. To increase the horor quite a number drowned their conception of the scene in liquor, and drunken men and women, too, sang uproariously through the fearful surroundings.

THE VESSEL SPRINGS A LEAK.

At 3 o'clock on Wednesday morning, the dreadful news came: "A leak is sprung; there is great water in the hold." So great had been the former fright that this worst confirmation of the extremest fears did not seem to add to the terror, but was received at first with a sort of blank dismay that had no words.

A NEW HORROR.

At a quarter before four in the morning, while the Evening Star was in the surging trough, and swept by a tremendous cross sea, an appalling crash was heard above, evidently a new horror happened. It appeared that the main smoke-stack had been carried away. The water now rushed in gigantic volumes across and across the decks and from end to end. The fires in the large engineroom were put out. The firemen were sent rushing on deck to escape, for a brief while, the deluge that hungered to swallow them up. The donkey engines were then the sole dependence to keep the swinging, leaking, helpless mass in motion The sea had meanwhile swept into splinters the wheel-houses, leaving only the "A" braces and gunwales. At 4.15 a. m. the last hope of keeping the vessel under conrol was given up. The water at this point rushed in and extinguished even the fires in the donkey engineerooms, and wheelless, rudderless, mastless, engineless, fireless, the Evening Star lay torn and seamed in the tremendous hurricane, with more than three hundred souls on board looking death in the eye.

ALL HANDS TO THE PUMPS.

At five o'clock the captain told the passengers all that could be done had been done, and all hands to the pumps. Heretofore the steam from the donkey engines had been urning the pumps vigorously but ineffectualy. Now hands must work to prolong the last and least chance of life.—At it the went with a will, served by the energy of despair. Then all hands not at the pumps went to bailing out. So soon as something to do was presented, a better spirit wasobtained. Sex vied with sex in labor. Women, men and children worked with a strogth which was the more sad in the thought that certain death made all labor useless. That they did not know.—While there was something to do, or life to work for, there was hope. The noble conduct of all parties detailed. That of the women whose antecedents would have suggested otherwise, but over whose fate the noble close of their life will cause regret and sorrows to be cast, not second to what as showered upon others better behaved or better circumstanced than they, was beoic in the extremes, and the charity that is kind will cover the multitude of their remembered faults, in the recall of their courage, their self-sacrifice and their martyrdom of exertion. During this ineffectual attempt to bail out, the remorseless waves swept thousands into eternity as their black and angry volumes spread over the decks in search of victims. There deaths but briefly anticipated the runs that awaited nearly all.

LOWERING THE BOATS.

The ship was now lying in the trough of the sea, with the sea making a clean break over her. The unfastening of the boats from their stays was a difficult process, and much valuable time was consumed in the operation. When finally they were undone the most difficult thing was then to be done. At each attempt to let them go the sea would heave them up against the side of the vessel; they were lowered into the sea, but were immediately capsized. All hopes for safety were then abandoned.—Out of the eight metallic life boats not one remained. There were endeavors to recover them, which proved unavailing.—Some jumped into the sea, as if seeking their own destructrion; others fore wildly about the ship, but the majority remained collected and in full posession of their faculties.

THE END.

As no boat could live in such a sea and all efforts to recover the boats had been abandoned, each one devoted himself to a few last duties. At about 6 a. m., the ship gave a heavy lurch—always the precursor of the going down—and settled fast. Another lurch and she sank to rise no more. All around are seen human beings struggling in the water in vain attempts to keep afloat. A large number were sucked in with the ship. A few succeeded on getting on the hurricane deck which detatched itself, while others got on spars and logs. The sea soon became covered with floating logs, which justifies the inference that the vessel in sinking broke up. For miles around these floating logs were to be seen To some they were a means of salvation, while to others their destruction by being dashed against them and killed,

IN THE BOATS.

After some hours the remaining survivors are contained in two life-boats. One is filled by men, with only one woman in it, who is stated to have been very beautiful, and is supposed to have belonged to the French opera troupe. In the other boat the men and women were about equally divided. The women were almost entirely naked having thrown off their clothing for the purpose of lightening themselves. The first boat contained the purser and chief engineer, amongst others. The sea was terrible high, and the boats were continually capsizing, each time losing some of their human freight. One boat made a sail of four life-preservers, having lost it own.—The second boat contained the captain, third mate and others. This boat was also continually upsetting, the fourth time losing the captain who was struck on the head with a piece of floating timber and killed. The boat carried its own sail.—They were now about 246 miles northeast of Matanilla reef, and 180 miles from land. A compass had been kept on board each boat, which enabled them to steer straight for land.

THE RESCUE.

The morning after the wreck, the boat with the purser, and nine others met the boat containg the third mate and others.—They travelled in company through the day. At night they parted, and on the next morning the boat with the purser and chief engineer came in with the Norwegian bark Fleetwing, from Belize, Honduras, Southampton. They were taken on board and kindly treated, being fed and clothed, after having been for two days and two nights in the boat without sustenance of any kind. They were suffering intensely. The chief engineer had been struck by a log; the purser had also been injured by a piece of drift-wood, which disabled his arm, and the others were all suffering from some manner of external injury. They remained a day and a night on the Fleetwing, when at 2 o'clock p. m. on the 5th inst., the schooner S. J. Waring, Capt. Frank Smith, from New York for Apalachicola, was spoken, and the sufferers were taken on board, where again they were treated with uniform kindness. The Waring made direct for Savannah, having herself been injured in the same gale which wrecked the Evening Star. On Oct. 8 they were once more rejoiced with the glad sight of land. The second boat, after fifteen capsizings, arrived at Fernandina on Sunday morning, the 7th inst., with six persons and two dead bodies, which they had been too weak to throw overboard. When they arrived they were in a bad condition, having had the skin completely peeled off their naked bodies by the burning sun and salt water.

Thus only sixteen persons appear to have been saved out of over 350. The end of the Evening Star will long be remembered as one of the most fearful ocean tragedies that ever occurred, and will carry misery and mourning to thousands of hearts.

THE QUEBEC FIRE.

(From the Quebec Chronicle.)

Like many other memorable calamities of the sort, the fire of yesterday originated in the criminal carelessness attendant upon the prolongation of orgies of carousing and drunkenness, far into the night. It broke out in a house in St. Joseph street, immediately facing the western angle of the Jacques Cartier Market Hall, the upper flat of which was occupied by the proprietor, a man named Letarte, and the lower flat by one Trudel, who used it as a sort of half-grocery, half-groggery, where members of the low characters, who abound in the neighborhood, were in the habit of resorting at night for the purpose of drinking and card-playing. On Saturday night in particular, we are informed, a number of them had congregated there, and, notwithstanding the strict regulation for the closing of such places at midnight, Trudel, it is said, allowed them to continue their carouse far into the Sabbath morning. There is but little doubt, therefore, that the awful calamity, which we to-day chronicle, owed its origin to drunken carelessness, as when first observed, between half-past four and five o'clock yesterday morning, the flames were bursting out over the door of Trudel's shop or bar-room in the lower flat. They were first discovered by the police, who at once raised the alarm, and their numbers being soon augmented by a few persons, who chanced to be passing on their way to church for their morning devotions, the door was burst in, and an attempt made to stifle the fire, but it proved ineffectual, as the opening of the door only served to give vent to the flames, and before a few minutes had elapsed, the whole interior of the house, which was a wooden one, was in a blaze—the inmates having only time to save themselves.

THE ALARM.

The necessity of a proper system of fire alarm was never more forcibly demonstrated than in the slowness with which intelligence of the fire reached the quarters, which it was of the greatest importance it should have attained immediately on its discovery, and in the tardy manner in which it spread in the neighborhood. At first, except in the immediate vicinity of the burning building, the fact seemed unknown to any but the few already mentioned, and this state of things continued for almost half an hour. At length, the Fire Brigade, under command of their Chief, Mr. Ferguson, arrived on the ground, and set to work at once to endeavor to check the flames, and the alarm was gradually communicated to the neighboring districts, which soon poured out their terrified inhabitants to the scene—the crowd continuing to increase at every moment.

PROGRESS OF THE FIRE.

By this time, the fire had made rapid headway, having communicated to the adjoining house on the Westerly side, and was burning with great fury, helped on by a north-easterly gale blowing at the time, and the total absence of water. The Police and Fire Brigade had laid down several reels of hose, on their arrival, but as usual the water was not to be had. For fully an hour it did not come, and by that time the fire, driven before the heavy wind that prevailed, had spread to the wooden outhouses and buildings in rear of Trudel's and the adjoining house, and was moving with lightning rapidity in a south-westerly direction across St. Roch's—building after building of the numerous small wooden structures in that quarter catching and still further propogating the fire; while showers of burning cinders, shot up from them, fell on all sides on the shingled roofs, all around, and at every moment increased the number of flaming buildings. It had also communicated in a northerly direction to the houses on the opposite side of St. Joseph street, fronting Trudel's, and was rapidly working its way, following the street on that side towards the almost vacant district, laid waste by the disastrous fire in the same quarter last year, and laterally towards the river side, leaping actually from house to house, and spreading terror and dismay everywhere on its path. When the water did arrive at last, the flames had obtained too strong a headway in every quarter to save any of the buildings already attacked, and the attention of the Fire Brigade and of their assistants, the Sapeurs and the other fire companies, was turned to the prevention of the further spread, if possible, of the devouring element, by pulling down some houses ahead of the fire, and drenching others with water. In rear of the Jacques Cartier Hall, their praise-worthy efforts in this way were effectually frustrated for a time by the acts of some unknown ruffians, who deliberately cut the hose with axes, their intention being, doubtless, to hinder as far as possible any attempt to check the progress of the fire, in order to give themselves ample opportunity to rob and plunder. It is a pity that they were not caught; the Penitentiary for life would be scarcely an adequate punishment for them, it seems to us. But to return to the fire. Increasing in volume and density at every step, and impelled by the wind which seemed at every moment to gather new strength and blow in fitful gusts, whirling the burning debris on all sides, and driving clouds of ardent cinders before it, to fall further off, and augment the continually widening mass of flame; it continued to rapidly advance to the southwest, the inflammable material which it everywhere met in the small wooden houses in that quarter, the numerous outhouses, stables and wood piles adding fuel to it at every step, until it cut diagonally through St. Roch's, debauching upon St. Valier street at its intersection with Caron street, about half-past nine o'clock. On the other side, towards the river, it had worked its way with equal rapidity, as far as St. Anselme street, laterally, and as far as King street, sweeping everything before it over the burned district of last year, on which several new and substantial brick houses had been erected, and upon which in front of the Congregation Church a large quantity of firewood was also piled,—the only building remaining untouched in this quarter being the church itself, which for over two hours stood in the greatest danger, being surrounded on all sides by the flaming houses, but escaped as if by a miracle.—Several times its strong stone walls were actually steaming with the intense heat, but fortunately, as the buildings around gradually burnt out, the danger disappeared to a great extent. The new houses on the old burned district already referred to, resisted for a long time, but they had at last also to yield to the extraordinary fury of the fire.

ARRIVAL OF THE MILITARY.

About half-past nine o'clock, a valuable reinforcement to the Fire Brigade and their assistants arrived on the ground, in the persons of a detachment of Royal Artillery, under command of Lieut.-Col. McCrae, Major S. Leslie, Captain Gabbett, Captain Knox, and Lieutenants Ormsby, Bradley, Dethie, and Irvine, and Adjutant Stannus; and two companies of the Rifle Brigade, under command of Lieut.-Col. Warren, Adjutant Sir A. Palmer, and Lieut. Johnson, despatched to the scene of the disaster, by order of Commandant, Lord Alexander Russell, at the request of His Worship the Mayor, who had been on the ground from a very early hour. They were shortly afterwards joined by a considerable detachment of seamen from the Aurora, under command of Lieut. Douglas, and it is hardly necessary for us to say how nobly the gallant fellows went to work to pull down several houses with the view of making a gap to stop the progress of the fire. The Artillery brought a quantity of powder with them for the same purpose, and an attempt was made to check the flames, at the request of the Mayor, by blowing up in the direction of Caron street at different times during the morning some eight or ten houses, but it proved equally ineffectual with the other attempts made with the same view. By eleven o'clock, the fire had traversed Caron street, and was raging violently in the district beyond that thoroughfare, sweeping in one continuous sheet of flame from the General Hospital on the water side, to St. Vallier street on the other. It had also crossed St. Vallier street, and was gaining swiftly towards the cliff, following the West side of Caron street, and pleasing, seething and roaring before the wind, into the densely packed mass of houses that spread from the street in question through St. Sauveur and Boissearville to the swamp known as the Bas Bijou. By this time, so extensive was the conflagration, and so utterly inadequate were the means of checking it in any way, that all hopes of doing so were almost completely abandoned—it being believed that nothing could stop the fire in the direction of St. Sauveur and Boissearville, until it burned itself out by reaching the open country. In fact, it was impossible for any one to stand for a moment within fifty yards of the flames, not to speak of working in the midst of the fire in the narrow streets of St. Sauveur, where the devouring element actually flew from house to house of the almost numberless small wooden buildings in that quarter, roaring and crackling, its fiery tongues over-leaping the streets, and literally bounding on the devoted houses like wild beasts on their prey. For sometime, several large houses along the south-side of St. Vallier street, offered a stout resistance to the flames, but they were overcome in the end, and soon wrapped in the general sweep of destruction. The fire had now eaten into the heart almost of St. Sauveur, ravaging it from the cliff down to St. Vallier street, which it swept along on both sides, to the St. Sauveur Church. For a considerable time, the church withstood the attacks of the fiery element, but like the rest it was forced at last also to succumb, notwithstanding the extraordinary efforts made to save it. The fine new Presbytery of the Rev. Oblat Fathers, and Friars' School house and the Nunnery building next followed, and the flames continued to spread in the direction of Boissearville, without the slightest abatement. On the other side of St. Vallier street, the fire after crossing Caron street directed its desolating course in a westerly direction, sweeping the whole space, comprised between the General Hospital and St. Vallier street, to almost within a stone's throw of the toll-bar, where it again traversed St. Vallier street, heading the fire around the St. Sauveur Church and sweeping off everything before it towards the Bijou. About noon, there was a slight lull in the gale, and the wind shifted round to the south west, bringing the fire back in the direction of Crown street, where it debouched between Prince Edward and Smith streets, in the immediate vicinity of the Marine Hospital, for the safety of which fears were entertained, burning some six or seven houses facing on Crown Street.—About three o'clock the conflagration had gained its heights, and at that time, the whole district, from Crown street—the latter not included, however, with the exception of the six or seven houses already mentioned, and a small angle untouched from Telair street to Vallier street, as far as its intersection with Caron street, down to the water's edge on the North side, and to St. Vallier street on the other, as far as the Bijou swamp and the toll-bar to the West—a distance across of about a mile and a half was one complete mass of roaring flame, presenting one of the most desolating and awfully sublime spectacles we have ever witnessed. About four o'clock the wind again fortunately shifted back to the North East, driving the fire back from Crown Street over the burned district once more, where the damage was already done, and by six o'clock it had completely burned itself, having reached the open country below the toll-bar on the North side of St. Vallier street, and the Bijou swamp on the other beyond Boissearville and St. Sauveur—an area of about a mile and a half square—the only buildings remained untouched in the whole of this large space being the Congregation Church in St. Roch's, the General Hospital, two or three small, isolated houses on the North side of St. Vallier street, some two or three in the immediate vicinity of the toll-bar, McCallum's Distillery, near Sauvageau's Hill, which latter was only saved by the almost superhuman exertions of the military, and some eight or ten small dwellings under the cliff at Boissearville.

EXTENT OF THE DISASTER.

An idea of the extent of this dreadful conflagration may be formed when we state, that standing on the brow of the cliff, at Mount pleasant, the spectator can see nothing as far as the eye can reach in the valley below but a dense forest of chimneys, extending from the open country beyond Boissearville, into the very heart of St. Roch's, from the cliff on one side to the St. Charles on the other. In fact, it may virtually be said one half of St. Roch's, and the whole of St. Sauveur, Boissearville, and its extension, comprising three projected streets, the property of the Hotel Dieu, have been completely laid waste.—

A moderate computation places the number of houses destroyed at about 2,500, and the total loss in real estate and household property burned or damaged, at between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000. The number of persons rendered homeless is generally estimated as over 18,000 persons.

APPEARANCE OF THE SCENE.

No description of ours can give any adequate idea of the awful spectacle presented by the conflagration during its various stages. Viewed from the brow of the cliff, the inter valley beneath bore the appearance of a seething cauldron from the surface of which rose dense clouds of blinding smoke, with clouds of flying debris floating away before the wind towards the blue vault above, where they hung over the doomed district like a funeral pall, the somberness of which was only relieved at intervals by the occasional bursting through of the glare of the flames, shooting up their forked and lissing tongues towards the heavens, and falling back as suddenly. It was only after nightfall, however, that the full extent of the desolating scene could be properly taken in. As far as the eye could reach on all sides, the whole valley beneath seemed perfectly littered with fire. The remains of stores and workshops, and thousands of happy though lowly homes; while some of the larger buildings, as the Church of St. Sauveur, the Presbytery, the Nunnery and Frair's School, stood out in bolder relief, with the lurid light of the smouldering flames, still glaring through their empty windows, and giving them a weird and ghastly appearance. On the spectacle was one of the most melancholy we have ever contemplated, and such, as we trust, we shall never see again.

Centenary of Methodism.

The beginning of Methodism in the New World dates back to the year 1766. In that year the first Methodist sermon in America was preached in the city of New York, by Philip Embury, a local preacher, to a congregation of five persons. For a time he preached in his own house, but the number of his hearers so increased that a larger place had to be provided, and in 1768 a chapel was built, and dedicated to the worship of God. Two years later, at the request of the Society in New York, Mr. Wesley sent out two missionaries—Richard Boardman and Joseph Gilmoor—who extended their labors to Philadelphia and other places. Other evangelists soon followed, some were raised up in the country, and the doctrine and usages of Methodism spread rapidly on every side. A few years after the war of Independence the Societies were, by Mr. Wesley's advice and direction, erected into a separate organization under the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church. To trace the onward progress of the denomination from that period would far exceed our limits; suffice it to say that in the space of one hundred years Methodism in the United States has outstripped all competition, and becomes the predominating religious faith of the nation; while in Canada it stands second to none in point of numbers, intelligence and influence. The following statistics taken from Dr. Steven's centenary volume, will convey some idea of the growth and present position of the church:

"Embury's little congregation of five persons, in his own house, has multiplied to thousands of societies, from the northernmost settlements of Canada, to the Gulf of Mexico, from Nova Scotia to California. The first small conference of 1773, with its ten preachers and its 1160 reported members, has multiplied to 60 conferences, 6,821 itinerant, 8,205 local preachers and 928 320 members in the Methodist Episcopal Church alone, exclusive of the Southern, the Canadian and union branches, all the offspring of the church founded in 1766 and especially organized in 1784.

It has property in churches and parsonages amounting to about $27,000,000.

It has 25 colleges and theological schools with property amounting to $3,055,000, 158 instructors, and 5,345 students; and 77 academies, with 556 instructors and 17,762 students, making a body of 714 instructors, and an army of 23,106 students.

Its church property, (churches, parsonages and colleges, aside from 77 academies and book concern,) amounts to $30,055,000.

Its book concern has a capital of $837,000; 500 publishing agents, editors, clerks and operators, with some 30 cylinder power presses in constant operation, about 2,000 different books in its catalogue, besides tracts, &c.; 14 periodicals, with an aggregate circulation of more than a million copies per month.

Its Sunday School union comprises 13,400 schools; more than 15,000 instructors; nearly 918,000 pupils; 2,500,000 library books. It issues nearly 2,500 publications besides a monthly circulation of nearly 300,000 numbers for its periodicals.

Its missionary society has 1,059 circuits and stations; 1,128 paid labourers and communicants.

The Methodist Episcopal Church south has published no statistics since the rebellion broke out; it has doubtless suffered much by the war, but it reported the last year before the rebellion, nearly 700,000 church members, nearly 2'600 itinerant and 5,000 local preachers. It had 12 periodicals publications, 12 colleges, and 77 academies, with 8,000 students. Its missionary society sustained, at home and abroad, about 360 missionaries and 8 manual labor schools, with nearly 500 pupils.

According to these figures, the two great episcopal divisions of the denomination have had at their latest reports, 1 628 320 members; 9,421 travelling, and 13 205 local preachers; with 119 colleges and academies; and 31,106 students.

The Canada Wesleyan Church was not only founded by, but for many years belonged to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and now reports more than 56,000 members, 500 itinerant preachers, and 720 Sunday Schools, with about 45,000 pupils, a university, a female college, and a book concern with its weekly periodical.

Another branch of Canadian Methodism, the "Methodist Episcopal Church in Canada," equally the child of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, reports three annual conferences, 2 bishops, 216 travelling and 224 local preachers, and 20,000 members; a seminary and female college, and a weekly newspaper.

The Canadian Wesleyan Methodist New Connection Church reports 90 travelling and 147 local preachers and 3,650 communicants. It sustains a weekly paper and a theological school.

The other Methodist bodies in the United States, are the Methodist Protestant Church, the American Wesleyan Methodists, the African Methodist Episcopal Church, and some three or four smaller sects; their aggregate membership amounts to about 260,000, their preachers to 3,423.

Adding the travelling preachers to the membership, there are now in the United States about 1,901,164 Methodists communicants. Adding three non-communicant members of its congregation for each communicant, it has under its influence 7,604,656 souls, between one-fifth and one-fourth of the whole national population.

Aggregately there are now in the United States and Canada, as the result of the Methodism of 1766, 1, 72.770 church members, 13,650 travelling preachers, 15,000 local preachers, nearly 200 colleges and academies, and more than 30 periodicals, publications, 1,986,620 communicants, including preachers, and nearly 8,000,000 people."

The funds raised in connection with the Centenary Services in Canada are to be appropriated, we understand, as follows:—$6.000 to the Educational fund of the Irish Conference. This will be a deserved return for the reinforcements which the Methodist Church in Canada has received from Ireland, both in members and ministers. The balance of the amounts raised will be divided equally between the Superannuated Ministers' Fund and the funds for the theological training of candidates for the ministry.

Consecration of a Church Bell.

Yesterday one of nine bells to be erected in the tower of St. Michael's cathedral in this city was consecrated by his Lordship Bishop Lynch; and as the event was of considerable importance to the Roman Catholic body, a larger number of persons of that denominations, as well as many Protestants, attended. The ceremony took place about one o'clock, after the celebration of pontifical mass, by the Bishop of Hamilton. The bell, which is a fine tenor weighing about 4,000 lbs., was swung over a platform in the palace garden, the admission to which was obtained by ticket. It was cast by the Messrs. Meneeley, of Troy, N. Y. There are eight crosses on it and under the crosses are the following inscription in Latin: '1st. I praise God.' '2nd. Holy Mary, pray for us.' '3rd. Saint Joseph in the hour of death, pray for us.' '4th. Saint Michael and Holy Angel Guardians, come to defend us.' '5th. Come let us worship.' '6th. I honor the baptized.' '7th. I mourn for the dead.'—'8th. John Joseph Lynch, Bishop of Toronto, wishes to all peace.' The Bishops attended by the clergy, proceeded from the church to where the bell was placed and recited the 50th, 56th, 66th, 69th, 85th and 129th Psalms. His Lordship then proceeded to bless the salt and water with which the bell was to be washed, and offered appropriate prayers. The salt and water being mixed the Bishop wiped the cross with a linen cloth and intoned an anthem; after which he put into the thurible, thyme, frankincense and myrrh, and placing the sacred vessel under the bell that it might receive the odor, censed and rested the 50th, 56th, 66th, 69th, 85th and 129th Psalms. His Lordship then proceeded to bless the salt and water with which the bell was to be washed, and offered appropriate prayers. The salt and water being mixed the Bishop wiped the cross with a linen cloth and intoned an anthem; after which he put into the thurible, thyme, frankincense and myrrh, and placing the sacred vessel under the bell that it might receive the odor, censed and rested it to the service of the church, and at the same time bestowed on it the name of "The voice of the Archangel Michael."—The anthem was then intoned—Deus in Sancta via tua, An appropriate prayer was then offered, at the conclusion of which the deacon sang the gospel according to St. Luke, 10th chapter, the assemblage then dispersed. The Cathedral choir with the band of the 17th Regt., which kindly volunteered to attend, performed Mozart's 12th mass and Vicar General Walsh preached a learned discourse previous to the ceremony of consecration. The sponsors of the bell, whose office is to see that it is to be rung only for religious purposes, were Major Calhurst, of the 17th Regt., and his cousin, Miss Latouche, (the latter by proxy) Vicar General Macdonald of Kingston, the first Roman Catholic pastor of Toronto, who officiated here nearly fifty years ago—together with the younger branches of the respectable Catholic and old families of Toronto. It may here be stated that during the past two years the Rev. Mr. Lamot collected the handsome sum of $16,000 in the city and diocese toward the erection of the spire and purchase of the chime of bells which is to placed in the tower during the ensuing year. The Protestant community subscribed very liberally toward the commendable object, many of them having given as much as $100 each.—Leader.

The Atlantic Cable.

There have been several festive gatherings in Britain in honor of Captain Anderson, of the "Great Estern," and the other parties most prominently connected with the Atlantic Cable. Several are to be knighted, and two are to be made baronets. It is fitting that such a great enterprise should be thus distinguished, and that the arts of peace should have their honors as well as the arts of war. At one of the banquets a speaker said he hoped Captain Anderson and the "Great Eastern" would be permanently employed in laying ocean cables, and that the next one would be from England to Alexandria. The Atlantic Telegraph Company regret deeply the unsatisfactory nature of the connection upon Newfoundland, and between that Island and the United States, but for which they would reduce the rate of messages one-half at once. They expect, however, to do so soon. They are going to issue the balance of their stock,—about eight hundred thousand pounds sterling—and apply to Parliament for power to increase the capital from two to five millions. "The earnings, so far, have been at the rate of £960 per working day. The largest sum taken in one day was £2,008, and the two most profitable messages were the King of Poussia's speech, and the account of the prize fight between Mace and Goss,—both telegraphed to the American Press. The two cables, it was anticipated, would be more than equal to all the business that could come to them for some years. The estimate was that they could transmit five words a minute, whereas they actually transmitted fifteen and sometimes twenty words a minute. The insulation of the original cable was found at present more complete than that of the new cable. In the recent experiment, in which the two cables were joined and the electric spark produced by a piece of zinc and a piece of copper placed in a silver thimble, signals were passed through the entire coil of three thousand seven hundred miles in a second."

SAD REFLECTION.—A few days since one Thomas Wells, a solicitor by profession, but now poverty stricken and paralytic, was taken before the Lord Mayor, London, charged with the legal offence of being drunk and incapable of taking care of himself. This is the person—a lawyer by profession, a gentleman in reality—who brought an action against Lord Palmerston in the Divorce Court not very long ago, and was practically laughed out of court. Since then he had been going down hill faster and faster, and is now one of the most pitiable of miserable creatures—an habitually drunken paralytic, creeping about the street of London as well as disease will allow him. He was fined 5s. but having no money, of course, was sent to prison for three days.—English paper.

A LITTLE GIRL FOR SALE.—It is stated in the Mineryo that an old Scotchman of the name of Jos. Limbater, lately arrived from Quebec, has been arrested because offering for sale at the Bonsecours Market a little girl six years old. He said that she was his grandchild through his son, that he wanted to get rid of her in order to proceed to the to the States, and he offered her for $100 cash.

LAST EFFORT.

The greatest effort is being made to raise the drooping fortune of the head of the ministry. Ever since the Globe came nobly out and exposed the failing of the minister of militia, thus opening the eyes of the people to the madness of sending men to parliament who unfit themselves for public duty, and the double madness of the Royal Representative in choosing such an one to fill a high office in the ministry, the honor of the Tory leader has been declining. One dinner was got up to bolster up the declining fortunes of the party. An attempt was also made to get up one in Dundas; this failed. Now they have changed their centre and are trying to raise the wind in Hamilton. At one time we hear it is about to take place, and that ministers have accepted the invitation to be present; at another time rumour has it, it is to be abandoned. Why all this fuss about ministers? Is it because the people of Upper Canada desire to honor the leaders of the present ministry? Not a bit of it. But the office seekers and partizans who hope to reap some reward in the way of a snug situation under the government, are making a dying struggle to obtain these things before confederation is completed; forever after they will have very little chance.

Upper Canada once left to herself will never tolerate such conduct as has been borne with under the present system. The present Ministers retain office through Lower Canada votes, and as soon as they are gone down goes the whole fabric of corruption.—This vote has been dearly bought hitherto. It has been purchased by corruption and an entire disregard of principle. Many have been the exposures of the truculence to Lower Canada, and of the disregard of character and principle in pondering to the Priest party. Their schools and colleges have been supported by Upper Canada funds. Their public works have been constructed at our expense; and even up to this very year (so late as June, '66) $30,000 have been supplied to the funds for superior education in Lower Canada, and this contrary to statute. These illegal advances, it is said, amount to $110,000 in three years, and it is to continue these things, if possible, that these dinners are got up. Surely the people of Upper Canada are about as easily gulled as any people under the sun, if they countenance those men who have been cursing the country for so many years. We may, however, congratulate ourselves that this reign of misgovernment is near its end. A few months will give the affairs of the province into our own hands, and we trust that we will be prepared for the work of reform that is so much needed and has been so loudly called for, namely, to reform the Legislature, and then we may expect reform in other things.

Mr. Kennedy's Concert.

This gentleman, so renowned for his beautiful rendering of his national airs, the songs of Scotia, gave his first entertainment here yesterday evening, in the Victoria Hall.—The Hall was well filled with an appreciating audience, who were perfectly enraptured with the glowing melody of the songs, and delighted with the accompaniments on the Piano by Miss Kennedy,—Mr. Kennedy's daughter—a little girl not much over 12 years of age. Mr. Kennedy possesses a good deal of humour, has a very pleasing voice which he command with perfect ease, and setting off, as he does, his songs with dramatic action, he causes them to be fully appreciated by the audience. We cannot refer at length to the different pieces sung during the evening. We must content ourselves with advising all who can to go and hear him to-night, and we have no doubt but that they will be pleased, even though inclined to be fastidious.

Sabbath Desecration.

We have another letter on Sabbath desecration, in which the writer reiterates all his former charges of Sabbath breaking, and adds some additional ones of falsehood, &c. We must adhere to our determination not to admit anything more on that subject. We trust that both parties will feel that they have had a hearing. What they have written throws all the light required on the subject to understand it. Highly as we respect both parties we must decline any more discussion as it would end in no good to either of them. We hope what has been said will induce respect for the Sabbath Day, and will not destroy good will toward each other.

A Dastardly Act.

During the day of the Otonabee Agricultural Show, some vile wretch administered poison to the prize boar, belonging to Mr. John Mather. The villain who did such an act deserves retribution of the most severe kind, and it is to be hoped that he will be found out and dragged to justice. Mr. Mather offers a reward of fifty dollars for the conviction of the culprit. The Township should do something to aid in discovering the wretch who did the cowardly act. Such a person but requires provocation and opportunity to take the life of his fellow.

Accident, almost serious.

As two sons of Mr. Goodwin, confectioner of this place were out practising with pistols, Mr. R. M. Goodwin, the Junior partner of Messrs. Goodwin & Son, was about to shoot and had his pistol ready when his attention was called by his brother to something behind them, he carelessly dropped his hand, his finger on the trigger, to look round, when the pistol went off, sending the ball through his foot. We are glad to learn that the hurt is not likely to be serious. This affords another proof of the great need there is for care in handling fire arms. They are not to be played with foolishly.

Ready-made Clothing.

We would direct the attention of our readers to the advertisement of F. & L. Lemay announcing a change in their business next spring. They are now selling off their large stocks of Clothing, &c., at their respective stores fifteen per cent below cost. Any person desirous of purchasing a good coat at a cheap price ought to give them a call.

Canadian Blondin.

Mr. A. Jenkins intends feasting the eyes of the lovers of fun in this vicinity by performing some rope ascension, on Saturday at one o'clock. He promises to perform several feats of walking, standing on his head, etc., etc., on the main rope, and also on other ropes connected with the main rope.

Sale of Well Bred Dairy Cattle.

We invite the attention of our readers to the sale of Cattle, &c., on Wednesday next, at Merino Farm, North Monaghan, where a large number of well bred Cows, Sheep, and one span of Horses will be offered for sale. For terms and particulars see advertisement.

Great Horse Show.

Parties interested in the improvement of that useful animal, the horse, are about to have a Show, on the 1st and 2nd days of November, when 14 prizes will be offered for competition in style and speed. See large bills.

We did not intend giving the names of those who obtained prizes at the late examinations in Monaghan and Smith, yet at the request of several parties we give them this week although it is late.

THE CRAFTSMAN.—This the title of a new monthly periodical in the int rest of Freemasonry, published by T. & R. White, of Hamilton. The Craftsman is neatly printed in new type, obtained for that purpose expressly, we are informed. They intended to issue it monthly, and containing as it does, ten pages of reading matter principally on subjects relating to the order, it will no doubt be well patronized by the Fraternity. We wish the Craftsman a long and successful life.

THE VALUE OF PROTECTION.—Some American manufacturing companies are now clearing 100 to 133½ per cent. profits on their outlayed capital. Thus a few companies are being enriched while the mass of the people are getting fleeced. And yet the people are willing to continue this state of things. At present the prices of many articles of import are doubled by high tariff.

SUICIDE IN CHICAGO.—A young woman from Hamilton, Canada West, lately visited Chicago and booked herself Miss Miller. In about an hour after she called for a glass of lemonade and went to her room, took morphia, and thus killed herself. Cause—deserted and forsaken by her seducer.

FLOGGING.—The Grand Jury for Toronto Assizes has recommended to the Court the advisability of introducing flogging in certain cases, and recommends that parliament be petitioned to that effect. The matter is to be brought before the Legislature next session.

An American, lately visiting the Falls, got swindled out of a few dollars and afterwards was abused by the party. The matter has been referred to the United States Government, and will be laid before our Government, perhaps, before settled. It appears that the Falls are noted for such outrages.

INFANTICIDE IN PARIS.—It is said that of 20,000 infants given out to nurses yearly from this city, not over 5,000 ever return; over 15,000 perish annually from bad treatment. Since 1846 it is estimated that 300,000 have perished from this cause alone.

The City of Montreal contributed $30,000 to the Pope's funds. The Witness pertinently remarks that this with Peters Pence amounts to $62,000 annually, and calls on the Catholic population to do as much for the Quebec sufferers.

Late European papers inform us that the Empress of Mexico has lost her reason. The first symptoms of this being manifested while at Rome, the Holy Father having refused to endorse all Maximilians doings in religious matters.

PROTESTANT CHURCHES IN PARIS.—People are now living in Paris, who can remember well when no such thing as a Protestant church was to be found in that great city. Now there are thirty-seven churches, chapels, and places of Protestant worship there.

Otonabee Agricultural Show.

The Otonabee Agricultural exhibition was held at Keene on the 20th inst. The number of articles shown were not numerous but were of excellent quality. Cattle, grain and roots were considered good. Ladies' Work and Fine Arts deservedly ranked high. There were evident insinuations made that Otonabee could do better. Perhaps the dark cloudy morning interfered with the attendance and consequent number of entries.

THE EUPHRATES DRYING UP.—Students of prophecy for two hundred years back have recorded their conviction that the temporal power of the Pope was to be overthrown in 1866, and that the Turkish Empire, the "eleventh" head of the Mahomedan imposture, would, about the same time, suffer a doom figuratively represented by the phrase, "the drying-up of the Euphrates." It is somewhat remarkable in this connection that the temporal power of the Roman pontiff should be in such a very precarious state at the present time, and equally remarkable that rebellion should be spreading among the Greek subjects of the Porte, and Russia preparing to aid them. The "sick man" appears to be worse than ever. The Euphrates is probably drying up.—Witness.

MONAGHAN TOWNSHIP COUNCIL.

Monaghan, October 5, 1866.

The Council met at 2 o'clock.

Present—The Reeve and Councillors Robson, Collins, Dundass and Goodfellow.

Minutes of last meeting read and sustained.

Moved by Mr. Collins, seconded by Mr. Robson,—That the motion passed at the last meeting of the Council, granting $125 to assist in building a Drill Shed at Springville, be now rescinded.—Carried.

Orders were given on the Treasurer in favour of John Wilson for $3.00—for repairs of Town Hall and shed, and to John Haggart for $2.00—for a bridge on his beat.

Richard Lund was authorised to procure plank for repairing the bridges on his beat, and to forward an account of same to the Council.

In consequence of the change in the law relating to Municipal Elections, the Council considered it better in a small Township like Monaghan, as well as to avoid unnecessary expenses, that the poll should be held at one place, and accordingly passed a By-law naming the Town Hall for that purpose.—Com.

Handsome Work of Art.

(From the Cobourg Sentinal.)

Our townsman, Mr. C. H. Stewart, marble cutter, has just finished a very handsome Monument to be placed over the remains of the late W. S. Conger, Esq., late M.P.P. for Peterborough. It is a die and spiral monument with urn on top, is eleven feet six inches high, highly polished and finished. On one side of the pedestal the Conger coat of arms is inscribed, beneath which is the inscription—"William Seymour Conger, died July 27th, A.D. 1864, in the 60th year of his age." On the other side is inscribed the following which speaks for itself:—"In memory of W. S. Conger, Esquire, M. P. P. for the County of Peterborough, who, during his life time, filled the offices of Sheriff of the County, Warden of the County Council, and Mayor of the Town of Peterborough.—This Monument is erected by public subscription, in testimony of his continued and disinterested efforts to advance the interest of the County of Peterborough."

The whole Monument rests on a massive granite base, and is made of the best No. 1 white marble. It does great credit to the skill and ability of Mr. Stewart as a first class artisan; and also reflects the greatest credit upon the people of Peterborough, at whose expense this splendid token of their esteem for the deceased gentleman has been erected. It is a tribute of respect, and a well deserved Memorial to a good, kind and faithful public servant, and such we know Mr. Conger to have been to the people of Peterborough. Mr. Stewart has taken it out to Peterboro' to raise it on its destined final resting place.

A meeting of the subscribers will be held at Caisse's Hotel, on Saturday afternoon, next, at 3 o'clock.

Interesting Law Case.

The St. Catherines Journal reports the following case, which was tried at the Assizes there:—

MILLS VS. THE BANK OF UPPER CANADA.—Trover.—The plaintiff in this case was a Mr. Samuel G. Mills, who recently purchased Mr. Shickluna's farm, near Niagara. It seems that on the 8th of June last he brought a note for $6,000 to the Bank Agency here to be discounted, when the Manager, Mr. Barwick, told him it would be necessary to get an endorser. Mills obtained the name of J. G. Currie to his note, and left it at the Bank, the Manager informing him that he had received instructions from Toronto to discount no notes, but that he would write to the head office at Toronto and endeavor to get the note discounted. On the 16th or 18th of June Mr. Mills called, and was informed that no answer had been returned. On the 19th Mr. Barwick received the note from Toronto, and at once wrote to Mr. Mills at Niagara, enclosing the note. Mr. Mills alleged that he had never received the letter or note, and Mr. Griffin, Post office Inspector, was unable to trace the letter. The plaintiff contended that he should have either received the note or the money, and the fact of sending the note by mail without instructions from him, was a conversion.—The defendants contended that they had received no value and could obtain no benefit from the retention of the note, that the mailing of the note was not a conversion, and that if it was lost by that means there was no cause for action. Verdict by consent for plaintiff, the Court to draw inferences from the facts, with leave for defendants to move.

Breakers Ahead.

From the Brockville Recorder.

At an agricultural meeting held at Bell's Corner's, near Ottawa, two members of the Government were present. One of these, in alluding to the skedaddle of the Governor General from Ottawa, endeavored to reassure the people of the capital and their neighbors of Carlton that there was no excuse for the idea that Ottawa was being deserted by the government, and that everything would yet be serene. That there is a wide spread spirit of dissatisfaction among the Government employees is certain, and that this spirit will yet work harm to Ottawa is just as sure. We give the following letter from a correspondent (one out of several) to show the position of matters at the seat of government, and the gross neglect of their duties by the heads of departments:—

Ottawa, Oct. 10, 1866.

MY DEAR WELLS.—It is time a new regime was introduced. It is almost impossible to get business done with the departments, owing to the absence of the ministers, and parties having good claims financially against the government are bluffed off. The city hall has been into McDougall's house for taxes due a few days ago. Ottawa is a hard, expensive place to live in, and unless the government moves off we shall be ruined. The government officials complain of not being able to make both ends meet, and this month the city taxes having to be paid, (and no small sums either), the hardships is extreme. One dollar and three cents in the pound, and income tax, is no joke.

Pray that we may all be delivered from our troubles and difficulties.

A telegram from New York announces that the Fenien preparations for the invasion of Ireland are in a forward state, and that a mass meeting will take place at James' Wood on the 28th inst.,—"the last to be held by James Stephens until the war commences." It is kind in the Feniens to give the British Government such precise information as to the date when they may be expected.

The Fenian Prisoners.

Upon the opening of the Court of Assize for the United Counties of York and Peel, Saturday, Mr. Justice John Wilson presiding, seven Fenian prisoners against whom the grand jury found true bills on Friday, were brought up and arraigned.

Benjamin Parry, a mere youth, was the first arraigned, and when the indictment was read to him he pleaded not guilty.

His Lordship—(addressing the prisoner)—how old are you?

The prisoner—I was sixteen last March.

His Lordship—addressing Mr. Thurston, the American Consul. Do you know anything of the prisoner?

Mr. Thurston—I have made enquiry about the young man and received instructions from the American government to employ counsel for such of the prisoners as are American citizens.

The following prisoners were then separately arraigned and pleaded not guilty; and stated that they would be ready for trial next Wednesday week:—John Smith; Patrick McGrath, Thomas Maxwell; John Quinn, Tim. Kelly and James McDonagh.

The prisoners were then removed and conveyed to jail. They were well dressed and presented a clean and healthy appearance, but were considerably chop-fallen on account of the awkward position in which they were placed.

QUEBEC STILL IN DANGER.—It is stated, we know not with what truth, that threats have been made to the effect that attempts will be made to burn down the remainder of the city. Let the statement be what it may, there can be no doubt that attempts of the sort have been made within the last few nights, having that object in view. On Monday night two houses, one in St. George's street, St. John Suburbs, and the other not far from the same locality, were discovered to be on fire, leaving no doubt, from the manner in which the fir in both instances were discovered, that it was the work of incendiaries. It was also rumored that an attempt had been made to fire the Grey Nunnery Church, outside of St. John's Gate—in the same connection, an evening contemporary says: "In view of three rumored attempts to fire this ward (Palais) last night, and still more attempts being apprehended, the citizens are organizing patrols for night duty. The other wards also intend to follow suit." Citizens should be on their guard, and we trust the police will also give their strictest attention to the matter.—Quebec Chronicle.

English Crops and Prices of Grain.

The effect of the continuous rains in England during the time the crops were being harvested, has been very serious. It is estimated that one-tenth of the entire wheat crop has been lost. The full wing is the opinion of one who, from previous experience, was well qualified to judge:—

"I consider that the grain over half of the kingdom has been exposed to be heavy rain of the last month, and according to the best evidence I have been able with much diligence to obtain, and from extended and close personal observation in various counties, I think on fifth of the crop is exposed, has been rendered useless for human food. If I am right in this data, it follows that one-tenth of the wheat crop over the entire kingdom has been lost. Barley and oats have suffered much in color and in quantity, and have been and are stacked in every soft condition, but owing to the cold nights and high winds actual sprouting is not so general as might have been, from so much rain, expected."

Last year, wheat was largely imported into England from Russia, Prussia and France—this year, the chief supplies must be drawn from Russia, as the crops in both other countries mentioned are known to be deficient. Now the causes that have placed Russia in the position of chief supplier of breadstuffs to England and millions, were no in existence last year, and it is not likely that any very great increase will have taken place in the surplus which they can obtain from that quarter. If one it is probable that prices will rise, as they have already commenced to do, until wheat and flour can be exported as a profit from this side of the Atlantic. As far as we can learn, there will not be, either here or in the United States, a very large quantity of wheat in excess of the requirment of the increasing population of this Continent, and it is therefore unlikely that shipments of grain will be made to England as a sacrifice.—Of Indian corn, the crop in the United States is very large, and but for the great expense incurred in bringing it to market, would exercise considerable influence in keeping down the price of wheat and flour; but taking everything into consideration, we think the probabilities are in favor of higher prices for breadstuff than rule at present even here, and ready markets to absorb all our surplus. For coarse grains there appears to be also a fair demand, but the causes that operate with regard to this class of productions are less easily estimated, and predictions by even those best informed should be received with great caution.—*

REMARKABLE CURES.

TO THE PUBLIC!

I think it but right that I should make known the following facts, with reference to the efficacy of the remedies supplied by Dr. H. Morris, of Peterborough:—Last year a boy of mine took the Scarlet Fever, paralysis followed, and the little fellow lost his speech, being unable to speak for nine months. I had several Doctors attending him but without any beneficial results, and I had almost given up hopes of his recovery. About this time I met Dr. Morris, who furnished me with some medicine which had the effect of restoring the little fellow's speech the day after it was first used, and he is now in excellent health. I have also used Dr. Morris's Dandelion Pills, and found them all he represented them to be. They are a genuine article.

This is to certify, that my sister-in-law was severely afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that she could not move or turn herself in bed without assistance from others, in fact she was as helpless as a child. She was attended by three different Doctors, who reside in this neighborhood, but all their skill was of no avail in relieving her pain. I was advised by Mr. John Archer to try Dr. Morris's Invigorating Fluid, as he assured me that it had done him good when all other remedies had failed. I bought two bottles, tried it, and found it had good effect, when I bought four bottles more. I am happy to inform the public that she is perfectly cured and able to perform her household duties, and advise all who have the misfortune to be afflicted with Rheumatism to try the Invigorating Fluid,

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" • • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" • • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

" • • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEIMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" • • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 354 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. BEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.
This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do.
It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER—for Indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c, where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity makes it a cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bottle. Ask for "Lyon's" Pure Extract. Take no other.

COMING HOME.

They are coming, happy children,
School is out, and they're at play—
Coming through the lane and orchard,
Surely not the nearest way.

Rosy cheeks and eyes that sparkle,
Laugh that's ringing loud and free;
Constant din of childish prattle,
Not a heart but's filled with glee.

Roaming here and there 'mid flowers,
Playing drive, or take a ride,
Counting o'er the fountain frollics,
Source alike of joy and pride.

Naught care they for wealth or fashion,
Bonnets swinging in the hand;
Fairy locks are freely waving,
Round the brows so deeply tanned.

Little hats are clutched half brimless,
Butterflies must now take care;
Earnestly each youthful sportsman
Longs to take them in his snare.

Tiny feet are spreading homeward,
By the brook and 'long the hill,
Pausing at each downy bird's nest,
And the rocks beside the mill.

Merry shouts and songs and laughter,
Fall united on the ear;
Sweet enough to rouse the languid,
And the drooping spirit cheer.

Life to them is sport and pastime,
Earth a paradise of flowers;
And they revel 'mid its beauties,
Dreaming not of wintry hours.

Tell them not of their delusion,
Nor recite some woeful tale;
Better list to their rejoicings,
Than to bear them sigh and wail.

The Lamplighter's Story.

BY THE EDITOR.

'If you talk of Murphy and Francis Moore, gentlemen,' said the lamplighter who was in the chair, 'I mean to say that neither of 'em ever had any more to do with the stars than Tom Grig had.'

'And what had he to do with 'em?'—asked the lamplighter who officiated as vice.

'Nothing at all,' replied the other; 'just exactly nothing at all.'

'Do you mean to say you don't believe in Murphy, then?' demanded the lamplighter who had opened the discussion.

'I mean to say that I believe in Tom Grig,' replied the chairman. 'Whether I believe in Murphy, or not, is a matter between me and my conscience; and whether Murphy believes in himself or not, is a matter between him and his conscience.—Gentlemen, I drink your healths.'

The lamplighter who did the company this honour, was seated in the chimney corner of a certain tavern, which has been, time out of mind, the Lamplighter's House of Call. He sat in the midst of a circle of lamplighters, and was the cacique, or chief of the tribe.

If any of you readers have had the good fortune to behold a lamplighter's funeral, they will not be surprised to learn that lamplighters are strange and primitive people; that they rigidly adhere to old ceremonies and customs which have been handed down among them from father to son since the first public lamp was lighted out of doors; that they intermarry, and betroth their children in infancy; that they enter into no plots or conspiracies (for whoever heard of a traitorous lamplighter?); that they commit no crimes against the laws of their country (there being no instance of a murderous or burglarious lamplighter); that they are, in short, notwithstanding their apparently volatile and restless character, a highly moral and reflective people: having among themselves as many traditional observances as the Jew, and being, as a body, if not as old as the hills, at least as old as the streets. It is an article of their creed that the first faint glimmering of true civilization shone in the first street light maintained at the public expense.—They trace their existance and high position in the public esteem, in a direct line to the heathen mythology; and hold that the history of Prometheus himself is but a pleasant fable, whereof the true hero is a lamplighter.

'Gentlemen,' said the lamplighter in the chair, 'I drink your health.'

'And perhaps, sir,' said the vice, holding up his glass, and rising a little way off his seat and sitting down again, in token that he recognised and returned the compliment, 'perhaps you will add to that condescension by telling us who Tom Grig was, and how he came to be connected in your mind with Francis Moore, Physician.'

'Hear, hear, hear!' cried the lamplighters generally.

'Tom Grig, gentlemen,' said the chairman, 'was one of us; and it happened to him as it don't often happen to a public character in our line, that he had his whatyou-may-call-it cast.'

'His head?' said the vice.

'No,' replied the chairman, 'not his head.'

'His face, perhaps?' said the vice. 'No, not his face.' 'His legs?' 'No, not his legs.' Nor yet his arms, nor his hands, nor his feet, nor his chest—all of which were severally suggested.

'His nativity, perhaps?'

'That's it,' said the chairman, awakening from his thoughtful attitude at the suggestion. 'His nativity. That's what Tom had cast, gentlemen.'

'In plaster?' asked the vice.

'I don't rightly know how it's done,' returned the chairman, 'but I suppose it was.'

And there he stopped as if that were all he had to say; whereupon there arose a murmur among the company, which at length resolved itself into a request, conveyed through the vice, that he would go on. This being exactly what the chairman wanted, he mused for a little time, performed that agreeable ceremony which is popularly termed wetting one's whistle, and went on thus:

'Tom Grig, gentlemen, was, as I have said, one of us; and I may go farther, and say he was an ornament to us, and such a one as only the good old times of oil and cotton could have produced. Tom's family, gentlemen, were all lamplighters.'

'Not the ladies, I hope?' asked the vice.

'They had talent enough for it, sir,' rejoined the chairman, 'and would been but for the prejudices of society. Let women have their rights, sir, and the females of Tom's family would have been every one of 'em in office. But that emancipation hasn't come yet, and hadn't then, and consequently they confined themselves to the bosoms of their families, cooked the dinners, mended the clothes, minded the children, comforted their husbands, and attended to the housekeeping generally. It's a hard thing upon the women, gentlemen, that they are limited to such a sphere of action as this; very hard.

'I happen to know all about Tom, gentlemen, from the circumstances of his uncle by the mother's side having been my particular friend. His (that's Tom's uncle's) fate was a melancholy one. Gas was the death of him. When it was first talked of, he laughed. He wasn't angry; he laughed at the credulity of human nature. 'They might as well talk,' he says, 'of laying on an everlasting succession of glow-worms;' and then he laughed again, partly at his joke, and partly at poor humanity.

'In course of time, however, the thing got ground, the experiment was made, and they lighted up Pall Mall. Tom's uncle went to see it. I've heard that he fell off his ladder fourteen times that night from weakness, and that he would certainly have gone on falling till he killed himself, if his last tumble hadn't been into a wheelbarrow which was going his way, and humanely took him home. 'I foresee in this,' says Tom's uncle, faintly, and taking to his bed as he spoke—'I foresee, in this,' he says, 'the breaking up of our profession. There's no more going the rounds to trim by daylight, no more dribbling down of the oil on the hats and bonnets of ladies and gentlemen when one feels in spirits. Any low fellow can light a gas-lamp. And it's all up.' In this state of mind, he petitioned the government for—I want a word again, gentlemen—what do you call that which they give people when it's found out, at last, that they've never been of any use, and have been paid too much for doing nothing?'

'Compensation?' suggested the vice.

'That's it,' said the chairman. 'Compensation. They didn't give it him though, and then he got very fond of his country all at once, and went about saying that gas was a death-blow to his native land, and that it was a plot of the radicals to ruin the country, and destroy the oil and cotton trade for ever, and that the whales would go and kill themselves privately, out of sheer spite and vexation at not being caught.—At last he got right down cracked; called his tobacco-pipe a gas-pipe; thought his tears were lamp-oil; and went on with all manner of nonsense of that sort, till one night he hung himself on a lamp-iron in Saint Martin's Lane, and there was an end of him.

'Tom loved him, gentlemen, but he survived it. He shed a tear over his grave, got very drunk, spoke a funeral oration that night in the watch-house, and was fined five shillings for it in the morning. Some men are none the worse for this sort of thing. Tom was one of 'em. He went that very afternoon on a new beat: as clear in his head and as free from fever as Father Mathew himself.

'Tom's new beat, gentlemen, was—I can't exactly say where, for that he'd never tell; but I know it was in a quite part of town, where the were some queer old houses. I have always had it in my head that it must have been somewhere near Canonbury Tower in Islington, but that's a matter of opinion. Wherever it was, he went upon it, with a bran new ladder, a white hat, a brown Holland jacket and trowsers, a blue-neck-kerchief, and a spring of full-double wall-flower in his button-hole. Tom was always genteel in his appearance, and I have neard from the best judges that if he had left his ladder at home that afternoon, you might have took him for a lord.

'He was always merry, was Tom, and such a singer, that if there was any encouragement for native talent, he'd have been at the opera. He was on his ladder, lighting his first lamp, and singing to himself in a manner more easily to be conceived than described, when he hears the clock strike five, and suddenly sees an old gentleman with a telescope in his hand, throw up a window and look at him very hard.

'Tom didn't know what could be passing in the old gentleman's mind. He thought it likely enough that he might be saying within himself, 'Here's a new lamplighter—a good-looking young fellow—shall I stand something to drink?' Thinking this possible, he keeps quite still, pretending to be very particular about the wick, and looks at the old gentleman sideways, seeming to take no notice of him.

'Gentlemen, he was one of the strangest and most mysterious looking files that ever Tom clapped his eyes on. He was dressed all slovenly and untidy, in a great gown, of a kind of bed-furniture pattern, with a cap of the same on his head; and a long old flapped waistcoat; with no braces, no strings, very few buttons—in short, with hardly any of those artificial contrivances that hold society together. Tom knew by these signs, and by his not being shaved, and by his not being over clean, and by a sort of wisdom not quite awake, in his face, that he was a scientific old gentleman. He often told me that if he could have conceived the possibility of the whole Royal Society being boiled down into one man, he should have said the old gentleman's body was that Body.

'The old gentleman claps the telescope to his eye, looks all round, sees nobody else in sight, stares at Tom again, and cries out very loud: 'Hal-loa!'

''Hollos, sir,' says Tom from the ladder; 'and hollos again, if you come to that.'

''Here's an extraordinary fulfilment,' says the old gentleman, 'of a prediction of the planets.'

''Is there?' says Tom, 'I'm very glad to hear it.'

''Young man,' says the old gentleman, 'you don't know me.'

''Sir,' says Tom, 'I have not that honour; but I shall be happy to drink your health, notwithstanding.'

''I read,' cries the old gentleman, without taking any notice of this politeness on Tom's part—'I read what's going to happen in the stars.'

'Tom thanked him for the information, and begged to know if anything particular was going to happen in the stars, in the course of a week or so, but the old gentleman, correcting him, explained that he read in the stars what was going to happen on dry land, and that he was acquainted with all the celestial bodies.

''I hope they're all well, sir, says Tom,—'everybody.'

''Hush!' cries the old gentleman. 'I have consulted the Book of Fate with rare and wonderful success. I am versed in the great sciences of astrology and astronomy. In my house here, I have every description of apparatus for observing the course and motion of the planets. Six months ago, I derived from this source the knowledge that precisely as the clock struck five this afternoon, a stranger would present himself—the destined husband of my young and lovely niece—in reality of illustrious and high descent, but whose birth would be enveloped in uncertainty and mystery. Don't tell me yours isn't,' says the old gentleman, who was in such a hurry to speak that he couldn't get the words out fast enough, 'for I know better.'

'Gentlemen, Tom was so astonished when he heard him say this, that he could hardly keep his footing on the ladder, and found it necessary to hold on by the lamp-post. There was a mystery about his birth. His mother had always admitted it. Tom had never known who was his father, and some people went so far as to say that even she was in doubt.

'While he was in this state of amazement, the old gentleman leaves the window, bursts out of the house-door, shakes the ladder, and Tom, like a ripe pumpkin, comes sliding down into his arms.

''Let me embrace you,' he says, folding his arms about him, and nearly lighting up his old bed-furniture gown at Tom's link. 'You're a man of noble aspect.—Everything combines to prove the accuracy of my observations. You have had mysterious promptings within you,' he says; 'I know you had whisperings of greatness, eh?' he says.

''I think I have,' says Tom.—Tom was one of those who can persuade themselves to anything they like.—'I have often thought I wasn't the small beer I was taken for.'

''You were right,' cries the old gentleman, hugging him again. 'Come in. My niece awaits us.'

''Is the young lady tolerably good-looking, sir?' says Tom, hanging fire rather, as he thought of her playing the piano, and knowing French, and being up to all manner of accomplishments.

''She's beautiful!' cries the old gentleman, who was in such a terrible hustle that he was all in a perspiration. 'She has a graceful carriage, an exquisite shape, a sweet voice, a countenance beaming with animation and expression; and the eye,' he says, rubbing his hands, 'of a startled fawn.'

'Tom supposed this might mean, what was called among his circle of acquaintance, 'a game eye;' and with a view to this defect inquired whether the young lady had any cash.

''She has five thousand pounds,' cries the old gentleman, 'But what of that? A word in your ear. I'm in search of the philosopher's stone. I have very nearly found it—not quite. It turns everything into gold; that's its property.'

'Tom naturally thought it must have a deal of property; and said that when the old gentleman did get it, he hoped he'd be careful to keep it in the family.

''Certainly,' he says, 'of course. Five thousand pounds! What's five thousand pounds to us? What's five million? he says. What's five thousand million?—Money will be nothing to us. We shall never be able to spend it fast enough.'

''We'll try what we can do, sir,' says Tom.

''We will,' says the old gentleman.—'Your name?'

'Grigs' says Tom.

'The old gentleman embraced him again, very tight; and without speaking another word, dragged him into the house in such an excited manner, that it was as much as Tom could do to take his link and ladder with him, and put them down in the passage.

'Gentlemen, if Tom hadn't been always remarkable for his love of truth, I think you would still have believed him when he said all this was like a dream. There is no better way for a man to find out whether he really is asleep or awake, than calling for something to eat. If he is in a dream, gentlemen, he'll find something wanting in the flavour, depend upon it.

'Tom explained his doubts to the old gentleman, and said that if there was any cold meat in the house, it would ease his mind very much to test himself at once.—The old gentleman ordered up venison pie, a small ham, and a bottle of very old Madeira. At the first mouthful of pie, and the first glass of wine, Tom smacks his lips and cries out, 'I'm awake—wide awake;' and to prove that he was so, gentlemen, he made an end of 'em both.

'When Tom had finished his meal (which he never spoke of afterwards without tears in his eyes), the old gentleman hugs him again, and says, 'Noble stranger! let us visit my young and lovely niece.' Tom, who was a little elevated with the wine, replies, 'The noble stranger is agreeable!' At which words the old gentleman took him by the hand, and led him to the parlour; crying, as he opened the door, 'Here is Mr. Grig, the favorite of the planets!'

'I will not attempt a description of female beauty, gentlemen, for every one of us has a model of his own that suits his own taste best. In this parlour that I'm speaking of, there were two young ladies; and if every gentleman present will imagine two models of his own in their places, and will be kind enough to polish 'em up to the very highest pitch of perfection, he will then have a faint conception of their uncommon radiance.

'Besides these two young ladies, there was their waiting-woman, that under any other circumstances Tom would have looked upon as a Venus; and besides her, there was a tall, thin, dismal-faced young gentleman, half man and half boy, dressed in a childish suit of clothes, very much too short in the legs and arms, and looking, according to Tom's comparison, like one of the wax juveniles from a tailor's door, grown up and run to seed. Now this youngster stamped his foot upon the ground and looked very fierce at Tom, and Tom looked very fierce at him—for to tell the truth, gentlemen, Tom more than half suspected that when they entered the room he was kissing one of the young ladies; and, for anything Tom knew, you observe, it might be his young lady—which was not pleasant.

''Sir,' says Tom, 'before we proceed any further, will you have the goodness to inform me who this young Salamander'—Tom called him that for aggravation, you perceive, gentlemen—'who this young Salamander may be?'

''That, Mr. Grig,' says the old gentleman, 'is my little boy. He was christened Galileo Isaac Newton Flamstead. Don't mind him. He's a mere child.'

'A very fine child, too,' says Tom—still aggravating, you'll observe—'of his age, and as good as fine, I have no doubt. How do you do, my man?' with which kind and patronising expressions, Tom reached up to pat him on the head, and quoted two lines about little boys, from Doctor Watt's Hymns, which he had learnt at a Sunday School.

'It was very easy to see, gentlemen, by this youngster's frowning, and by the waiting-maid's tossing her head and turning up her nose, and by the young ladies turning their backs and talking together at the other end of the room, that nobody but the old gentleman took very kindly to the noble stranger. Indeed, Tom plainly heard the waiting-woman say of her master, that so far from being able to read the stars as he pretended, she didn't believe he knew his letters in 'em, or, at best, that he had got no further than words in one syllable; but Tom, not minding this (for he was in spirits after the Madeira), looks with an agreeable air towards the young ladies, and, turning his head to both, says to the old gentleman, 'Which is which?'

''This,' says the old gentleman, leading out the handsomest, if one of 'em could possibly be said to be handsomer than the other—'this is my neice, Miss Fanny Barker.'

''If you'll permit me, miss,' says Tom, 'being a noble stranger, and a favourite of the planets, I will conduct myself as such.' With these words, he kisses the young lady in a very affable way, turns to the old gentleman, slaps him on the back, and says, 'When's it to come off, my buck?'

'The young lady colored so deep, and her lip trembled so much, gentlemen, that Tom really thought she was going to cry. But she kept her feelings down, and, turning to the old gentleman, says, 'Dear uncle, though you have the absolute disposal of my hand and fortune, and though you mean well in disposing of 'em thus, I ask you whether you don't think this is a mistake? Don't you think, dear uncle,' she says, 'that the stars must be in error? Is it not possible that the comet may have put 'em out?'

'The stars,' says the old gentleman, 'couldn't make a mistake if they tried.—Emma,' he says to the other young lady.

'Yes, papa,' says she.

'The same day that makes your cousin Mrs. Grig, will unite you to the gifted Mooney. No remonstrance—no tears. Now, Mr. Grig, let me conduct you to that hallowed ground, that philosophical retreat, where my friend and partner, the gifted Mooney of whom I have just now spoken, is even now pursuing those discoveries which shall enrich us with the precious metal, and makes us masters of the world. Come, Mr. Grig,' he says.

'With all my heart, sir,' replies Tom; 'and luck to the gifted Mooney say I—not so much on his account as for our worthy selves!' With this sentiment, Tom kissed his hand to the ladies again, and followed him out; having the gratification to perceive, as he looked back, that they were all hanging on by the arms and legs of Galileo Isaac Newton Flamstead, to prevent him from following the noble stranger, and tearing him to pieces.

'Gentlemen, Tom's father-in-law that was to be, took him by the hand, and having lighted a little lamp, led him across a paved court-yard at the back of the house, into a very large, dark, gloomy room; filled with all manner of bottles, globes, books, telescopes, crocodiles, alligators, and other scientific instruments of every kind. In the centre of this room was a stove or furnace, with what Tom called a pot, but which in my opinion was a crucible, in full boil. In one corner was a sort of ladder leading through the roof; and up this ladder the old gentleman pointed, as he said in a whisper:

''The observatory. Mr. Mooney is even now watching for the precise time at which we are to come into all the riches of the earth. It will be necessary for he and I, alone in that silent place, to cast your nativity before the hour arrives. Put the day and minute of your birth on this piece of paper, and leave the rest to me.'

''You don't mean to say,' says Tom, going as he was told and giving him back the paper, 'that I am to wait here long, do you? It's a precious dismal place.'

''Hush!' says the old gentleman, 'it's hallowed ground. Farewell!'

'Stop a minute,' says Tom, 'what a hurry you're in. What's in that large bottle yonder?'

''It's a child with three heads,' says the old gentleman; 'and everything else in proportion.'

(To be continued.)

History of Sewing Machines.

There are two great classes of inventions those of one being the bold conception of a single mind, while those of the other are the product of a long series of suggestions by different intellects. The Sewing Machine belongs to the latter class. A few years ago, nothing could have appeared more impossible than to sew by machinery, and it has been most truthfully said, that the invention of the Sewing Machine marks one of the most important eras in the history of the world, and indeed, when considered in the light of the influence it has upon the social well-being of the masses, it would be difficult to conceive of an invention of more importance. Although for more than twenty years past, the best inventive talent of the age has been constantly devoted to the subject, and many important improvements have been made, the history of invention, as it relates to Sewing Machines, is properly divided by but seven principal epochs. The first is the creation of Howe, made in 1846, which consisted in the combination in one Machine, of an eye pointed needle and shuttle, and was the foundation of all Sewing Machines. The next is that of Bachelder in 1849, which, after Howe's, is the most important. Notwithstanding that Howe made the combination of a needle and shuttle, his original machine was so defective in other respects as to be of but little practical utility, although it has since been improved. Bachelder's invention consisted in the use of a bed piece or table, so arranged as to support the cloth in a level or horizontal position; a perpendicular acting needle; a pressure pad or spring bearing on the upper side of the cloth and a continuous discharging feed, or mechanism which operated continuously to feed the cloth along one stitch at a time, so as to sew curved or straight seams of any required length without being obliged to remove the cloth from the machine. When the fact is taken into consideration, that prior to Bachelder's invention, the cloth in all Sewing Machines had to be attached or basted to a plate or bar, and suspended in a perpendicular position on the side of the main bar, the needle being so arranged as to work horizontally or sideways and that the cloth could be fed along only the plate to which it was attached without cutting the thread and taking it out of the machine, the vast importance of his invention will be understood and appreciated. In fact, Bachelder made the first Sewing Machine proper, according to the modern signification of the term. The next most important improvement is that of Wilson, (of the Wheeler and Wilson Sewing Machine Company,) in 1850, by which the feed mechanism of the earlier machines are so improved as to render them applicable to a greater range of work, and in many respects his invention when taken in connection with these made, may be considered of equal value with any which preceded it. The next was that of Grover & Baker in 1851, who invented, among other valuable improvements, an entirely new stitch, now the distinguished feature of the Grover & Baker machine; the next was that of Singer, also in 1851, who invented the system of tension used to control the needle threads, also many other important improvements, and laid the foundation of the Singer machine. Howe, Bachelder, Wilson, Grover & Baker, and Singer, produced most of the elementary principles. The state of the art of Sewing by machinery, as presented after the invention of Singer, was as follows: The fundamental principles had been discovered, the foundation been laid, and sewing by machinery had become an established fact, but the machines themselves were a mass of intricate and costly mechanism, being altogether too complicated to be understood by persons of ordinary mechanical abilities, whilst the prices at which they were sold placed them entirely beyond the reach of all those who stood most in need of the benefits to be derived from their use.

The sixth improvement is that by Irwin & Co., in 1863, which consists of inventing the most simple machine capable of doing all varieties of work in a substantial manner. This machine is now, perhaps, the most popular medium priced Sewing Machine in use. It is manufactured in Canada.

The next and last of the seven most important improvements in Sewing Machines is now universally acknowledged to be the "Common Sense Family Sewing Machine," which consists in inventing and producing the first and only cheap machine capable of doing the same work of the high priced ones. For three years the best inventive talent in America was brought to bear on this one object, the result being a Sewing Machine, which for novelty, simplicity, reliability, and durability can never be surpassed, if it is ever equalled. The importance of the invention which should first give the world such a machine as the "Common Sense," had long been acknowledged, and hence this improvement is very justly considered of equal importance with any ever made. The introduction of the "Common Sense Family Sewing Machine" dates a new era in the Sewing Machine World.—American Paper.

MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR.

On Thursday afternoon, a young lad son of Mr. Henry, a farmer living on the Lake Shore Road, near Miners station on the Great Western Railway, while passing through the woods south of the railway track discovered the body of a man in an advanced state of decomposition, lying on the ground, in a hollow underneath some trees. The recent rains had left a pool of water a few inches deep on the ground at the spot, and in this water the head lay partially immersed, and the body leaned partially to one side. The feet were outstretched but somewhat higher than the other extremity of the body, while one eye protruded, and the face presented a blood like redness, that gave the appearance of foul play. No marks of violence on the surface of the body, and the inhabitants of the vicinity, supposing that the body was that of some one who had strayed or lost his way, showed but little further interest in the matter. No money was found on the person of deceased—three railway tickets and an account being all of which he appeared to be possessed. The printing on the tickets was almost obliterated; but as far as could be judged by the few remaining letters, were marked "Peterborough." The account was also marked Peterborough, and appears to have been for a pair of boots, probably those on him when found as they were nearly new. The third ticket was more distinct and leads to some definite idea as to the time the body had lain there. It was marked "Oshawa and return,' and was dated Wednesday, the 26th Sept. In appearance the body is that of a man 27 years of age, dressed in a neat suit, and otherwise presenting a respectable appearance. The place where it was found was about 100 ft from a road leading from the station to the lake, and some further distance from the main road which adds one to the many mysteries surrounding the body. An inquest was held by Mr. Fisher, Coroner, yesterday, but as far as we could learn nothing satisfactory could be elicited.—Globe.

Tae Delay of the Canadian Delegates.

The London Times has an article on Lord Carnarvon's speech. Referring to the reasons assigned by his lordship for the continued absence of the delegates, the Times remarks:—

"Lord Carnarvon says that their absence is unintentional, and that they have been delayed by serious events that have occurred in their own country. This is profoundly true. Perhaps, however, his Lordship meant it to be inferred that they were kept at home by the monster Fenian apparition; and for aught we know this may be a reasonable explanation of their conduct. But it is well that the public should know that the equilibrium of the Canadian Cabinet has been affected by other circumstances besides those connected with the insane plottings of Stephens and Mahoney. The brain must be clear to be fit for business, and ardent spirits are not a beverage in which even Canadian statesmen can with prudence indulge to excess. The truth is that the present administration of that great Province has been suffering for want of a prohibitory liquor law. A very grave statement has been made authoritatively in the organ of the Hon. Geo. Brown; it has been repeated in every influential journal in the colony; and to this hour it remains uncontradicted. It is that more than one leading member of the Government is habitually addicted to intemperate habits, and (to give a special and notable example) the chief of one important department was hopelessly befuddled during the late Fenian invasion; the consequence being that official documents of the most pressing character lay for days, of not for weeks, unopened on his table. This is not a mere party scandal. It is a charge which has been openly preferred and has never been met. We sincerely hope that the Canadian delegates will come soon, and that they will appear in a sober frame of mind and body. We make these remarks in no unfriendly spirit towards the Canadians. The truth is, that the retention of such men in power is one of the anomalies incident to the union of Upper and Lower Canada, by which the growth of wealth, of education, and of population in one Province, is neutralized by the absolute equality of representation in the other. Confederation is as essential to the regeneration of Canada as it is to the political life and the material development of the whole country; and the only way to get rid of adventurers and topers—men who, when a crisis arrives, are found maundering over a brandy bottle—is to consolidate the now disunited colonies of B N America into one State, and to elevate their people into the dignity of a nation."

TURNED GREEN!

There are few residents of Cobourg to whom Mr. D. C. Feely is unknown, and there are no doubt, many, who while he was here, had an opportunity of hearing him give expression to most loyal sentiments—with a mental reservation, it may be. Some months ago he became a resident of Rochester, and whether his real sentiments have changed we know not, but we hear of him now in this wise:

FENIAN MEETING.—The gathering in Corinthian Hall last evening, numbered five or six hundred persons, and was very enthusiastic in behalf of the Irish cause.—Owing to the non-arrival of Senator Morrison, the time until half-past 9 o'clock was occupied with speeches from Senator J. C. O'Brien, C. C. Davidson, Esq., D. C. Freely, Esq., and Mr. Joseph Sholtz, all of whom made interesting remarks.—Rochester Democrat.

"When you are in Rome, do as the Romans do." When here Dennis was one of the volunteers who went to defend the country against the Fenians, now he is on the other side of the line, he makes interesting speeches to them, and no doubt invests the pay he received from the Canadian Government in Fenian bonds. If there are any of his former acquaintances here who expected anything different from him, they will probably change their minds now.—Cobourg Star.

THE R. C. BISHOPS AND THE FENIANS.—A correspondent of the Montreal Minerve writes that, after the R. C. plenary council in Baltimore broke up, a number of the bishops proceeded to Washington and call it together on President Johnson. The interview was private, but it is believed that amongst other recommendations the bishops requested the President not to mislead the Fenians, and exercise their evil passions by an indulgence out of season. They told him that if he would only let them understand positively that no invasion of Canada will be tolerated or connived at, the brotherhood will soon collapse, and that, in return, the Catholic party will do all in their power to sustain the Presidential policy.—Leader.

ARITHMETICAL FEATS.—The Cobourg Sun says:—Mr E. Rothwell, of Hope, can give the square of any number consisting of 4 places mentally and numbers of 6, 8 or 10 places by being followed to write two or three figures of the produce as found.

He can take any number of 9's from six upwards and placing any six digits to the right, write down the square without going through the ordinary process of multiplication.

He also took 847544 and gave as its square 718027441764, writing four figures of the product at once.

We believe that Mr. R. intends giving exhibitions in the different towns and cities, and as an example of mental power we think it well worth seeing and examining.

THE BANK OF UPPER CANADA.—The Trade Review says:" We are informed that, as soon as the Bank of Upper Canada stopped payment, Mr. Thomas Galt, as agent for Messrs. Gzowski, Mills & Co., registered a mortgage in every county of Upper Canada against the lands of the Bank. To arrange with these gentlemen in reference to this mortgage, and the affairs of the Bank generally, is the reason of Mr. Cassels and Mr. Street's going to England. Mr. Cassels said to be sanguine that there will be a dividend of at least 25 cents in the $1 on the stock, after paying off all liabilities. We shall soon see.

NEARLY A FATAL ACCIDENT.—William Hartley, son of Mr. Charles Hartley, met with a serious accident on Monday morning, while in the saw mill of Wm. Cottingham, Esq., the men were hauling up some logs from the pond with the Bull Wheel, when Hartley was caught with the chain and his arm and side severely bruised the mill was stopped in time to save his life.—Victoria Warder.

Since the abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty the quantity of flour and grain offering for the lower provinces has been so great that an extra steamer lately put on, proves insufficient to serve the trade.

At the Woodstock Assizes a Mrs. Wright obtained a verdict against a Mr. Skinner for $2,000 for breach of promise. Mrs. Wright was right this time.

FENIAN TRIALS.

Lumsden, the Episcopal clergyman, was tried on Saturday. The trial caused a great deal of excitement from the fact of his being a clergyman and a citizen of the United States, and also, until very lately, had charge of a very influential congregation in New York State. Unfortunately for the man he has become addicted to strong drink, and it has gained the mastery over him.—He has been forced to give up the Ministry because of it, and from the evidence, has taken to taverns and grog shops instead of preaching. He is said to be a tall handsome man and well educated. He appeared to engage in prayer on taking his place in the court: his wife was present during the trial, and is mentioned as an accomplished lady. She appeared deeply affected during the proceedings, but her features were now and then lighted by the hopes of her husband getting acquitted. Several clergymen of the Episcopal Church of both Canada and the United States, were present.

The evidence of the witnesses as a whole, went to show that the prisoner had been in Canada the day previous to the Fenian raid, his resort being to taverns and Billiard-rooms; that he was apparently under the influence of liquor nearly all the time, and that his expressions were not always favorable to the Fenians. He sometimes urged the people to rise and drive the Feniane off, saying that even the women would fight. Sometimes, however, he appeared to be on friendly terms with the Fenians, and to discourse with them as one having some influence, although not so much as Father McMahon. He represented that he came over to attend to the spiritual wants of the wounded; and when asked how he could do that, they being almost, if not all Catholics, he replied by approaching them as a Catholic priest.

It would appear too that the prisoner was not very careful to escape, as he had time and opportunity to escape, and did not embrace them. The whole evidently proving the opinion that he was under the influence of intoxicating liquors of some sort. He is also represented as endeavoring to favour the Canadians who had property taken from them by the raiders, although his manner of carrying out his favor may appear very eccentric. It is also shown, in evidence that his remarks in Buffalo immediately before the raid did not favor Fenianism, but on the contrary, were opposed to it. All the circumstances combined tended to satisfy the jury that he was not there as a Fenian, but as a poor soul—carried away with the excitement of strong drink and the movement of the rabble around him.

The Jury evidently took this view of his case and acquitted him. Had it been shown that he came over with them, and aided them in any way, or that he joined them after they came over, and his counsel or advice in spiritual matters encouraged them in their deeds of rapine and murder, he would have deserved a different sentence; as it was, a different verdict could not have been given. It is to be hoped, however, that this little episode in his wild career may prove of salutary effect, and be the means of bringing him to his right mind, let us hope of causing him to become a sober man, and thus regain the position he has lost through strong drink.

Lumsden is said to be a Scotchman by birth, and to have been a very worthy and influential minister until he gave himself up to strong drink.

FENIAN VAPOR.

Roberts and some others are continuing their silly threats of invading Canada if the condemned Fenians be hung, and sometimes they go so far as to say hang or no hang Canada must suffer. What silly nonsense. Talk is cheap and hence the reason we hear of so many great speeches. But they have no money. Their object is to induce the deluded creatures who sympathize with them to send in some of the needful. Without this they can do but little, and with it they can live at ease. We need hardly fear any trouble this season; the Canadian winter is too cold for naked rowdies to live long in. They must get clothing before they venture across the border, and thus they will not be able to obtain unless by honest industry. Canadians can afford to read their bosh and rest in peace for the winter at least, unless very near the lines. The Government will, we trust, in the meantime, keep a few volunteers ready for any plundering expedition that needy Fenians might attempt.

The Leader says that the Commercial, Royal Canadian, Ontario and British North American Banks, have completed arrangements with the Bank of Montreal to hold a portion of their Reserve in Legal Tenders; and that two other institutions are also negotiating in reference to the same subject.

Suicide.

Mr. Samuel Duff, of the Township of Smith, committed suicide on Monday night last, by cutting his throat with a knife. He had, our informant says, been under the influence of whiskey in the evening of Monday, and on his way home from Lakefield called at a house on the way side. The kind people offered him tea and desired to put him to bed, but, we understand, that he refused. They then placed him on a lounge and covered him comfortably. In the morning he was not there, but, on their going to the door, they found him lying dead with his throat cut and the knife in his hand. There were 17 cuts in his throat. What a sad end? and what a warning to others? Deceased always appeared to be a civil inoffensive man. He was considerably advanced in life. He leaves a large and respectable family. It is thought that he felt over keenly the position in which he was through drink, and in consequence committed the rash deed.

The Late Col. Wigmore.

It becomes our painful duty to chronicle the decease of one of the old settlers of the Township of Dummer, Robert Wigmore, Esq. Mr. Wigore settled in Dummer in 1831, and consequently saw the County in its rough as well as in its more improved state. During the early part of his days he took a very active part in Militia matters, and was until the time of his decease Lieut. Col. of the 3rd battalion of the Sedentary Militia of this County and also Capt. of the Norwood Volunteer Company, which he lately raised and organized. He was highly respected by all classes of the community among which he resided. His remains were followed to their last resting place by a large concourse of acquaintances, and were interred with military honors, on the 5th instant.

Correction.

In publishing the names of those who obtained prizes at the late examination in Monaghan, we omitted the names of the successful ones in reading in the 4th class, and gave those in spelling instead. The following is the true order:—

Reading—Maggie Walten, 1st; Maggie Laing, 2nd; Elizabeth Wilson, 3rd.

Spelling—Jas. Thompson, 1st; Elizabeth Wilson, 2nd; Maggie Laing, 3rd.

Hair Dressing.

We have much pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Mr. R. Brown, announcing that he has opened a first class Hair Dressing Saloon in Peterboro. We notice in the Dundas Banner that he was presented with a complimentary address on his leaving that town, signed by the Mayor and a number of other citizens, and at the same time they invited him to return to Dundas again if he should not prosper where he was going.

New Grocery.

We invite the attention of our readers to the new Grocery Store of Mr. W. Donnelly, George Street. Mr. Donnelly has a new stock complete, and promises to sell good goods cheap. Give him a call. See advertisement.

Confectionery.

We invite the attention of our readers generally, and country store-keepers in particular, to the advertisement of D. Lemay, which will be found in another column.

Board of Trustees.

There was no meeting of the Board on Tuesday for want of a quorum. Members present—Col. Haultain and Messrs. Coulter, Cluxton, Gilmour, Cameron and Stevenson. Absent—Messrs. Lundy, Dumble, Helm and Drs. Poole, McLean and Burnham.

The Court of Assize.

This Court is now in session, and from the time taken up with the few cases that have come off, we may safely conclude that it will occupy the whole week.

The Band of Hope, in connection with Friendship Temple, No. 146, held their second Social Tea, Thursday the 1st inst. Although the evening was stormy the Hall was well filled, and those who on the storm kept away lost quite a treat. Mr. Robertson presided, and Mr. Crawford engaged in prayer. The evening was a very pleasant one indeed. Miss Parnell presided at the Harmonium on the occasion. There were also several recitations by members of the Temple.—Parents and others present expressed their appreciation of Mr. Roberts on and Miss Parnell's labors by a vote of thanks, and many were the wishes expressed that they would favor them with another entertainment ere long.—[Com.

We would call the attention of Farmers and others to the communication of Colonel Haultain, M.P.P., in another column. The views set forth therein deserve the consideration of many Farmers, and of a great many besides farmers, as there is another class of citizens that forget the uncertainty of their income, and live as if it was sure to be regular, independent of sickness or other fluctuations of business. It would be well, therefore, if the labouring class and mechanics would remember the principle of laying by a little against a day of trouble, and a very safe place to lay by in is the Bank.

Mr. Bright has visited Dublin where a grand banquet was given him which was a great success. Mr. Bright made a speech urging the application of proper remedies for the removal of Irish grievances.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL.

The Council of the Village of Ashburnham met on Monday evening, 5th inst.

Present—The Reeve, and Messrs. Clarke and Ludgate.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

On motion of Mr. Clark, seconded by Mr. Ludgate, several accounts and claims, amounting to $117.62, were ordered to be paid.

On motion of Mr. Ludgate, seconded by Mr. Clark, the Reeve was directed to have a constable appointed who would act as village constable. The Reeve to make such arrangements as he thought proper in the matter.

Captain J. Z. Rogers, having applied for aid towards erecting a Drill Shed in the village, it was understood that if the shed should be built on public property the Council would grant about $150, if on private property, not so much—amount not named.

Annual Election of the Officers of Protection Fire Company, No. 1.

On Tuesday evening the annual election of the Fire Company came off, when the following officers were chosen:—

Captain, J. O'Donnell.
1st Lieutenant, John Robertson.
2nd Lieutenant, John Kincaid.
Secretary, Richard Hall.
Treasurer, John J. Lundy.
1st Branchman, C. Robinson.
2nd Branchman, Geo. Stevenson.
3rd Branchman, Alex. Erskine.
Axemen, A. Comstock and A. Gillespie.
Captain of Hose, John Gibbs.
Lieutenant of Hose, Geo. Mitchell.
Engineer, James Eggish.

After the election of officers the Company treated their officers and friends to a sumptuous lunch in the Firemen's Hall. Capt. J. O'Donnell presided, and on his right were Mr. D. McNaughton, ex captain, Captain J. Z. Rogers and H. Lawson, Esq.; on his left, The Mayor, Jas. Edwards, Esq. and Dr. Kincaid. The Vice chairs were occupied by Lieutenants Kincaid and Robertson.

When lunch was over Capt. O'Donnell, on behalf of the Company, presented Mr. D. McNaughton with a beautiful and costly gold chain and locket, as a mark of their esteem for him as late Captain, and as a token of appreciation of his labours in connection with the Company.

The locket bears the following inscription.

PRESENTED TO
CAPTAIN D. McNAUGHTON
BY
The Officers and Men of Protection Fire Company.
Peterboro, C. W., Nov. 6th, 1866.

Captain O'Donnell also read the following address:—

To Captain McNaughton.

SIR,—The members of Protection Fire Company, No. 1, of Peterboro being desirous of expressing in some tangible manner their appreciation of your services as presiding officer and commander for the last four years; also their high esteem for you as a citizen and gentleman, beg leave to present you with this watch chain and locket.

By this slight token you will see the company are not unmindful of your valuable assistance in its organization, your diligence in promoting its interests, and your care and attention to the wants of the members, to which is justly attributed its efficiency at the present time.

When it is taken into consideration the trouble of organization four years ago, and the very little assistance or encouragement given by the public generally, they may well congratulate you on the result of your labours.

The members regret your departion from amongst us as well as your retirement from the position you have filled so long—equally for the benefit of the Town and the welfare of the company. They, however, hope that your removal will be beneficial to yourself and useful to the citizens of the Town of your adoption.

I have the honour to remain on behalf of the members,

J. O'DONNELL,
Captain elect.

To which Mr. McMaughton replied:

To Captain J. O'Donnell,

And Brother Firemen, (a title by which I hope you will always allow me to call you,) I can assure you that I cannot find words to express my gratitude for this mark of your approbation. In attempting to perform my duty whilst connected with you as a fireman and an officer, I have satisfied you, I am sufficiently rewarded; but you have in the kindness and esteem shown to me by this magnificent gift so overwhelmed me with praise that I feel I can never repay you. I accept, Mr. O'Donnell, with feelings of the deepest gratitude, the beautiful and valuable testimonial with which, on behalf of the Protection Fire Company, you have just done me the honor to present me. It affords me no ordinary pleasure to be assured that this presentation is the result of personal esteem felt for me by you. That you have deemed me worthy of such an expression of approbation is a remembrance which, through all the possible changes and vicissitudes of my future life, I shall unceasingly cherish.

I cannot conclude, brother firemen, without expressing my sincere approval of the orderly deportment which at all times you have exhibited, and I trust that the same courtesy and attention which my instructions have uniformly received at your hands will be extended in a like degree to my successor.

D. McNAUGHTON.

Then came the toasts.

"The Queen."

Song—God save the Queen, by Sergt. W. Johnston.

"Prince and Princess of Wales."

Song — Red, White and Blue, by Mr. Mitchel.

"Health of the Governor General of Canada."

An Irish song by Sergt. Johnston.

"The Army, Navy and Volunteers."

Responded to by Capt. J. Z. Rogers, of Ashburnham Infantry Company.

The Vice chair gave the next toast, "The Mayor and Corporation of the Town of Peterborough."

The Mayor responded in one of his usual pleasant and eloquent speeches.

Mr. Edwards being called on desired leave sit down until members of the council be heard.

Councillor Doherty thanked the Firemen for their kindness in inviting him to be present, and joined heartily in the honors done to Captain McNaughton.

Councillor Hamilton also thanked them for the manner the toast had been received remarking that the boy-council had managed the affairs of the Town in an economical and just way and he hoped to the general satisfaction.

Mr. Edwards also responded, praising the present Council for good intentions, business capacity and economy generally.

The Vice chair next gave "The Health of the Guests."

H. Lawson, Esq., responded, referring to the part he had taken to get the Firemen's Hall erected, even when almost alone in the old Council, now he was glad to be present with them in the Hall, and thanked them for the invitation and the toast.

P. Pearce, Esq., next responded in a humorous speech, referring to the energy and activity required to keep up a fire brigade, and the necessity to aid the Firemen in their onerous duties. He also thought the Council should make a liberal offering to Capt. McNaughton.

Dr. Kincaid felt the great pleasure of being present, as he always felt happy in being with the Firemen, and hoped that the token of respect offered to Captain McNaughton may yet be repaid by the Captain, who he hoped would make a fortune where he was going and would then offer the Town something. The Firemen were noble fellows, second to none in any town in America, and deserved praise for their noble and generous conduct.

J. J. Lundy, Esq., proposed "The Corporation of Ashburnham," who had kindly presented the Firemen with something tangible for every visit made to the village to aid in extinguishing the devouring elements.

Capt. Rogers responded.

"The Press and Ladies" came in for a share of the Firemen's attention.

Capt. Rogers and J. J. Lundy returned thanks on behalf of the Ladies.

Mr. Edwards also remarked, the young men should not be slow to respond to this toast as no man would be anything without the Ladies. He hoped, therefore, that every one of those present would see that it was not good for man to be alone, and that each young man would try and find a helpmate.

After remembering "Our Host," "Capt. O'Donnell" and some other things the company broke up after spending one of those pleasant evenings spent only with the Firemen.

PETERBOROUGH ASSIZES.

This Court opened on Tuesday. His Honor Judge Morrison, presiding. Besides the Lawyers of the County, there were several eminent gentlemen from Toronto, etc.

The following is the list of Grand Jurors: P. M. Grover, Esq., Foreman; I. Garbutt, W. Armstrong, Wm. Burgess, J. Stevenson, Jas. Cameron, R. D. Ewing, Wm. Eastland, Geo. Fitzgerald, J. W. Gilmour, W. Hall, Wm. Martin, J. Ormond, Wm. Ogilvy, Jos. Reid, Andrew Tully, John Walten, Robert Brown, Angus Williams, Esqrs.

The Judge, in addressing the Grand Jury, remarked that the criminal calendar was small; there being but three cases on it; one charged with the murder of an infant, another for the crime of arson, and one for assault. The learned Judge referred at some length to the crime of murder and the circumstances under which it might take place, showing that to constitute murder there must be the proof of malicious intentions. He also remarked that arson was a very heinous crime in the eyes of the law, and under aggravated circumstances was a felony of the worst kind, remarking also that drunkenness was no palliation of the offence. The third case would not come before the Grand Jury as it had been before the last.

The first case was that of Moore vs. Swinton. This was a case of seduction, in which the plaintiff, Mrs. Moore, brought a suit for loss of wages, and expenses during the time of the pregnancy of her daughter by said Swinton, and also during the time of her confinement. There was no defence to this case, hence the Judge charged the Jury to bring in a verdict of damages as in their judgment they might think proper; he at the same time remarking that the Jury could bring in heavy damages, as the girl was the daughter of a widow, and was seduced under promises of marriage. S. Smith for plaintiff. The Jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, $100.

The second case was Broad vs. Grant. An action brought to recover damages for timber cut on plaintiff's farm by defendant Grant, who had it rented. Verdict for plaintiff, $150. Weller for plaintiff; Fairburn for defendant.

Bank of Toronto vs. McNaughton. An action to recover amount of promissory note. Verdict for plaintiff, $412.69. Weller for plaintiff; no defence.

Bank of Toronto vs. Perry, et al. Same as previous case. Verdict for plaintiff, $634.58. Weller for plaintiff; no defence.

The Queen vs. H. J. Insworth, arson.—This was a case that took place in Ashburnham in September last, when the prisoner, Insworth was charged with setting fire to the dwelling house of Mrs. Gregor McGregor. This was proved to the satisfaction of the Jury and they brought in a verdict of guilty.

The Judge asked the prisoner had he any cause why sentence of court should not be passed. He said he had not. The Judge then said that he held in his hand a paper from the Warden of the penitentiary of his only having left that institution in August last. The prisoner denied ever being there. The Judge remarked his appearance, name and trade too clearly, proved him to be the man. Prisoner still denied ever being there and called God to witness that he never had been there. The Judge then said that he would not then pass sentence, but would give him time to try to prove he was not the man meant in the Warden's certificate. The prisoner was then removed and the Court adjourned till nine o'clock on Wednesday morning.

WEDNESDAY.

Stabler vs. Leinster. This was a case to try the right to a piece of land fenced in by Leinster but claimed by Stabler. It would appear that the moving of the fence because of surveys was the cause of the land being in dispute, and hence the cause of this action. It occupied almost the whole of Wednesday. Verdict for plaintiff, $25. Smith and H. Cameron for plaintiff; Weller and Patterson for defendant.

The Grand Jury brought in true bills against James Golborne, Thomas Giles and Henry Giles, for obstructing highway.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—Will you allow me, through your columns to call attention to the Savings Bank lately established here in connection with the Ontario Bank.

I am fully persuaded that such institutions are calculated to be of great benefit to any community, and especially to one composed so largely of men whose means come to them at uncertain times, and in uncertain amounts. I have before this, urged upon the government to establish Post Office Savings Banks, as in Britain, but owing to the expected political changes, there has been an unwillingness for some time past, to inaugurate anything new.

The Credit system may have been of service in earlier times, but certainly in the older settled districts, such a system is now not only unnecessary but highly detrimental. It is destructive to habits of prudence and self-denial. It induces extravagance and oftentimes needless expenditure, and instead of living upon actual receipts, too many are dependent upon proceeds as uncertain as the weather.

Let the farmers of the country get into the habit of living each year upon the receipts of the past, and systematically deposit their receipts at the counter of the Savings Bank, and we should have a sensible diminution in the number of real estate encumbrances.

I would earnestly recommend these few remarks to their intelligent attention.

Yours,
FRED. W. HAULTAIN.

Peterboro', 3rd Nov., 1866.

CANDIA.—Contradictory reports reach us from time to time from Candia. At one time we hear of the Turks being defeated and again of the Candians. Last report says that the Turks claim great victories of the Christians in Candia. In a hard fought battle near Oresa the Cretans lost 700 men, the Turkish loss was also very heavy.—Three thousand Cretans who had sought a hiding place in a cave were drowned by the tide rising and submerging them. The Turks are said to be regaining their authority.

The Shooting Match.

A shooting match for sundry prizes, open to all the Peterboro', Ashburnham and Lakefield Volunteers, came off at the range of the Peterboro' Rifles on Monday last. The following were the prizes for competition on the occasion:—

1st.—A gold medal, presented by Canadians from Peterborough, resident in New York.
2nd.—A revolver, presented by W. H. Scott, Esq., M. P. for Peterboro'.
3rd.—A silver cake basket; value $10.
4th.—A mahogany writing desk; value $8.
5th.—A silver butter cooler; value $6.
6th.—A silver cup, presented by Mr. J. R. Ormond, Jeweller; value $5.
7th.—A gold breast pin; value $4.
8th.—A meerchaum pipe; value $3.
9th.—A powder flask and shot bag, presented by Capt. J. Z. Rogers; value $2.
10th.—An Album; $1.50.

The ranges were at two, three or four hundred yards, four shots at each,—the pull of the trigger to be not less than six pounds. Hits and points were counted as follows:—Bull's eye 4, centre 3, outer 2. Forty-six competitors were present, of coarse in uniform, and firing was conducted in regular and systematic order. The following were the successful competitors, with the total score made at the several ranges:—

No. 1 Infantry Company—Capt. Kennedy

Names	200 yards	300 yds	400 yds	Total	Prize
Ensign Kennedy	9	4	11	24	7th
Private W. Stevens	13	4	13	30	1st
" W. Scollie	13	8	8	29	2d
" J. Alexander	10	10	5	25	5th

No. 2 Infantry Coy—Capt. Smith.

Lieut. Green	10	10	8	28	3rd
Corporal Hutton	9	6	12	27	4th
Sergeant Stoddard	10	4	9	23	8th
Private Wright	8	5	10	23	9th

Lakefield Infantry Coy—Capt. Leigh.

Private Gordon	14	4	6	24	6th

Peterboro Rifles—Capt. Poole.

Corporal English	8	9	5	22	10th

During the match the following ties occurred, rendering an additional shot necessary, which were decided as follows: Ensign Kennedy 6, Private Gordon 2, Sergt. E. Green 0, Private John Staples 2, private T. Rutherford 0, Corporal English 3.

Of the next best scores to those wining prizes, we mention the following, omitting all below 12, or one point for each shot fired:—Sergeant Bell made 12 points, J. Madden 13, J. Patterson 14, J. Fox 14, Corporal Bell and Private Anderson 15 each. Lieut. Kennedy 16, Sergeant John Green, corporal McIntyre and R. Pandish each made 17: Sergeant Kennedy 18, Buglar E. Green, Sergeant McComb and Corporal Irwin each made 20 points; while Captain Kennedy, Captain Poole, Corporal Armstrong and G. H. May each scored 21—this, as will be seen above, being the next below the number of points made by the winner of the 10th prize.

Lieut. Col. Patterson, Brigade Major, was present throughout the day, and delivered the prizes to the successful competitors, making some very appropriate remarks.—The day was fine, though cold, and everything passed off agreeably, shooting having commenced at 11 o'clock and ended about 4 p. m.

Maryland in Trouble.

Lately there has been some trouble between the State authorities of Maryland and the commissioners. The Governor dismissed the old ones and appointed new ones.—For a time there was every appearance of a conflict between the people and the Governor; in the meantime an appeal to arms was expected. The Governor, however, remained firm, and the consequence is, that the people are about to cave in without martial law. The effects of the civil war are not yet over, nor is it likely to be for some time. The South and their sympathisers are not likely to give way easily to every opposing force. If the State vessel be not well and wisely steered another conflict may ensue. How much wiser if the American people would turn their attention to bringing about an agreeable union of their own contending parties than trying, as they are, to injure peaceable neighbors.

The following is our latest news in reference to the state of things in Maryland:—

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Much solicitude prevails here concerning the trouble in Baltimore. It is reported that troops were sent to that neighborhood to be ready in case of any emergency. If there is any hostile demonstration by the citizens the United States authorities will interfere and declare the city under martial law.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—There now seems strong probability that the United States Circuit Court will be held on the fourth Monday this month in Richmond.

The Republican union meeting this afternoon was one of the most excited and turbulent political gatherings ever held in this city. Gen. Butler attempted to speak, and after vainly endeavoring to make himself heard above the yells and hisses of the crowd, was compelled to leave the front of the stand amid the jeers and cheers of the audience. Horace Greeley followed. During his remarks he was frequently cheered.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 3.—At half-past one o'clock a few regular police appeared in the vestibule of the Court House, and commenced ejecting the sheriff's posse, who were crowding up the stairway from the south entrance to the sheriff's office above. A scuffle ensued and there was considerable confusion and much threatening language. Presently the new commissioners were seen approaching the north entrance of the building. They had scarcely entered when Marshal Carmichael appeared at the head of a large body of police, and in a few minutes cleared the Sheriff's men out of the building. No one was seriously injured.

LATER.

Messrs. Valiant and Young have been arrested and committed to jail, having refused to give the required bail.

It is not true that Gen Canby intends declaring martial law. It is thought that Valiant and Young will be liberated on a writ of habeas corpus, which will bring the whole question before the courts. Sheriff Thompson was committed to jail for contempt of court in default of $25,000 bail for having disregarded the order of the judge forbidding him to swear in his posse to aid and support the claims of Messrs. Valiant and Young. Some excitement and riotous demonstrations occurred in the neighborhood of the newspaper offices, but the police ended the matter by arresting the parties. It is believed the affair will now pass off without any serious breach of the peace.

At six, p.m. the city is perfectly quiet. The excitement has greatly subsided, and good order prevails. There is no ground for apprehending trouble.

It is said that priest McMahon will apply for a new trial.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all Medicine Dealers, at 25 cts per box.

ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES.—It cannot be denied that things have looked rather squally lately, though we believe that England intends to remain perfectly neutral in the matter; should war, however, break out between them, we hope for humanity sake that the armies will be well supplied with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," the best thing in the world for sudden colds, rheumatism, neuralgia, burns, &c.—25 cents per Bottle. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

SOMEBODY SAYS

"There is something peculiarly attractive in a horse. His intelligent eye and ear, his lofty carriage, his free and graceful motion, his vast strength, his obedient temper, and his docile, enable use, all endear him to us. We love to look at his fine proportions, and take in the inspiration of his energy and power," but it is only when the horse is properly cared for—when he is free from disease or unsoundness of any kind that he will exhibit these points of attraction, and without which he is of but little value. A package of "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," should be in possession of every man who owns a horse, to be used in case of emergency. Don't fail to get it.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

The Great English Remedy.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition, but a safe and safe remedy for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever, and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N B $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

PROSPECTUS

'MONTREAL WITNESS'

FOR 1867.

Daily Witness ....$3 per an.
Montreal Witness (Semi-weekly) ....$2 per an.
Weekly Witness..... ....$1 per an.
Canadian Messenger..... .....25c per an.

All strictly in advance, and the papers stop unless subscription be renewed.

On the 31st December, 1866, the Montreal Witness will have completed its twenty-first year, a period sufficient to render its character and objects generally known.

The Witness is devoted to the best interests of the people of Canada, temporal and eternal. It fearlessly grapples with oppression, infidelity, intemperance, Sabbath-breaking, and public evils of every kind. It is connected with no party or denomination, and consequently has no support except from the public, on whom alone it relies. Its correspondents are probably the cheapest papers on this Continent; and, though the circulation they have obtained is large, we think it might be, and hope it will be, much larger throughout the Province. To this end we rely on the kind aid of the friends of evangelical religion and wholesome literature everywhere, who, we hope, will help us in the future, as many of them have done in the past.

Canada is passing through a crisis in its history; the United States are still convulsed with the struggle for justice and equal rights; the map of Europe is undergoing great changes; Italy is claiming Rome, and Russia again menaces Turkey;—in a word, the times are full of interest, and the Witness gives special attention to the news of the day. It has also an agricultural department for Commercial Intelligence and Prices Current, &c., &c., upon which great care is bestowed.

The Messenger is devoted exclusively to Temperance, Education, Agriculture, Science, Art, &c., and consequently goes free through the Post-office.

Any Minister, Post-master, or School-teacher sending for eight subscribers to any edition, will be entitled to a gratis copy. For a mixed club, amounting to eight dollars, a copy of the Weekly or four copies of the Messenger will be sent gratis.

Subscriptions may commence at any time; and as the best season of the year for obtaining new subscribers is probably just after harvest, we hope ere long to have many lists sent in.

All orders, advertisements, and communications to be addressed (post-paid) to

JOHN DOUGALL & SON, Montreal.

☞ To all newspapers publishing the above prospectus for a few times we will send the Daily Witness free for one year.

Marked papers containing the prospectus should be addressed to the Publishing Clerk, Witness Office, Montreal, C. E.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is once arrested, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and every thing to lose by delay. What is a mere pimple or blemish on the breast, neck, cheek or cheek bone, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

Should Every Man be a Soldier

We have always leant to the peace principles of the Quakers, or rather of the Christian religion, and believe that the world will come to them at the Millennium, if not sooner; but, really it appears as if they were at a great discount just now. The report recently came from the usually well informed Parisian correspondent of the New York Times that Louis Napoleon could only keep France quiet concerning the Rhine boundary by an understanding that he is to make a demand for it after the World's Exhibition next spring, by which time his army will be all armed with improved breech-loading rifles, and when, if Prussia does not yield to the claim of France, there will be a terrible war on a gigantic scale. To meet this expected exigency, Prussia is quietly adding enough to her army to bring it up to 800,000 effective men, and Bismarck is making efforts to satisfy and unite all classes of the German people. Of course the recent additions of territory to Prussia will give her much more material than she had before; and as her system is to make every man a soldier, she can probably rely on the tenth part of her population in an emergency.—The population, under is control, reckoned at near thirty millions, which would give three millions of fighting men. In France only a percentage of the young men are called out by the conscription; and, consequently, though her population is thirty-six millions, she might not have so large a disposable army, at all events at first. At present, however, the subject to which we wish to direct attention, and which is forcing itself on Britain and other countries, is the true policy of States with regard to military matters, and whether or not the Prussian plan should be adopted. That plan, as we understand it is, that every young man when he attains the age of twenty, if not prevented by physical incapacity, enters the army for nominally three years, but in ordinary times really only for six months. He, in that time, learns to be a thorough soldier, and he ever after knows his officers, his regiment, and his company, and can at any moment take his place in it. In order to keep up the knowledge obtained in these six months' training, he turns out for a number of days annually, and, consequently, is always ready for action. A system of this kind has very great advantages 1st. It makes a country exceedingly strong; and, 2nd, prevents the possibility of any great tyranny on the part of the Government. It has, probably, another advantage also not less important. It makes all the youth of a country comrades in arms and accustoms them to healthy, vigorous, out-door exercise.

Prussia is the most remarkable country in the world for attention to education, but the time may come when even the Prussian system may be improved on. Were all children sent from 2 to 5 to cheerful, healthy infant-schools, applied with handsome pictures, fine gardens, and every convenience for childish sports; and thereafter passed through primary schools, common schools, and grammar schools,—having plenty of play at all,—they would be ready to go to trades at twelve to fourteen, with strong healthy bodies, cultivated moral natures, and intelligent minds. While such as were intended for professions could go to college, and there learn not only all ordinary branches, give special attention to such special courses as were necessary for their future profession, but military exercises also. This course, taking it very leisurely,—for forcing its destructive of both mind and body,—would be well through by twenty, when the youths would all enter the army for six months, in order to become trained soldiers, and then after that go to their profession for which they had been prepared.—Montreal Witness.

ITALIAN MARRIAGE BROKERS.—In Genoa there are regular marriage brokers, who have pocket-books filled with the names of the marriageable girls of the different classes, with notes of their figures, personal attractions, fortunes, and other circumstances. These brokers go about endeavoring to arrange connections in the same off-hand, mercantile manner which they would bring to bear upon a merchadise; and when they succeeded, they get a commission of two or three per cent. upon the portion, with such extras or bonuses as may be voluntarily bestowed by the party. Marriage at Genoa is thus oftentimes simply a matter of business calculations, generally settled by the parents or relations, who often draw up the contract before the parties have seen one another; and it is only when everything else is arranged, and a few days previous to the marriage ceremony, that the future husband is introduced to his intended partner for life. Should he find fault with her manners or appearance, he may annul the contract, on condition of defraying the brokerage, and any other expenses incurred.

NOT DEEP ENOUGH FOR PRAYER.—A good story was told us a day or two ago of two raftsmen whose raft caught on a rock in a rapids somewhere up the Ottawa. In an instant it was pitching and writhing as if suddenly dropped into Charybdis, while the waves broke over her with a tremendous uproar, and expecting instant death, one of the raftsmen dropped on his knees and commenced praying with a vim equal to the emergency. Happening to open his eyes a moment he observed his companion, a Hibernian, not engaged in prayer, but pushing a pole in the water at the side of the raft. "Vat's dat you do Micheal?" asik he, "sy not pray! we soon be lost." "Be aisy," said the other, as he coolly continued to punch with his pole "be aisy now, what's the use of prayin' when a fellow can tech bottom with a pole!" Mike is a pretty good specimen of a large class of Christians, who prefer to omit prayer so long as they can "tech bottom."

WHAT IT COSTS.—The cost of sending a delegraph despatch to Europe is illustrated in a short story told of an ambitious young man from the country, who, on a recent visit to Boston, was anxious to send a despatch over the Atlantic cable—just for the fun of the thing. Gathering up all his loose change, he entered the Boston office and expressed his wish. Having written his message and handed it in, he laid his cash on the counter, exclaiming, "How far will this money pay for?" Quickly running over the money, the operator replied, "About an inch." The youth departed a sadder and a wiser man.

HEAVE YO!—A country boy, who had read of sailors heaving up anchors, wanted to know if it was sea sickness that made them do it.

It is stated that a man in Indiana obtained a divorce from his wife because she went skating against his wishes. He concluded to "let her slide."

"Pa, I know why the old-fashioned pistol of your'n that grandpa fit with in the old revolution is called a horse pistol." "Why, my son?" "Because it kicks so."

An advertisement of cheap shoes in a country paper has the following nota bene: "N. B. Ladies wishing those cheap shoes will do well to call soon, as they won't last long."

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

"Jes' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said, they were there "every time." If he felt "owly" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"* * * I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"* * * I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"* * * I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. * * * The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

"* * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 364 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT, Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph, or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Poetry.

TIME.

Time—what is it, gently stealing,
Gently moving from the main?
'Tis a ripple in its rising,
Soon to ebb away again.
Time—'tis something ever moving,
Wildly whirling on its way;
Staying never—ever onward,
'Tis the passing of a day.

Time—a river in its flowing,
Downward rushing to the sea;
Till the angel's trumpet sounding,
Tells that time no more shall be,
Lost amid the deep below,
Ye existing but to know it
Is eternity to know.

Time—a fragment, rent and riven,
On the everlasting main;
Fleeing, fleeting, onward driven;
To its continent again.
'Mid the contest of th' Eternal,
This parenthesis it scan,
Into read within its limits
All the history of man.

Time—a season ever ranging;
'Tis a stage a varied play;
Man the actor, ever changing,
Ne'er continues in one stay.
Time the first-born of creation,
First to live and last to die,
'Twixt its first and last pulsation,
Time transacts her mystery.

Time—a treasure rich and costly,
Now entrusted to thy care;
Now to use it, or abuse it—
'Tis a priceless thing and rare.
Shall we not, then, learn to cherish
This provision that is made?
Seasons pass, and moments perish,
And to our account are laid.

Literature.

The Lamplighter's Story.

(From the "Picnic Papers.")

(Concluded.)

'Why don't you throw him away?' says Tom. 'What do you keep such unpleasant things here for?'

'Throw him away!' cries the old gentleman. 'We use him constantly in astrology. He's a charm.'

'I shouldn't have thought it,' says Tom, from his appearance. Must you go. I say?'

'The old gentleman makes him no answer, but climbs up the ladder in a greater bustle than ever. Tom looked after his legs till there was nothing of him left, and then sat down to wait; feeling (so he used to say) as comfortable as if he was going to be made a free-mason, and they were heating the pokers.

"Tom waited so long gentlemen, that he began to think it must be getting on for midnight at least, and felt more dismal and lonely than ever he had done in all his life. He tried every means of whiling away the time, but it never had seemed to move so slow. First, he took a nearer view of the child with three heads, and thought what a comfort it must have been to its parents. Then he looked up a long telescope which was pointed out of the window, but saw nothing particular in consequence of the stopper being at the other end. Then he came to a skeleton in a glass case, labelled "Skeleton of a Gentleman—Prepared by Mr. Mooney,"—which made him hope that Mr. Mooney might not be in the habit o preparing gentlemen that way without their own consent. A hundred times at least he looked into the pot where they were boiling the philosopher's stone down to the proper consistency, and wondered whether it was nearly done. 'When it is,' thinks Tom, 'I'll send out for sixpenn'orth of sprats, and turn 'em into gold fish for a first experiment. Besides which, he made up his mind, gentleman, to have a country house and a park; and to plant a bit of it with a double row of gas lamps a mile long, and go out every night with a French polished mahogany ladder, and two servants in livery behind him, to light 'em for his own pleasure.

"At length and at last, the old gentleman's legs appeared upon the steps leading through the roof, and he came slowly down: bringing along with him the gifted Mooney. This Mooney, gentlemen, was even more scientific in appearance than his friend; and had, as Tom often declared upon his word and honour, the dirtiest face we can possibly know of, in this imperfect state of existence.

Gentlemen, you are all aware that if a scientific man isn't absent in his mind, he's of no good at all. Mr. Mooney was so absent, that when the old gentleman said to him, 'shake hands with Mr. Grig,' he put out his leg. 'Here's a mind, Mr. Grig,' cries the old gentleman in a rapture. 'Here's philosophy! Here's rumination! Don't disturb him,' he says, 'for this is amazing!'

Tom had no wish to disturb him, having nothing particular to say; but he was so uncommonly amazing, that the old gentleman got impatient, and determined to give him an electric shock to bring him to—'for you must know, Mr. Grig,' he says, 'that we always keep a strong charged battery, ready for that purpose.' These means being resorted to, gentlemen, the gifted Mooney revived with a loud roar, and he no sooner came to himself, than both he and the old gentleman looked at Tom with compassion, and shed tears abundantly.

'My dear friend,' says the old gentleman to the Gifted, 'prepare him.'

'I say,' cries Tom, falling back, 'none of that you know. No preparing by Mr. Mooney, if you please.'

'Alas!' replies the old gentleman, 'you don't understand us. My friend informs him of his fate. I can't.

The Gifted mustered up his voice, after many efforts, and informed Tom that his nativity had been carefully cast, and he would expire at exactly thirty-five minutes, twenty-seven seconds, and five-sixths of a second past nine o'clock, a. m., on that day two months.

Gentlemen, I leave you to judge what were Tom's feelings at this announcement, on the eve of matrimony and endless riches. 'I think,' he says in a trembling way, 'there must be a mistake in the working of that sum. Will you do me the favour to cast it up again?'

'There is no mistake,' replies the old gentleman,' 'it is confirmed by Francis Moore, Physician. Here is the prediction for to-morrow two months.' And he showed him the page, where sure enough were these words:—'The decease of a great person may be looked for, about this time.'

'Which,' says the old gentleman, 'is clearly you, Mr. Grig.'

'Too clearly,' cries Tom, sinking into a chair, and giving one hand to the old gentleman, and one to the gifted. 'The orb of day has set on Thomas Grig for ever!'

'At this affecting remark the Gifted shed tears again, and the other two mingled their tears with his, in a kind—if I may use the expression—of Mooney and Co's entire. But the old gentleman recovering first, observed that this was only a reason for hastening the marriage, in order that Tom's distinguished race might be transmitted to posterity; and requesting the Gifted to console Mr. Grig during his temporary absence, he withdrew to settle the preliminaries with his niece immediately.

'And now, gentlemen, a very extraordinary and remarkable occurrence took place; for, as Tom sat in a melancholy way in one chair, and the Gifted sat in a melancholy way in another, a couple of doors were thrown violently open, the two young ladies rushed in, and one knelt down in a loving attitude at Tom's feet, and the other at the Gifted's. So far, perhaps, as Tom was concerned—as he used to say—you will say there was nothing strange in this; but you will be of a different opinion when you understand that Tom's young lady was kneeling to the Gifted, and the Gifted's young lady was kneeling to Tom.

'Hallo!' stop a minute!' cries Tom; 'there's a mistake. I need condoling with by sympathising woman, under my afflicting circumstances; but we're out in the figure. Change partners, Mooney.'

'Monster!' cries Tom's young lady, clinging to the Gifted.

'Miss!' says Tom. Is that your manners?'

'I abjure thee!' cries Tom's young lady, 'I renounce thee. I never will be thine. Thou,' she says to the Gifted, 'art the object of my first and all engrossing passion. Would I had never perceived my love; but, driven to despair, I now shake off the woman and avow it. Oh, cruel, cruel man!' With which reproach she laid her head upon the Gifted's breast, and put her arms about him in the tenderest manner possible, gentlemen.

'And I,' says the other young lady, in a sort of ecstasy, that made Tom sta t,—'I hereby abjure my chosen husband too. Hear me, Gobbin!'—this was to the Gifted—'Hear me! I hold thee in the deepest detestation. The maddening interview of this one night has filled my soul with love—but not for thee. It is for thee, for thee young man,' she cries to Tom. 'As Monk Lewis finely observes, Thomas, Thomas, I am thine, Thomas, Thomas, thou art mine: thine for ever, mine for ever!' With which words, she became very tender likewise.

'Tom and the Gifted, gentlemen, as you may believe, looked at each other in a very awkward manner, and with thoughts not at all complimentary to the two young ladies. As to the Gifted, I have heard Tom say often, that he was certain he was in a fit, and had it inwardly. 'Speak to me! oh, speak to me!' cries Tom's young lady to the Gifted.

'I don't want to speak to anybody,' he says, finding his voice at last, and trying to push her away. 'I think I had better go Pin—I'm frightened,' he says, looking about as if he had lost something.

'Not one look of love!' she cries.—'Hear me, while I declare—'

'I don't know how to look a look of love,' he says all in a maze. 'Don't declare anything. I don't want to hear anybody.'

'That's right!' cries the old gentleman, (who it seems had been listening). 'That's right! Don't hear her. Emma shall marry you to-morrow, my friend, whether she likes it or not, and she shall marry Mr. Grig.'

'Gentlemen, these words were no sooner out of his mouth than Galileo Isaac Newton Flamstead (who it seems had been listening too) darts in, and spinning round and round, like a young giant's top, cries, 'Let her. Let her. I'm fierce; I'm furious. I give her leave. I'll never marry anybody after this—never. It isn't safe. She is the falsest of the false,' he cries, tearing his hair and gnashing his teeth; 'and I'll live and die a bachelor!'

'The little boy,' observed the Gifted, gravely, 'albeit of tender years, has spoken wisdom. I have been led to the contemplation of womankind, and will not adventure on the troubled waters of matrimony.'

'What!' says the old gentleman, 'not marry my daughter! Won't you, Mooney? Not if I make her? Won't you? Won't you?

'No,' says Mooney, 'I won't. And if anybody asks me any more, I'll run away, and never come back again.'

'Mr. Grig,' says the old gentleman, 'the stars must be obeyed. You have not changed your mind because of a little girlish folly—eh, Mr. Grig?'

'Tom, gentlemen, had had his eyes about him, and was pretty sure that all this was a device and trick of the waiting-maid, to put him off his inclination. He had seen her hiding and skipping about the two doors, and had observed that a very little whispering from her pacified the Salamander directly.

'So,' thinks Tom, 'this is a plot—but it won't fit.'

'Eh, Mr. Grig?' says the old gentleman.

'Why, sir,' says Tom, pointing to the crucible, 'if the soup's nearly ready—'

'Another hour beholds the consummation of our labours,' returned the old gentleman.

'Very good,' says Tom, with a mournful air. 'It's only for two months, but I may as well be the richest man in the world even for that time. I'm not particular. I'll take her, sir. I'll take her.'

'The old gentleman was in a rapture to find Tom still in the same mind, and drawing the young lady towards him by little and little, was joining their hands by main force, when all of a sudden, gentlemen, the crucible blows up with a great crash; everybody screams; the room is filled with smoke; and Tom, not knowing what may happen next, throws himself into a Fancy attitude, and says, 'Come on, if you're a man!' without addressing himself to anybody in particular.

'The labours of fifteen years!' says the old gentleman, clasping his hands and looking down upon he Gifted, who was saving the pieces, 'are destroyed in an instant!'—And I am told gentlemen, by the by, that this same philosopher's stone would have been discovered a hundred times at least, to speak within bounds, if it wasn't for the one unfortunate circumstance that the apparatus always blows up, when it's on the very point of succeeding.

'Tom turns pale when he hears the old gentleman expressing himself in this unpleasant effect, and stammers out that if it's quite agreeable to all parties, he would like to know exactly what has happened, and what change has really taken place in the prospects of that company.

'We have failed for the present, Mr. Grig,' says the old gentleman, wiping his forehead, 'and I regret it the more, because I have invested my neice's five thousand pounds in this glorious speculation. But don't be cast down,' he says, anxiously—'in another fourteen years, Mr. Grig—'

'Oh!' cries Tom, letting the young lady's hand fall. 'Were the stars very positive about this union, sir?'

'They were,' says the old gentlemen.

'I'm sorry to hear it,' Tom makes answer, 'for it's no go, sir.'

'No what?' cries the old gentleman.

'Go, sir,' says Tom, fiercely, 'I forbid the banns.' And with these words—which are the very words he used—he sat himself down in a chair, and, laying his head upon he table, thought with a secret grief what was to come to pass on that day two months.

'Tom always said, gentlemen, that that waiting-maid was the artfullest minx he had ever seen; and he left it in writing in this country when he went to colonise abroad, that he was certain in his own mind she and the Salamander had blown up the philosopher's stone on purpose, and to cut him out of his property. I believe Tom was in the right, gentlemen; but whether or no, she comes forward at this point, and says, 'May I speak, sir?' and the old gentleman answering, 'Yes, you may,' she goes on to say that 'the stars are no doubt quite right in every respect, but Tom is not the man.' And she says, 'Don't you remember, sir, that when the clock struck five this afternoon, you gave Master Galileo a rap on the head with your telescope, and told him to get out of the way?' 'Yes, I do,' says the old gentleman. 'Then,' says the waiting-maid, 'I say he's the man, and the prophecy is fulfilled.' The old gentleman staggers at this, as if somebody had hit him a blow on the chest, and cries, 'Ha! why, he's a boy!' Upon that, gentlemen, the Salamander cries out that he'll be twenty-one next Lady-day; and complains that his father has always been so busy with the surround which the earth revolves, that he has never taken any notice of the son that revolves round him; and that he hasn't had a new suit of clothes since he was fourteen; and that he wasn't even taken out of nankeen frocks and trowsers till he was quite unpleasant in 'em; and touches on a good many more family matters to the same purpose. To make a long story short, gentlemen, they all talk together, and cry together, and remind the old gentleman that as to the noble family, his own grandfather would have been Lord Mayor if he hadn't died at a dinner the year before; and they show him by all kinds of arguments that if the cousins are married, the prediction comes true every way. At last, the old gentleman, being quite convinced, gives in; and joins their hands; and leaves his daughter to marry anybody she likes; and they are all well pleased; and the Gifted as well as any of them.

'In the middle of this little family party, gentlemen, sits Tom all the while, as miserable as you like. But when everything else is arranged, the old gentleman's daughter says, that their strange conduct was a little device of the waiting-maid's to disgust the lovers he had chosen for 'em, and will he forgive her? and if he will, perhaps he might even find her a husband—and when she says that, she looks uncommon hard at Tom. Then the waiting-maid says that, oh dear! she couldn't bear Mr. Grig should think she wanted him to marry her; and that she had even gone so far as to refuse the last lamplighter, who was now a literary character (having set up as a bill-sticker;) and that she hoped Mr. Grig would not suppose she was on her last legs by any means, for the baker was very strong in his attentions at that moment, and as to the butcher, he was frantic. And I don't know how much more she might have said, gentlemen (for, as you know, that kind of young women are rare ones to talk,) if the old gentleman hadn't cut in suddenly, and asked Tom if he'd have her, with ten pounds to recompense him for his loss of time and disappointment, and as a kind of brute to keep the story secret.
